ASQUITH'S RESIGNATION IS RUMORED IN LONDON.

Britons Also Hear that Lloyd George May Quit to Force the Issue.

BY ARTHUR S. DRAPER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Premier Asquith had a prolonged audience with the King today, following which rumors spread over London, the chief of these having it that he had resigned and that Bonar Law had succeeded him temporarily, with David Lloyd George as the final choice for Prime Minister.

Lord Northcliffe in the Evening News reports that Mr. Lloyd George and his secretary are packing up preparatory to quitting the War Office, but this "out gingers" the "ginger group" organ—Reynolds Newspaper—controlled by Sir Henry Dalziel, a close friend of Mr. Lloyd George, which will say tomorrow:

"Mr. Lloyd George is entirely dissatisfied with the present conduct of the war, culminating in the failure adequately to assist Rumania, and his resignation is likely at any moment. If he resigns it means that he believes the opposition strong enough to overthrow Asquith. If he is wrong in this assumption he will be eliminated politically for some time."

Critical is the only word covering the situation here. Anything milder falls short of the truth. Since my dispatch of November 24, telling of the move to shelve Asquith, the opposition has gained much ground and now the stage is set for a tremendous political battle.

"Political battle," is really too undignified a term, this being really a struggle between two forces holding different views as to the methods necessary to attain the same ends—Britain's position in the world.

The first session of Parliament will see the initial test of strength. The opposition plan calls for a war council of five, including the Premier, Lloyd George, Bonar Law, Balfour and Carson, who would have supreme control.

If there were a chance of success with another man they would eliminate Asquith, but with Carson combining forces with Lloyd George and Bonar Law they think their hopes will be realized.

The country has reached a point where promises no longer satisfy. Too many have gone unfulfilled where delay and procrastination exasperate beyond measure, and where fearful results must follow unless the strongest course is pursued.

The present situation is due to a variety of causes. Submarine activities, food shortage, Rumania's plight, and the ever-growing lists of casualties serve to impress the people with the immensity of the undertaking they have pledged to see through.

Determination and confidence are as strong as ever, but Britain wants to "carry on." The present government is certainly as anxious to win as the opposition, but its terrible weight of responsibility makes for caution.

I have talked with many members

DIVINE SARAH HAS A COLD.

Cancels Her Wilmington Engagement Because of High Fever.

[DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WILMINGTON (Del.) Dec. 2.—Arriving here late this afternoon from Harrisburg to give a performance in the playhouse this evening, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt was taken ill at Hotel Du Pont and it was necessary to cancel the performance. Mme. Bernhardt was attended by her own private physician, who accompanies her and by Doctors W. H. Kraemer and R. E. Ellegood of this city. The physicians stated that madame was suffering from a severe cold which made it impossible for her to speak above a whisper and that her temperature was very high. They hoped, however, that she would be able to proceed to New York in the morning. One of the largest audiences in the history of the theater had assembled to see her performance, but it was to those who purchased tickets.

Freedom's Symbol.

PRESIDENT LIGHTS LIBERTY'S STATUE.

FLASHES SIGNAL WHICH TURNS ON ELECTRIC CURRENT.

Brilliant Display in New York Harbor Culminated Celebration of Installing System Which Now Lights Bartholdi's Masterpiece from Top to Base Nightly.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—President Wilson gave the wireless flash which bathed the Statue of Liberty in light at 6 o'clock tonight. Bartholdi's famous symbol of American freedom, which has been for thirty years a token of welcome to the United States to millions of immigrants from every land, will be illuminated every night hereafter from top to bottom. The necessary funds to install the lighting system were provided for by public subscriptions.

Grouped around the President on the yacht Mayflower, anchored off Bedloe's Island, as he flashed the signal which turned on the lights, were Mrs. Wilson, Jules J. Jusserand, Ambassador from France; Mme. Jusserand, high officials of the army and navy, and representatives of several nations.

"I light this statue," said the President, "with the thought that it may always stand as a symbol of our purpose to throw upon liberty, out of our own life as a nation, a light which shall reveal its dignity, its serene power, its benignant hope and spirit of guidance."

The President, speaking tonight at the banquet which was the culmination of the celebration, declared that he had thought for the last two years that "peace is going to come to the world only with liberty."

"The peace of the world," Mr. Wilson added, "is not going to be secured by the compacts of nations, but by the sympathies of men."

The President declared that the United States has a community of ideas with France, whose people presented Bartholdi's statue to the United States, because "one republic must love another."

The President said, in part:

"I would certainly be lacking in something if I did not express some of the things that have come into my thoughts as I have taken part in these ceremonies. There are many moving circumstances connected with this day, connected with the things it recalls, connected with the things it suggests.

"I was reflecting, as we saw the light stream upon that beautiful statue that its source was outside the statue, that it did not proceed from liberty, but proceeded from the light we were throwing upon liberty, and it occurred to me that after all it was a proper symbol of our life, because we can take to ourselves the dignity of liberty only as we illustrate the fact and the true spirit of liberty, and the only light that we can contribute to the illumination of the world is the light that will shine out of our life as a nation upon that conception and upon that image.

"There was a great responsibility in having adopted liberty as our ideal, because we must illustrate it in what we do. I was struck by the closing phrase of Mr. Pulitzer's admirable little speech. He said that there would come a day when it was perceived that the Goddess of Liberty will also be the Goddess of Peace, and throughout the last two years there has come more and more into my heart the conviction that peace is going to come to the world only with liberty.

"With all due and sincere respect for those who represent other forms of governments than ours, perhaps I may be permitted to say that peace cannot come so long as the destinies of men are determined by small groups, who make selfish choices of their own.

"It is very true, as more than one

RUMANIANS IN RETREAT ALL ALONG THE LINE.

Diversion of Slavs in the Carpathians Begins to Worry Berlin.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BUCHAREST (via London) Dec. 2, 8:05 p.m.—In the Dumbovitza Valley and in the region of Piteshti, Rumanian troops have retired before the invading Teuton forces, says the official statement issued by the War Office today. A violent battle, it is added, continues on the Glavatziotzu ad Niaslov rivers, west and southwest of Buacharest.

Attacks by the Roumanians in Dobrudja resulted in the reaching of the Bulgarian wire entanglements which, the statement declares, has been passed at some points.

The statement follows:

"Northern and northwestern fronts: On the western frontier of northern Moldavia there were attacks and artillery bombardments. Bad weather is hindering operations.

"In the Dumbovitza valley our troops retired toward the south.

"Western front: In the regon of Pitshti our troops have been attacked violently and were obliged to retire slightly. The violent combat on the Glavatziotzu and Niaslov rivers continues.

"Southern front: In Dobrudja we violently attacked the enemy's position and reached their wire entanglements which we passed at some points.

[BY WIRELESS AND A. P.]

BERLIN, Dec. 2 (via Sayville.)—The situation in Rumania continues to develop favorably for the Teutonic forces, according to this evening's announcement from the War Office.

The effect intended by the Russians in their attacks in the Carpathians—the relief of other fronts—has not been achieved, it is declares, the assaults on the Teutonic lines proving fruitless. The text of the announcement reads:

"It is officially reported nothing important has occurred on either the western or eastern front.

"In the Carpathians, renewed advances in an effort to relieve other fronts were again without success.

"The situation in Rumania is developing in our favor.

"Northwest of Monastir (Macedonian front) there has been violent artillery fire. A Bulgarian advance there repulsed the enemy."

MACEDONIA.

Attempts of Entente forces yesterday to advance on the Macedonian front resulted in failure, the War Office announces. The official report from this front follows:

"On the Macedonian front, advances of the Entente northwest of Monastir were again without success.

The new Russian movement in the Carpathians, along a front of 300 kilometers, is being carried on with great violence, according to the Overseas News Agency. The Russians are attempting to push back the army of Gen. Von Arz by strong pressure in order to penetrate once more Transylvania and menace Gen. Von Falkenhayn's army on the finak and rear.

In accordance with the plan, the Russian attacks are being directed principally against the passes leading from Moldavia to Transylvania, at the very points where Von Arz's army had driven back the Russians.

In conjunction with this operation, there have been attacks in the Ziota Lipa district and Narayuvka, which were repulsed by the Turkish troops on November 30, and attacks in the Ludova sector on November 26.

Further to the south, near Kirlibaba, in the Jacobeni district, southeast of Dorna Watra and between the Uzul and Oitus valleys, the Russians have delivered important attacks which have been repeated six times in one day, in spite of sanguinary losses.

The Russians, says the Overseas agency, were able to make no gain worth mentioning. It adds:

"The tenacity displayed by the Russians on the whole Carpathian front, with disregard for men and materials, gives importance to the

HUNDRED THOUSAND GONE, CASHIER'S HUNTED HERE.

Canadian Government's Search for Trusted Employee Who Plunged in Wheat and Vanished is Centered at Los Angeles Residence of Sick Wife and Small Son of Fugitive.

SEARCH for Frank S. Burgess, wanted at Winnipeg, Can., for the alleged embezzlement of $100,000 from the Dominion government, yesterday centered in Los Angeles. Detectives Cowan and Winn of the Central Police Station were detailed by Capt. Flammer and Lieut. Home to work with the Canadian authorities. The officers located Mrs. Burgess, wife of the wanted cashier, in a bungalow at No. 1641 Arapahoe street where, with a sister and her 11-year-old son, she was living in ignorance of her husband's flight.

Burgess, an expert accountant, 42 years of age, and for many years a trusted employee of the Canadian government and recently in complete charge of the government granaries and elevators at Winnipeg, has been missing two weeks. His books show a shortage of more than $100,000, the police say. He is said to have lost the greater part of the sum in bucking the grain market and was a well-known figure on the Winnipeg Stock Exchange. When wheat skyrocketed from $1.50 to the $2 mark, Burgess, is is alleged, fed in great sums of government money in an effort to protect his little fortune, that had been risked on a gamble that wheat would not go over the $1.60 mark.

SAID HE WAS IMMUNE.

Burgess was at one time employed in Columbus, O., in a responsible position, but left there following his marriage, to accept a position with a big construction company. He visited many parts of the world, handled millions of dollars of other people's money, and, in his own words, never felt a temptation to steal. He was immune, he said. The building of the C.N.R., the new railroad in the north of Canada, took the little family to the northern wilds and away from schools, so that Burgess gave up his position and took charge of the Dominion elevators at Winnipeg, to give his only son an education. Mrs. Burgess last evening told the story of their life in the Canadian city.

"Mr. Burgess is an exceptional man. An expert in figures, his services were always in demand. He had successfully resisted every ordinary temptation. He often told me he was immune. He said money other than that he earned had no temptation for him. He occasionally handled as much as $300,000 at a time for the Canadian government. He has witnessed the downfall of other men, trusted men who succumbed to the temptation for sudden riches.

"Mr. Burgess was speculating in wheat. When he made a killing he gave me a percentage of the money and, thank God, I saved it, or I would be without a cent. When the winter came on this year, I was in poor health and asked to come south. Mr. Burgess said it was all right. The last thing he said at the train when I left him two months ago, was that I was not to worry if wheat took an upward trend, as he had his fortune protected and that the price could not go high enough to wipe him out.

MAY BE PENNILESS.

"I am afraid his confidence in the stability of the market caused him to take small sums in an effort to save himself, believing the market was bound to turn. He may have gone deeper and deeper until there was no help. I feel he left Winnipeg without any money. In fact, I know he would not steal in the general acceptance of the word. If he embezzled, he did it in the hope of saving his little hoard of money.

"I heard from my husband two weeks ago by letter and later by wire. He said nothing in his letters of the trouble, other than to mention that the 'market went against him.' Not a hint of trouble, not a word of warning. He was too good a man to go wrong for a few dollars. He wanted us, his family, to be comfortable and was, perhaps bitten by the germ of ambitious

WILSON IN FAVOR OF EXTENDING LAW

TO CURB CONSPIRACIES AMONG FOOD-PRICE FIXERS.

Will Confer with Cabinet Members Today, then Formulate His Plan for Supplemental Speech to Congress After He has Delivered the Annual Message.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—After President Wilson has concluded his address before Congress Tuesday, it is possible he may deliver a brief address dealing with the high cost of living.

The President's plans on the subject are indefinite, and may not be matured until the last moment before he goes to Congress. It is known, however, that the administration considers the cost of living one of the most pressing questions before the country and that many of the President's closest advisers favor considering it in the legislative programme.

Thousands of petitions are pouring into the White House calling for some sort of relief, many of them demanding an embargo on food exports to Europe. They are regarded by officials as an indication of a strong trend of public opinion toward an embargo, but, it is understood, will not influence the administration in favor of it.

The course which the President is understood to favor is rather an extension of present laws to meet alleged conspiracies for cornering foods and price fixing. An extensive Federal investigation now is being conducted by United States attorneys in all the large cities, and recently United States Attorney Anderson at Boston was placed in general charge of this work.

President Wilson is expected to confer with some of the Cabinet members on the subject after he returns from New York tomorrow.

BRITISH PROMOTE MAJ.-GEN. FURSE.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Maj.-Gen. Sir Stanley B. Von Donop was today replaced as Master General of the Ordnance in the British army by Maj.-Gen. William T. Furse, a member of the General Staff.

Maj.-Gen. Von Donop was the subject of an acute controversy last year when the lack of guns and munitions was such a serious problem. Viscount Haldane, former Secretary for War, defended Maj.-Gen. Von Donop against a charge that his department had absolutely broken down and described him as indispensable. David Lloyd George, then Minister of Munitions, later said Viscount Haldane's speech was "incomplete and inaccurate."

VILLA MENACES SUPPLIES FOR PERSHING'S ARMY.

Storekeepers Who Sell to United States Troops Threatened with Death.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO, Tex., Dec. 2.—A rumor spread through El Paso tonight that three Americans, Charles Elmendorf, Harry Harries and George Brittingham, have been killed in Chihuahua by Villa troops. Its source, however, proved hard for relatives and friends to trace.

Warren Brittingham, a son, said he had been unable to verify the reported death of his father, and Frank Elmendorf said that he had nothing tangible as to the fate of his brother, Charles.

Three Americans were seen at the Mexican Central station in Chihuahua city when the last refugee train left that city for Sauz Monday, United States military authorities announced today after interviewing refugees who were declared to be reliable.

One of these Americans was said to have been George Brittingham, who was last seen on the railroad station platform, but who did not board the train, the refugees added. This was the last seen of the trio, it was said.

The refugees reported to the military authorities they saw the Americans standing beside the railroad track when the Villa bandits fired into the train as it was leaving for Sauz. When the firing began, the refugees said, the engineer "opened up" his throttle and did not wait for the Americans to board the train.

The military authorities also announced that fully eighty Chinese were killed by the Villa bandits, according to these refugees.

COLUMBUS (N. M.) Dec. 2.—Villa agents have warned the storekeepers and residents of the section of Western Chihuahua occupied by American troops that they must leave the country or be killed and their property confiscated when Gen. Pershing withdraws his forces, civilian truck drivers reported upon their arrival from the field headquarters yesterday.

Farmers, storekeepers and even home owners, they said, were trying to dispose of their possessions for fear they will be confiscated by Villa after the American troops retire.

BATTLE WITH VILLISTAS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

QUERETARO (Mex.) Dec. 2.—Gen. Francisco Murguia reported to Gen. Carranza today he had routed a band of Villa followers, numbering 2500 men, and had pursued them about twelve miles toward Chihuahua city. The general reported he was continuing his advance toward Chihuahua city today.

DETAILS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Dec. 2.—A message received from Gen. Obregon at Mexico City late today gave details of a battle between Gen. Murguia's forces and the Villa troops about thirty miles south of Chihuahua city. The battle took place yesterday, starting at 10 o'clock in the morning and lasting six hours. The Villa men, the message said, were defeated.

The message said the bandit force fled in disorder, some toward Santa Isabel and others toward Chihuahua city. The Carranza troops pursued them four hours, capturing three machine guns, many rifles and some horses.

Many prisoners were taken, the message adding that they were executed. The dispatch said Villa's losses were heavy.

Among Carranza officers reported killed was Col. Candelario Garza. The Villa bandits numbered 2500, according to prisoners captured.

Gen. Obregon's message, which was received by way of Eagle Pass, Tex., contained this account of the fight from Gen. Murguia, sent from the latter's camp today:

"My advance guards came into contact with those of the bandit Villa at 10 o'clock today and, after a fight of six hours' duration, the enemy completely disorganized, fled in disorder, part heading for Santa Isabel and others for Chihuahua. Our pursuit was followed for twelve miles over the mountains. We captured three machine guns and a large quantity of armament and many saddled cavalry horses, besides a large number of prisoners, who were executed on the spot.

"The losses of the enemy were heavy, but no account could be made of them, as we have left the field. I regret to state that Col. Candelario Garza was killed in action and other officers were wounded. The names and details I shall send later, together with the losses in the ranks.

"The action was entirely over by 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

"The enemy numbered, according to prisoners, 2500 men, who left Chihuahua yesterday with the purpose of intercepting our advance.

"After reorganizing my forces I am continuing my advance to Chihuahua, expecting to arrive at an early hour tomorrow.

Neutrality.

CALLS ALLIED DEMAND BLOW AT SOVEREIGNTY.

Charge Vouros of Greek Legation Delivers a Note to the State Department Characterizing Entente Methods as Serious Infringement of Rights and Recounts the Painful Circumstances Surrounding Suffering People.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—A note denouncing as a "serious infringement of sovereign rights" the allied demand for surrender of Greek arms and ammunition to the Anglo-French expedition at Saloniki, and pleading for the sympathetic understanding of the United States in the "painful circumstances" surrounding the Greek government, was delivered to the State Department today by A. Vouros, charge of the Greek legation.

The communication sets forth at length the efforts of Greece to retain neutral and gives notice that the Greek government "has rejected and will continue to reject, this last demand." No official explanation of the causes which led the government to recede from that decision has reached Washington, but from the strong language of the note, officials infer that extreme pressure must have been exerted before the arms and ammunition were given up.

During his visit to the State Department, Charge Vouros talked over the whole Greek situation with Counselor Polk, but neither had anything to say regarding the conference. It is understood that communications similar to those addressed to the United States have gone to all neutral governments and that the step was intended primarily to create a proper understanding among neutral peoples of the difficulties in which Greece has found herself.

As presented by the charge, the communication was in the form of a copy of a note handed to American Minister Droppers at Athens on November 28 and signed by Acting Foreign Minister Zalocostas.

TEXT OF NOTE.

The communication as delivered to the State Department was in French. A translation of the full text follows:

"From the beginning of the European war the Greek government, conscious of its duties for the defense of the national interests and of its responsibility toward the country, had, after an exhaustive examination of the situation, come to the decision that Greece ought not to enter the bloody struggle in which almost all Europe was engaged. The Greek government, in holding to neutrality, had in mind the abandonment of this policy if at any given moment it should come to the conviction that, however great were the sacrifices and the dangers of a war, it would serve the national aspirations.

"Unfortunately it has not been possible for us, up to this moment, to obtain the necessary guarantees that Greece, in entering into the European conflict, would not be going to inevitable destruction.

"In remaining neutral the Greek

WILSON'S VILLA CHASE HITS TREASURY HARD.

With Bandits Ever Getting Worse, Big Job is Still Before Us.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 2.—The ravages of "Peace with Mexico" might be mistaken for the ravages of war by the undiscriminating, according to figures which, in the course of a week's patient endeavor, I have extracted from the War Department.

The activity of the resurrected Villa, who now is threatening President Wilson's punitive expedition, indicates that the United States has barely made a start on its campaign "To take Villa dead or alive," yet this initial effort already has cost the nation approximately $100,000,000, practically disrupted the National Guard, caused the death of sixty officers and privates and the retirement and furlough of hundreds of others for disability.

I am making these facts public against the wishes of the administration, which is averse to subjecting the cost of "peace with Mexico" to that "pitiless publicity" once advocated by the President. The War Department was particularly interested in suppressing the facts concerning the ravages of peace among the officers of the regular army. When I inquired of the commanding officer having jurisdiction of the matter I was informed that "only two or three" army officers had been retired from the service because of physical disability originating in disease or injury while in Mexico with the Pershing expedition or on border duty.

After several days' investigation, however, I am in possession of the names of twenty regular army officers retired from the service for disability between May 23 and October 11.

TEN OFFICERS DEAD.

Ten regular army officers have been killed in action or have died from wounds or disease in Mexico and on the border since May 14.

Leaves of absence for sickness or other disability were granted thirty-one regular army officers up to November 21. Twelve leaves of absence were extended.

In the National Guard 459 officers were allowed to resign for various causes after they reached the border. Of these 117 were physically disabled. The remainder were allowed to resign because they had families dependent upon them. The States in which there were the greatest number of resignations were New York, 85; Illinois, 26; Alabama, 26; Pennsylvania, 24; Iowa, 22; Texas, 19; Kentucky, 19; Georgia, 17; Michigan, 16; Connecticut, 15; Virginia, 14.

So many leaves of absence for sickness and other physical disability were granted to National Guard officers that the War Department has been unable to tabulate the figures. These leaves were several hundred in number.

These figures on physical disability and the border forces represent only the most serious cases among the officers. The number of enlisted men who were killed, who died of wounds or disease and who were stricken with illness is several times greater than the number of officers.

Altogether the figures indicate that conditions affecting the health and welfare of the troops in Mexico and on the border were considerably worse than represented by the War Department. Army officers say that the percentage of physical disability is "rather high," for troops not actually engaged in warfare.

EXPEDITION EXPENSE.

The extraordinary expenditures on the Pershing expedition alone have now reached a total of $15,000,000, the greater part of this amount having been spent on additional equipment and the establishment and maintenance of a line of communication that once reached 400 miles into Mexico.

More than $50,000,000 has been expended on the mobilization and equipment of the guard and several large items of expense are still unaccounted for. Army officers say that $100,000,000 is a conservative estimate of the outlay on the punitive expendition and the defense of the border since the Columbus raid last March.

The Vera Cruz expedition, which failed to compel Huerta to salute the flag, cost $12,000,000, and after that the government spent several millions more in getting Americans out of Mexico. With conditions in Northern Mexico getting worse instead of better there is no telling when there will be a deduction of the direct cost of Mexican anarchy to the American people.

Changeable.

Renewed Strength of Bandit may Prove an Embarrassing Factor to Administration—Gen. Murguia to Make Every Effort to Recapture Chihuahua—Wilson Awaits Protocol, Now in Carranza's Hands.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—While they wait for Gen. Carranza to accept or reject the protocol signed by the joint commission at Atlantic City, administration officials are giving much attention to every report relating to the activities of Villa and to rebel movements in other parts of Mexico.

Additional information reaching the State and War Departments today tended to confirm the story of Villa's capture of Chihuahua city, as related by refugees at the border, but none of the dispatches indicated that the bandit leader was moving northward to attack Juarez.

MAY PROVE EMBARRASSING.

Officials are frank in their admissions that the renewed strength of Villa may prove an embarrassing factor in view of the probable resumption of conferences by the joint commission that drafted the protocol providing for conditional withdrawal of Gen. Pershing's troops. It is realized that a successful attack by Villa on Gen. Murguia, now advancing from the south, might lead to uncontested Villa control of the city of Chihuahua and other towns of the State and present a most embarrassing situation for the United States.

All reports received here, however, indicate that Gen. Murguia will make every effort to recapture Chihuahua, and the opinion of the army men is that he should have little difficulty in doing so. It is assumed that Villa's supply of ammunition must have been materially reduced by his five days of fighting against Gen. Trevino, and it is regarded as logical and in line with Villa's tactics that he will evacuate Chihuahua after having removed into the hills such supplies as he can secure. The department reports indicate that a considerable portion of Trevino's force joined Villa after the Chihuahua battle.

OPERATIONS OF DIAZ.

Villa's success in the north has prompted officials to study with more anxiety reports of revolutionary movements in other parts of the country. The operations of Gen. Felix Diaz in the extreme south of Mexico have been extended somewhat, and information has reached here that he and his agents have made earnest efforts to secure the co-operation of Villa and other rebel leaders who have been conducting independent operations.

Between Mexico City and Vera Cruz, official dispatches say, only interrupted railroad traffic exists, the Mexican Railway having been repeatedly cut in the last two weeks. At one time that line was broken at more than ten places. Farther north, in the oil-producing region, Manuel Palaez, who has held a considerable territory for more than a year, has increased his influence and, according to official information, is negotiating with Diaz for joint action. Between Tampico and San Luis Potosi, the Cedillo brothers are reported to have adopted more active methods in preventing the operation of railroads over which is moved much of the oil needed by Carranza for the operation of his trains.

AS TO THE PROTOCOL.

It was believed tonight that by Monday word might be received of the decision of Carranza regarding the Atlantic City protocol. Alberto J. Pani, the Mexican commissioner who carried the document to Queretaro, was in Mexico City today, but it is known that he placed the signed copy in the hands of Gen. Carranza before leaving Queretaro.

THE LOS ANGELES ADVERTISING SCORE.

In printing the advertising records of all the daily and Sunday newspapers in Los Angeles every day The Times does not attempt to mislead or deceive its readers by using figures that concern only certain kinds of advertising. It boldly publishes the figures of all classes of advertising printed in each local newspaper.

The juggling of figures is left to those newspapers that dare not tell the whole truth and that have not the courage or fairness to make honest comparisons.

For the week ending Sunday, November 26, the Los Angeles newspapers published the following number of lines of advertising (300 agate lines make one column:)

London Women and the Great War.

Lady Darnley
Mrs. Philip Law Smith. Lady Mayoress.
Mrs. Sydney Fairbairn.

Their best for their country.

The new Lady Mayoress of London is the daughter of the Lord Mayor. She saw the first clash of the Sinn Fein rebellion in Ireland where she was visiting at the time. Shots were fired at her automobile. The Countess of Darnley, like Lady Fairbairn, is a war-working Trojan. Her marriage recently was the culmination of an Australian romance.

Crowns and Coronets.

LADY MAYORESS' BERTH IS NOT AN EASY ONE.

Onerous Duties of the Daughter of the Executive of London—Her Many Privileges Make up for the Hard Work Required of Her—She had Exciting Experiences During the Sinn Fein Rebellion in Dublin.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Nov. 10.—London's new lady Mayoress, Mrs. Philip Law Smith, is not, as usual the wife, but the daughter of the new Lord Mayor. Lady Dunn, whose husband, Col. Sir William Dunn, has just entered upon his year of office as titular, though not real, chief executive of this metropolis, is unfortunately too great an invalid to play the part she would like in the hospitalities of the Mansion House, the Lord Mayor's official residence. Accordingly she has asked that her daughter, Mrs. Philip Law Smith, may be regarded as official lady Mayoress, and it is the latter who will discharge the duties of that position; duties that are onerous enough, even in this war time, when every form of entertainment is being curtailed to the last degree, to send any but a woman with a vigorous constitution into a nursing home within a month or two.

Luckily, Mrs. Philip Law Smith, besides being handsome and stately, is robust enough to flinch from not even the most taxing social and official round, and she has demonstrated, quite recently, that she has strong nerves, too. Her husband, Judge Philip Law Smith, K.C., is a distinguished member of the Irish bench, as well as a champion golfer and the proud holder of a "scratch" medal won at Biarritz.

By an unfortunate coincidence his father-in-law, the new Lord Mayor of London, arrived for his initial visit to his daughter and her husband in Ireland on the first day of the Sinn Fein rebellion—a pretty warm welcome for a newcomer! Mrs. Law Smith went to meet Sir William in her motor car, and was "held up" in it by Pearce, the Sinn Fein leader, in person. The automobile was appropriated—it was the first one commandeered by the rebels, and later was used as a barricade! When, eventually, the judge got it back, it cost him $750 to restore it for use.

On her way home after this exciting adventure, the new "official" lady Mayoress was for a short time under fire, but escaped without injury. Her husband, who was called to the Irish bar in 1887, has been County Court judge of the city and County of Limerick since 1908 and is Senior Crown Prosecutor of the northwest circuit. His twin brother, Dr. Alfred J. Smith, is one of the most celebrated of Dublin's extremely competent medical men.

Althought the lady Mayoress is not looked upon as holding an official position, there are few important functions of the year from which she is absent. When the Lord Mayor and the corporation attend anywhere in state, the lady Mayoress proceeds thither in a private carriage, but for ordinary occasions, such as visiting institutions, attending receptions, laying corner-stones, etc., the Lord Mayor and the lady Mayoress drive together in a semi-state civic coach, accompanied usually by their chaplain, an official also chosen annually.

EARL HOES TURNIPS.

The Earl and Countess of Darnley, whose marriage was the culmination of a famous Anglo-Australian romance, are both war-working like trojans. His Lordship, with characteristic energy, has recently applied himself lustily to the hoeing of turnips, in the stead of one of his farm hands who has been called up, but he abandoned this unwonted occupation for awhile, the other day, in favor of the quite as unaccustomed one, for a nobleman, of acting as a salesman at the Rochester market.

Of course, this was no ordinary sale, but one in aid of the British Farmers' Red Cross Fund and the Rochester and Gravesend Hospitals, and, as the result of the strenuous labors of the earl and other prominent folk in the neighborhood, over $5000 was realized. The Countess of Darnley, meanwhile, has been equally active in the same direction, and did great things with her Australian flower stall at the Good Luck Fair held in London, the other day, where she was assisted by her two daughters-in-law, Lady Clifton and the Hon. Mrs. Noel Bligh. Herself an Australian, Lady Darnley had, as other helpers, two Anzac soldiers and a stuffed kangaroo. Her stall was decorated with foliage and flowers from Cobham Hall, the beautiful Tudor home of the Darnleys, in Kent, which, like Lord Dunraven's Cornish Castle and many other historic mansions, has lately become a convalescent home—in this case for "Anzac" officers.

The Earl of Darnley, who is 57, was, as the Hon. Ivo Bligh, one of the mightiest of English cricketers.

In one eventful day, this week, the wedding bells pealed out for no less than five notable society joinings

REFORM PLANS OF CARRANZA.

To Conserve Liberal Spirit of Old Constitution.

Would Guarantee Fair Trial to All Prisoners.

New Divorce Law Advocated by the First Chief.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

QUERETARO, Friday, Dec. 1 (via Mexico City, Dec. 2.)—In his address before the Constitutional Congress here tonight Gen. Carranza outlined the reforms he hoped to see embodied in the constitution. He said, in part:

"The constitution of 1857 was the result of a great upheaval, but it proclaimed only the general principles of reform without putting them into practical form so that it is not possible to administer the government with this constitution. The history of the country gives ample data to demonstrate this.

"I promise to conserve the liberal spirit of the old constitution so that the new reforms will merely eliminate the dead wood and strike out articles put in by former governments for personal advantage.

GUARANTEE LIBERTY.

"Human liberty must be guaranteed to prevent the government from taking advantage of the excuse of maintaining peace in order to commit crimes. The old constitution was not strong enough to do this, as the liberty of the individual was at the mercy of executives. I hope the new constitution will provide severe penalties for wrongdoing on the part of public officials.

"Judges, heretore only the tools of Governors, should have the power to investigate and punish wrongdoing of Governors. Guarantees for prisoners accused of crimes heretofore have been worthless. Prisoners have been at the mercy of judges and third degree methods. They should be allowed bonds and a limit should be fixed to the time trials may be delayed. Good lawyers should be provided for the indigent and no arrests should be made without evidence sufficient to justify them.

OLD CONSTITUTION.

"The old constitution provided for the right of the government to occupy property for public benefit without the consent of the owners by paying an indemnity for the same. This is sufficient to allow the government to take large estates and distribute them among small owners so that the only reform necessary in that part of the old law is to provide that condemnation may be only by executive authority and that judges may deal only with indemnity.

"I ask you to consider whether it is necessary to have every foreigner who obtains title to real property resign treaty rights with respect to such property and conform to Mexican laws.

"One object of the new reforms is to assist labor and we should set minimum wages and maximum hours.

"I advocate a divorce law which will place the family on the basis of love, not pecuniary interests. The nationality of children born in Mexico to foreigners should be clearly defined.

QUESTION OF VOTE.

"You must consider whether the vote should be given to all or limited by educational or property qualifications. I think the vote should go to all, but it should be taken from those making wrong use of it or those who look with indifference on the affairs of the republic.

"Public instruction must receive attention because knowledge ensures against either anarchy or dictatorship. On the organization of the executive power will depend that the legislative branch shall not become an instrument of the executive. Free discussion without following instructions of the executive or of Governors must be assured the legislators, but they must not be given sufficient power to curb the executive in proper execution of his rights. A parliamentary regime in which the executive is a figurehead and the Cabinet is selected by Congress is not good for Latin-American nations. The people still need a strong government, which is not the same as a despotic government. Direct election of the President will give strength to the government and the nation and the President will not be at the mercy of the legislative power. The best argument against a parliamentary regime is the object lesson furnished by the United States.

"I advocate the elimination of the office of Vice-President, providing that the succession to the Presidency in the event of temporary or permanent absence shall be decided by Congress.

"There should be absolute independence of the judicial power."

KILL TWENTY-SIX, ROB PASSENGERS.

VILLA BANDITS ATTACK A TRAIN AT TALIA.

Two Constitutionalist Generals Among the Victims—Alleged Manifesto from Outlaw Orders All to Join His Cause or Suffer Death.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

LAREDO (Tex.) Dec. 2.—Twenty-six persons, including two Constitutionalist generals, were killed by bandits, alleged adherents of Francisco Villa, in an attack on a train at Talia, between Terreon and Paredon, November 28, according to reliable information received tonight. The bandits were under command of Fortunato Salinas.

The names of the two dead generals were given as Toribio de los Santos and Gabriel Calzado.

After the guard had been killed, according to the information, Salinas lined up and robbed every passenger on the train. He then read what purported to be the latest Villa "manifesto," as follows:

"First—All loyal Mexicans must join the Villa cause, and those who refuse will be considered traitors and immediately shot.

"Second—Railroads are to be considered property of the Mexican people, and all rights foreigners may heretofore have had are declared void.

"Third—Foreigners after twenty-five years' residence in Mexico must become citizens of the republic or be expelled.

"Fourth—No American citizen can aquire property rights or enjoy any privileges accruing to Mexican citizens."

All the dead are understood to have been Mexicans.

MAX WEBER DENIES VILLA SLEW GERMANS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

JUAREZ (Mex.) Dec. 2.—German Consul Max Weber today officially denied a report in circulation here and in El Paso that three German subjects had been killed by Villa bandits in Chihuahua city. He said he had interviewed many refugees and all said they knew nothing about the shooting of any foreigners except Chinese.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The following statement was given out by the Russian Embassy today:

"The Rusian Ambassador has been instructed to inform officially all those whom it may concern that the American-Russian Corporation and Lord Rotherham have no authority whatever from the Imperial government to place Russian 5 per cent. bonds on the American market.

ACCEPT NEW YORK OFFER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BORDEAUX (France) Dec. 2, 5:45 a.m.—After hearing a report from Mayor Charles Gruet, the City Council has decided to accept the offer of a group of American bankers of a loan of $25,000,000. The loan will run for three years.

The loan to the city of Bordeaux is the fourth municipal loan arranged by French cities in this country since the war began. In September, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., announced an arrangement had been completed for a loan of $50,000,000 to the city of Paris. The same bankers undertook similar liens on behalf of the cities of Bordeaux, Lyons and Marseilles. In the case of the latter three cities it was stated that the total amount would be $60,000,000. The Paris loan was for five years.

BRITISH ARE SKEPTICAL.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Morning Post today refers to a Japanese loan as the operation to which it alluded to when, in dealing with the American Federal Reserve Board's warning against investing in foreign treasury notes, it said it believed details had been concluded by which a large amount of dollar credit shortly would come into British possession for three years.

The newspaper says this loan immediately will place $50,000,000 at the service of Great Britian in the United States and that it probably constitutes the very cheapest form of obtainig dollar credits in this country at the present time. It contends that this was the real reason for the loan, which was not made because Great Britian needed more money to conduct the war, this being obtainable at home.

The Morning Post incidentally thinks it possible this operation will check the flow of gold from the United States to Japan which it believes desirable. The newspaper adds that the whole operation is exceptionally interesting, showing a remarkable improvement in the economic condition of Japan and the close co-operation existing between Great Britain and her allies in finance as well as in other war operations.

FINANCING DIFFICULT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 2, 11 a.m.—It is believed here that exchange rates will not be affected by the withdrawal of the sale of short term treasury bils in the United States, but that shipments of gold and securities will be resorted to and that there may be a further issue of Japanese exchequer bonds.

Sixty-fourth Congress.

SHORT SESSION OF CONGRESS.

High Cost of Living to be Discussed in Full.

Unfinished Business Awaits President's Programme.

May Select Western Senator as Clarke's Successor.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Congress began arriving in the capital in force tonight for the opening session Monday.

Returning members talk of new issues, but it is the general opinion that little other than appropriation bills can be passed in the short session. Surface indications give assurances that the high cost of living will be, at least, a subject of many proposals, ranging from an embargo on food exports to official investigation of alleged conspiracies to inflate prices.

While Congressmen appreciate that railroad problems, conservation legislation, immigration, suffrage, national prohibition, corrupt practice measures and other unfinished business will be pressed for consideration, and efforts may be made to investigate alleged election frauds and expenditures of the national campaign, those subjects at present are overshadowed by the high prices of food and measures for relief.

For an outline of the administration programme, members are awaiting the address of President Wilson before a joint session Tuesday. Because of the crush of business House leaders, among them Speaker Clark, are advocating abandonment of the usual holiday recess and urging night sessions at least twice a week.

Among returning Democratic Senators the question of selection of a new President pro tempore is one of absorbing interest. A caucus probably will be held early next week. Among Senators being mentioned to succeed the late Senator Clarke of Arkansas are Pomerene of Ohio, Saulsbury of Delaware, James of Kentucky, Walsh of Montana and Bankhead of Alabama.

Some southern Senators have urged the selection of a western Democrat in recognition of the Democratic triumph at the recent election in that section. Majority Leader Kern of Indiana, chairman of the caucus, is expected to reach Washington tomorrow, after which formal arrangements will be made for choosing the President pro tempore. Speculation regarding the majority leadership already is general, in view of the defeat of Senator Kern for re-election. Southern Senators are sounding out their colleagues on behalf of Senator Martin of Virginia. Senator Walsh is being championed by western Democrats.

That the Senate early will be urged to consider the corrupt-practices bill and to investigate expenditures of the last campaign was assured today by an announcement of Senator Owen of Oklahoma that he would demand early consideration of his corrupt-practices bill.

Chairman Webb of the House Judiciary Committee began working for passage of his nation-wide prohibition and export trade bills. He declared he did not believe the suffrage amendment would be passed by the present House.

JENKINS'S WIDOW SUES KEYSTONE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 2.—Mrs. Jennie McMurray Jenkins, widow of Leslie Browning Jenkins, "movie" photographer killed at the Grand Prix automobile race at Santa Monica, November 18, when the car of Lewis Jackson ran amuck, filed an application today with the State Industrial Accident Commission for compensation. The Keystone Film Company is named the defendant.

According to the application, a coroner's jury held that Jenkins met his death through inadequate regulation of the course.

When Victor H. Cheateux, a "powder man" in Los Angeles, reached over to place a lighted fuse in a bucket of water, as was his custom, to retard the action of the fuse, there followed an explosion. Someone had substituted powder for water in the bucket. Cheateux today was awarded $1688.40 compensation for the burns he received.

wealth, just like the others whom he pitied."

Mrs. Burgess stated she had no idea where he is. She said she knew that after he had time to think over the situation he would probably surrender, if the charges are true, as he knows the Canadian government is a relentless enemy and will never give up the search or remit a jot of the penalty.

A brother in Ohio and another in Illinois are her only kin to whom she can appeal and as she is in very poor health, she cannot seek employment to support herself at this time.

Detective Cergeant Chapman, who is directly in charge of the search for Burgess in this city, stated last night that in his opinion Burgess would not risk a visit to his family here. Northern advices, however, state Burgess did start for Los Angeles and the Canadian detectives are searching here for a trace of the missing man.

BRAZIL MAY ACQUIRE GERMAN VESSELS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

RIO JANEIRO (Brazil) Dec. 2.—Negotiations have been begun by the Brazilian government for the acquisition of the German merchant vessels in Brazilian ports, it was brought out in debate in the Chamber of Deputies today.

Thirty-eight German and four Austrian merchant vessels are in Brazilian ports, their estimated value being between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000.

OUCH! RUB OUT RHEUMATIC PAIN

Rub pain, soreness, stiffness, sciatica right out with "St. Jacobs Oil."

Count fifty! Pain gone.

Rheumatism is "pain only." Not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Stop drugging! Rub the misery right away! Apply soothing, penetrating "St. Jacob's Oil" directly upon the "tender spot," and relief comes instantly. "St. Jacob's Oil" is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints and cannot burn or discolor the skin.

Limber up! Stop complaining! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacob's Oil" at any drug store, and in just a moment you'll be free from pain, soreness, stiffness and swelling. Don't suffer! Relief awaits you. "St. Jacobs Oil" has relieved millions of rheumatism sufferers in the last half century, and is just as good for sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, backache, sprains and swellings.

MICHIGAN GENERAL DENIES MUTINY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Dec. 2.—Brig.-Gen. John P. Kirk, commander of the Michigan Infantry Brigade, denied today that mutiny had occurred among the soldiers of the Thirty-second Michigan Infantry as reported here last night.

Curls and Waves

Moisten hair with atalpa water if you want curls and waves to last and look natural.

Girls! Try this! Before curling or waving your hair with pins, papers or a heated iron, just moisten each strand with atalpa water and you will be delighted how natural the curls and waves appear and how long they last in spite of wind, dampness or perspiration. A few ounces of atalpa water will cost very little at any drug store and there is nothing better to help retain the curls and waves or to soften, gloss or fluff the hair and to make it look thick and abundant.

TRY THIS FOR A COLD—IT'S FINE

"Pape's Cold Compound" ends severe colds or grippe in few hours.

You can end grippe and break up a severe cold either in head, chest, body or limbs, by taking a dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" every two hours until three doses are taken.

It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages in the head, stops nasty discharge or nose running, relieve sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffing! Ease your throbbing head—nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only 25 cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice and causes no inconvenience. Be sure you get the genuine.

PROTEST USING STATE'S MONEY.

Irate Citizens Say Potato King Can Get It.

Claim Funds in Sacramento Banks Aid Corner.

Charge Combine Keeps Prices up with Tax Deposits.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 2.—Gov. Johnson was appealed to this morning by irate Sacramento citizens to put a stop to the use of State tax money in speculating in California foodstuffs. The Governor was informed in a written memorial that certain banks were borrowing money from the State Treasury at a rate of two and one-half per cent. and using the money to effect a corner in the Sacramento Valley potato crop.

Warehouses in Sacramento are now laden with potatoes held in storage while they are selling at retail for 4 cents a pound. The big wholesalers are all in the combine that keeps the market short and the price up. Most of the potatoes are owned by George Shima, the potato king. The protestants allege several banks in the Sacramento Valley are behind Shima and they are borrowing money from the State at a very low rate of interest, and using the taxpayers' money to corner potatoes, rice, flour and beans. In the memorial to the Governor the assertion is made that $2,000,000 of State money is now so employed.

These protestants figure that among the manifold State commissions there ought to be one at least that could intervene to stop the cornering of necessities of life with State funds.

State Treasurer Richardson asserted this afternoon the amount of the State money held by Sacramento banks is greatly exaggerated in the memorial. He said not more than $600,000 is loaned to the Sacramento banks and that the amount is less than six months ago.

"We loan the money under a constitutional mandate," said the Treasurer, "as long as the security is sufficient we have not the right to question the use to which the money is put. Shima is immensely wealthy and would not have to depend upon the Sacramento banks to finance his potato corner."

DREDGER'S CAPTAIN GRANTED DIVORCE.

SAN FRANCISCO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 2.—On the strength of corroborated testimony to the effect that his wife had registered at a hotel in Martinez as the wife of another man, Capt. Herman T. Payne, master of a government dredger Chinook on the Columbia River, was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce by Judge Morgan today, from Mrs. Julia Payne. The decree was secured on a cross-complaint to a suit for divorce filed by Mrs. Payne, in which she charged cruelty.

W. J. Metzner, a promoter of street carnivals, was named by Capt. Payne as co-respondent. Payne said that during November of last year, while he was engaged on the Columbia River, his wife and Metzner traveled about this State together, as man and wife. He specifically named the Martinez Hotel, in Martinez, as one of the places where the pair stopped. J. W. Stanton, proprietor of the hotel, and his wife both corroborated Capt. Payne's testimony.

Under the terms of a property settlement, reached out of court, Mrs. Payne is given a twenty-acre almond ranch near Arbuckle, where the couple formerly lived, while Capt. Payne receives the balance of the community property, consisting of improved realty in Arbuckle and this city.

ALCOHOL DRINKERS FILL PORTLAND JAIL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Dec. 2.—Dist.-Atty. Walter H. Evans announced here today that next week he would file injunction suits, asking that Portland drug stores be prohibited from selling ethyl alcohol without prescriptions.

Misuse of alcohol purchased presumably for external use, has [illegible] Portland jails since the proh[illegible] laws went into effect, poli[illegible] and two men have died fr[illegible] effects.

MRS. ROSE GRIGSBY DIES AT STOCKTON.

STOCKTON, Dec. 2.—Mrs. Rose Grigsby, for many years prominent in both State and county W.C.T.U. work, died late last night at a private hospital here.

Several months ago Mrs. Grigsby was hurt in an automobile accident in Sacramento, and was barely recovered from her injuries, when, about a month ago, she fell from a chair while adjusting a window curtain in her home. In the fall her right hip was fractured and she received internal injuries.

Funeral services will be held Monday morning from the Central Methodist Church, in which deceased was an active worker.

STATE HEALTH BOARD STOPS WATER PERMIT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 2.—The State Board of Health revoked today a temporary permit granted to the West San Joaquin Water Company several months ago, to supply water to the town of Los Banos, Merced county. The permit was granted on condition that the company install a filtration and chlorination system at once to purify the water. This condition was not complied with, according to the Board of Health. It is considered probable that the State Railroad Commission will be asked to compel the water company to supply Los Banos with pure water.

CAPTAIN RESIGNS AFTER A MUTINY.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE.]

HONOLULU (T. H.) Dec. 2.—Capt. R. McKinnon resigned command of the Japanese freighter Gozan Maru today and was replaced by Capt. E. L. Tindall, recently engaged in interisland trade here. No charges will be preferred against the munitions crew which kept Capt. McKinnon in hot water on his voyage here from Antofogasta, Chile, it was decided today, as their alleged offense was committed while in the latter port.

It previously had been decided to deport the members of the crew, who were Jamaica negroes shipped to replace a deserting crew of Japanese.

THREE SUBMARINES TO SAN PEDRO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, Dec. 2.—The submarines H-1, H-2 and H-3, convoyed by the mother ship Cheyenne, left for Port Angeles and Neah Bay yesterday, whence they will proceed, after several days of tests, to San Pedro, Cal.

The cruiser Pueblo, formerly the Colorado, sailed today for San Francisco and San Diego. It is expected she will be ordered to patrol duty on the West Coast of Mexico.

NAVAL COMMISSION IS IN THE NORTH.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2.—Having established headquarters in a local hotel, the Commission on Navy Yards and Stations, now here in search of sites for aviation experiment and practice locations, apparently settled down for a stay of some length today.

Rear-Admiral James M. Helm, ranking officer of the commission, would only say that Congress's instructions called for a report on December 1, 1916, or as soon thereafter as possible, and that he and his fellow-officers were doing all in their power to expedite their work.

Much more time was needed, he said. A corps of clerks and secretaries were busy today handling a large array of government maps and data concerning San Francisco Bay and contiguous waters.

Having already visited other California ports, after its tour of the Atlantic Coast, the commission will travel to Oregon and Washington points when through here.

ESPEE SECTION HANDS QUIT WORK.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2.—Section hands on the Southern Pacific Railroad working near Santa Cruz quit work today because they claimed their pay had been reduced to 17 cents an hour, according to J. Q. Barlow, superintendent of maintenance. The reduction is a usual winter one, and became effective throughout the system on December 1. In effect, he said, the reduction was caused by a reduction in working hours, nine being the usual number of winter working hours, while in summer the men work "daylight" hours.

STOCKTON'S PIONEER DIES AT SON'S HOME.

STOCKTON, Dec. 2.—Mrs. Charlotte Louise Brueck, probably Stockton's oldest living resident, died this morning at the home of her son, Karl C. Brueck, secretary of the Clark & Henry Construction Company and vice-president of the Tidewater Southern Railroad. Mrs. Brueck was nearly 98 years old.

Born in Germany in 1819, Mrs. Brueck came to California in 1853, traveling around the Horn in a small sailing vessel. For a few years she resided in San Francisco, and in 1861 came to Stockton as the bride of Herman Brueck, a German Methodist minister, who had been assigned to Stockton that year. The ministerial life of Mr. Brueck took them to many places in California, he having served Folsom street and Broadway German Methodist congregations in San Francisco and churches at Sacramento, Santa Rosa, Oakland, Marysville and other places.

hy Miss Colby Killed Thomas is Related.

Borrowed the Revolver from Editor of Paper.

Newspaper Man Showed Her How to Hold It.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

THOMPSON FALLS (Mont.) Dec. —Miss Edith Colby, charged with murder of A. C. Thomas, chair- of the Republican committee Sanders county, testified in her behalf today, saying the man shot and killed had called her "redlight woman."

She said she had asked Thomas news and he refused to give her , saying the paper on which she rked printed lies about him.

"I protested that no man could me a liar without proving it," Colby testified, "and that is not he told me. 'You are a redlight man, you belong on the side ets, and, by God, I will put you re.'

"I was stunned, could say noth- do nothing," Miss Colby said she collapsed and crumpled into eap in the witness chair.

few minutes later she retook witness chair and said she did remember much about what she said after Thomas had insulted . She said she borrowed a re- er, that Mr. Manire, editor of paper, showed her how to hold d told her that no court would bother her if she shot Thomas it would be worth a lot to the er.

QUOTES MR. AINSWORTH.

r. A. S. Ainsworth, owner of the er, had told her that Thomas been telling a story that she been brought to Thompson Falls Ainsworth's affinity.

Colby testified she could not that night, and the next morn- had asked "what she was going do that ought to be done early the paper."

Manire, who was acquitted on a rge of conspiracy in connection the death of Thomas, also said, ording to Miss Colby, that they ld not need much more news if had a good story.

"I told him to hold the paper and would come through," testified Colby.

"I intended to point the gun at omas and make him apologize," witness replied in answer to a stion. "I went to Ainsworth's ce and told him I was sick and gusted and that I was going back Spokane and give it all up. He ered, told me I was a coward and d: 'Go through now you're start- .'" he cross-examination was in- ded to demonstrate to the jury rationality. The questions of K. Wheeler, special prosecutor, luded inquiries concerning her ool days in Massachusetts and activities during political cam- gns in Spokane. Alienists for State and defense were present.

"Those things are a revelation to ," Miss Colby said time and again the prosecutor called up incidents ch witnesses called to prove in- ity had related. "I never knew those things. I did not con- myself boisterous nor brazen, I can't deny them."

KISSING ON STREET CAR.

"How about kissing Dr. Halcher the street car? Did you do that?" Wheeler demanded.

"Yes, it was a very silly thing," answered. "I don't know why it."

"You waited for Thomas to come of the hotel; you pointed the at him and demanded that he logize?" Mr. Wheeler asked.

"I didn't point it," Miss Colby an- red. "He stepped forward with fist clenched."

Miss Colby then left the stand and strated the attitude she said mas was in.

NEW KINGDOM OF ARABIA PROTESTS CRUELTIES.

Begins Diplomatic Career by Note to Civilized Nations Making Charges Against Turks, Who are Alleged to Have Treated Prisoners Brutally—Hints at Retaliation Against the Sultan's Forces.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The new kingdom of Arabia, organized a month ago, has begun its diplomatic career with a vigorous protest "to the civilized world" against alleged cruelties of "the band of unionists and affiliates" at Constantinople, who are declared to have treated prisoners brutally. A copy of the communication reached the State Department today.

How the United States can respond is a problem, as the department has not yet decided how the new foreign office can be communicated with. The United States has no consular or diplomatic representatives in Arabia and has not been able to acknowledge announcement of the kingdom's organization.

It is certain, however, that no definite action will be taken until the end of the war, since this country is following the theory that any changes in government made now may be overturned at the peace conference.

TEXT OF PROTEST.

The full text of the protest, signed by Fuad Elkhatib, acting Secretary for Foreign Affairs, is as follows:

"In the name of justice and international law, we enter a solemn protest to the civilized world against the band of unionists and affiliates which inflicted all manner of cruelty on the women and children of the innocent population of Alawali and is now repeating its elaborate acts of cruelty even at Medina, by sentencing the harmless people and those of Alawali that are still alive to death by hanging and forced labor.

"The echo of these atrocities has been brought to the general in charge of our army of the west, whose vanguard is in touch with the enemy, by a delegation comprising every class of the people that came to him to appeal to the Arabian government for protection against such heinous crimes.

"The Arabian government, which has shown every regard for the Turkish prisoners of El Taif, including the Vali, commanders, officers and soldiers, in spite of the misdeeds committed by them and of their setting fire to the houses of princes, notables and inhabitants after plundering them, draws your attention to the matter so as to protect itself from blame of any retaliation it might be compelled to apply."

PLAN TO SEAT ITURBIDE IN PLACE OF CARRANZA.

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 2.—A scheme to take away from Gen. Felix Diaz any fruits of his present revolutionary campaign against the de facto government of Mexico and to place Senor Don Eduardo Iturbide in the provisional Presidency to succeed "First Chief" Venustiano Carranza, is on foot in New York City, according to one of the highest authorities here on Mexican affairs. He asserted yesterday that the influence of certain members of the United States Senate and the House of Representatives has been engaged in the scheme and that the Washington administration already has been sounded on its attitude toward Senator Iturbide.

The men at the head of the movement propose to follow practically the same method of procedure followed by Gen. Victoriano Huerta and his chief lieutenant, Gen. Aureliano Blanquet when they wrested the provisional Presidency of Mexico from Gen. Diaz and declared the Huerta dictatorship. Gen. Huerta entered into a pact with Gen. Diaz, lately known as "the embassy agreement," whereby the provisional Presidency was turned over to Gen. Huerta and the Cabinet named by Gen. Diaz. It was provided in the agreement that Gen. Huerta should not be a candidate for election as constitutional President, but should throw the influences of the power in control of the government to the Diaz candidacy, and that until the election was held the men named by Gen. Diaz should form the Cabinet.

After the agreement was entered into, Gen. Huerta repudiated it and Diaz was forced to flee.

TRIAL NEARS END.

St. Joseph Public Prosecutor to Know Fate Shortly.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

ST. JOSEPH (Mo.) Dec. 2.—Introduction of testimony in the trial of Oscar D. McDaniel, public prosecutor, who is charged with having muredered his wife, ended in the criminal court here late today. Arguments and instructions will be delivered Monday and the fate of the accused man probably will be in the hands of the jury before the day ends.

Completion of the testimony came at the close of the third week of the trial. During the morning the State adduced that part of its rebuttal testimony not presented yesterday and the defense introduced five witnesses in sur-rebuttal. Their testimony had, the State's attorneys said, the effect of re-enforcing the statements made yesterday by Miss Harriet Wilson, telephone operator, that she remembered no calls to the McDaniel home about 11:15 o'clock the night Mrs. McDaniel was murdered. The accused man testified he had been called away from home at that time, when his wife was yet alive, by a decoy call that drew him to an uptown saloon.

The State devoted the last of its rebuttal testimony during the morning session to an effort, apparently, to show that McDaniel had not been in the places he described, between 8:45 o'clock and about 11 o'clock the night of the murder.

in wedlock. The most important of these, by far, was the marriage of Prince George of Battenberg, son of Prince Louis, to the pretty young Countess Nada Torby, daughter of the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, which was solemnized at the Chapel Royal, St. James's, in the presence of an exalted audience which included the King and Queen and practically everybody else of importance in the world of society and statecraft.

Previously the picturesque marriage ceremony of the Greek Church had been performed, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the youthful contracting parties, by the Very Reverend Eugene Smirnoff, arch-priest of the Russian Embassy Church. According to the Greek ritual the ceremony comprised, first, the betrothal, in which rings were presented, and then the crowning of the bride and bridegroom, the crowns being held above their heads by immediate male relatives. The story of the marriage of Cana of Galilee was read, the bride and bridegroom thrice partook of wine out of one glass, to symbolize sharing the joys and sorrows of life, and, after a procession three times around the altar, the bride and bridegroom knelt, and thrice kissed the holy ikons or pictures of Christ.

To Americans, however, the most interesting of Wednesday's five important weddings was that of Miss Nancy Cunard, the pretty and clever daughter of Sir Bache and Lady Cunard, to Sydney Fairbairn, of the crack Grenadier Guards, which took place at the Guards Chapel. There is a lot of Yankee blood in the newly made bride's ancestry, for her father, Sir Bache Cunard (son of the founder of the Cunard line, whose New York property he inherited) derives his curious Christian name from his American mother, a daughter of Mr. Bache McEvers, of New York. Sir Bache married, moreover, a great American heiress, Miss Maude Burke, daughter of the late Edward Burke, of New York, who, as Lady Cunard, has always been popular in British society. Sir Bache is unconnected with the Cunard business, having, since his acquisition of Nevil Holt, in Leicestershire, figured chiefly as a hunting man and a lavish entertainer. Royalty has frequently been his guest.

Nancy Cunard, now Mrs. Fairbairn is the particular chum of Miss Elizabeth Asquith, the Prime Minister's daughter, and of the pretty and "smart" Lady Diana Manners. She belongs, in fact, to the up-to-date and artistic set that works hard for all the big war matinees and her gaieties in London as yet have been mainly confined to these, as she is one of the luckless whom the war has deprived of their first "season."

PLAN TO EXPEDITE ADAMSON LAW CASE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Preparations were made today to submit to the Supreme Court, when it reconvenes Monday after a two weeks' recess, the motion to expedite the Missouri, Oklahoma and Gulf Railroad case to determine constitutionality of the Adamson law.

The motion for expedition was sent to the Supreme Court chambers this afternoon by Solicitor-General Davis. Railroad counsel are expected to be in court and to concur. The railroad brotherhoods probably will not have counsel participating, the defense of the law being in charge of the Department of Justice.

The arguments in the case are expected to be concluded before the court recesses for the holidays, December 22, but whether a decision can be handed down before the law becomes effective January 1 is solely within the hands of the court, which has seldom given decisions quickly in important litigation.

DR. CHARLES ABBOT IS AWARDED MEDAL.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Announcement made today by the Smithsonian Institution that Dr. Charles G. Abbot, rector of its astrophysical observatory, had been presented with a medal for his researches in solar rediation.

These medals are awarded by the American Academy of Arts and Sciences to American scientists whose discoveries and researches have greatly advanced human knowledge of light or heat.

Dr. Abbot's investigations have disclosed that the total heat from the sun reaching the earth each year equals the heat produced by 160,000,000,000,000 tons of coal. He also discovered that the sun radiates varying amounts of heat at different times and may cause climatic changes.

NON-UNION UNION STARTS IN DENVER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER, Dec. 2.—A temporary organization of nonunion railroad employees was formed at a meeting last night for the purpose of considering ways and means of initiating a movement to petition for a wage increase of 33⅓ per cent. A committee was named to formulate a petition to Congress asking that the railroads be granted an increase in freight rates so that, it was explained, their employees might be granted an increase in pay. It was announced that similar organizations are to be perfected throughout the country.

NEAR HALF BLLION IN VAULTS OF MINT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2.—There was $426,173,268.95 in the vaults of the United States mint in this city on November 30, according to the report of Supt. T. W. H. Shanahan, issued today. Of this, $243,111,407.55 is in gold certificates for gold bars.

During November, according to the report, the mint received gold valued at $13,793,070.35. Only $769,200 was coined during November in San Francisco, all in dimes, nickels and pennies. The mint is now working twenty-four hours a day.

Wonder what upset your stomach which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in a revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; your head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Diapepsin and in five minutes you will wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps the stomach regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is astonishing. Please don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

WITHOUT AN OPERATION

For twenty-five years I have been curing diseases of the rectum and lower bowel. During that time my experience as hospital and railroad surgeon, as college lecturer and professor, has enabled me to develop a method that is superior to others. I cure without surgery and my patients are not confined in bed and seldom lose a moment's time from their business.

My method is not a "home cure" or a "correspondence treatment," but it is an application of skilled treatments administered under the most rigid sanitary conditions in my office.

If you are a sufferer from rectal trouble I invite you to investigate my method thoroughly by talking or writing to any of my cured patients. If you will call at my office I will be pleased to give you the names and addresses of many well-known Los Angeles people I have cured whom you may interview in regard to my treatment.

Read what a few well-known Southern California people haveto say of my method. Many similar letters are on file in my office.

Revolution of High Class Tailoring Prices

To the Public in General: Having concluded my grand opening sale with results that were intensely gratifying, and in extending my compliments, and also acknowledging my sincere thanks to my friends and the public in general for their generous support which has launched me on my commercial career in the city of Los Angeles I wish to call the public's attention to the fact that I have concluded on inaugurating a system in high-class tailoring that will absolutely revolutionize high-class tailoring prices. The inauguration of this new value-giving tailoring system in high-class tailoring is to my knowledge the only concern of its kind in the State of California. I am going to SPECIALIZE in strictly high-class, hand-tailored, made-to-measure

$30 and $35 Suits and Overcoats for

HERE ARE THE CIRCUMSTANCES THAT ENABLE ME TO PRODUCE THESE REMARKABLE AND LEGITIMATE TAILORING VALUES:—MY THIRD FLOOR EXTREMELY LOW RENT IS ACTUALLY LAUGHABLE, MY ELECTRIC LIGHT IS FURNISHED ABSOLUTELY GRATIS, MY INSIDE EXPENSES ARE ABSOLUTELY NOTHING, HAVING ENTIRELY ELIMINATED ENORMOUS PROFITS, DEPENDING ON DOING BUSINESS ON A TREMENDOUS SCALE. I NEED NO SALESMEN, AS I ATTEND TO THAT PERSONALLY. I AM BASING MY BUSINESS ON THE SMALLEST POSSIBLE MARGIN. THOSE ARE THE CONDITIONS WHICH MAKE THESE REMARKABLE AND LEGITIMATE TAILORING VALUES FEASIBLE. GENTLEMEN: DOES MY ARGUMENT SOUND PLAUSIBLE? HERE ARE TAILORING VALUES THAT WILL EVENTUALLY MAKE ME ONE OF THE FOREMOST COMMERCIAL CONCERNS IN THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA—AND WITH THE HELP AND CO-OPERATION OF THE PUBLIC IN GENERAL, COMBINED WITH THE REMARKABLE TAILORING VALUES I AM GOING TO PRODUCE IN ORDER TO INSURE MY FUTURE SUCCESS, I HOPE TO EVENTUALLY ATTAIN THE DISTINCTION OF BECOMING THE LARGEST AND MOST EXCLUSIVE UPSTAIRS TAILOR THROUGHOUT THE WEST.

OPEN IN EVENINGS UNTIL 6 P.M.
SATURDAY EVENING UNTIL 10 P. M.

I am here to stay; I am going to become a permanent institution in and a valuable acquisition to the commercial world of Los Angeles.

GENTLEMEN:—To drive the force of my argument home, I respectfully suggest that you go to your own particular tailor first, regardless of how long you have been doing business with him, get a sample of any $30 to $35 suit or overcoat, bring that sample to me, and I guarantee you absolutely that I'll duplicate the same identical pattern or the same grade of material, for $22.50, and I still further guarantee that I'll install the same identical grade of trimmings and same grade of linings, and identically the same high-class grade of workmanship as though you had paid the original above quoted selling figures.

GENTLEMEN:—You know as well as I do that figures cannot lie, and if there is an existing doubt in your mind as to my being capable of doing as I claim, then I'll prove to your entire satisfaction in plain figures, that the producing of these remarkable tailoring values is entirely feasible, if I fail to convince you, then I do not want you to feel under any obligations to place your order with me. You are at liberty to resume your commercial relations with your own particular tailor.

GENTLEMEN:—At any rate, it's at least worth your while to look into this matter, if only from an economical standpoint.

Every garment will be made in my own shop and by expert tailors of the highest standing in their own particular line, and whose skill with the needle has given them a reputation for needlework and tailoring in Los Angeles that made it absolutely necessary for me, in order to retain their services to accede in the granting of the high salaries demanded by them, which means that the same precision and care will be taken in the workmanship and the fitting of your garments that is taken by the most exclusive high-class tailors throughout the country, which doubly insures the fitting of your garments to be absolutely perfect in every detail.

The Jensen Thermostatic Vaporizer

THIS little vaporizer—shown actual size—injects vapor into the cylinder through the mixing chamber of the carburetor. Its action is constantly controlled by a thermostat—a highly sensitive, mechanical thermometer. This gives the engine the right amount of Hydrogen and Oxygen to make perfect combustion and produces the smoothness, power and snap which it has on a cool, damp day. Absolutely prevents carbon—one engine ran 20,000 miles without carbonization. Endorsed by engineers. See it at our store.

Don't Wear A Truss!

Ten Reasons Why You Should Send for My Appliance.

I Send It On Trial

The above is C. E. Brooks, of Marshall, Mich., who has been curing Rupture for over 30 years. If Ruptured write him today.

1 It is absolutely the only Appliance of the kind on the market today, and in it are embodied the principles that inventors have sought after for years.

2 The Appliance for retaining the rupture cannot be thrown out of position.

3 Being an air cushion of soft rubber it clings closely to the body, yet never blisters or causes irritation.

4 Unlike the ordinary so-called pads, used in other trusses, it is not cumbersome or ungainly.

5 It is small, soft and pliable; and positively cannot be detected through the clothing.

6 The soft, pliable bands holding the Appliance do not give one the unpleasant sensation of wearing a harness.

7 There is nothing about it to get foul, and when it becomes soiled it can be washed without injuring it in the least.

8 There are no metal springs in the Appliance to torture one by cutting and bruising the flesh.

9 All of the material of which the Appliances are made is of the very best that money can buy, making it a durable and safe Appliance to wear.

10 My reputation for honesty and fair dealing is so thoroughly established by an experience of over thirty years of dealing with the public, and my prices are so reasonable, my terms so fair, that there certainly should be no hesitancy in sending free coupon today.

Remember I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail today.

Asquith Resigns.

of Parliament—supporters and opponents of Asquith—and without exception they doubted the possibility of his elimination. His bitterest opponents respect highly his political sagacity and cleverness in debate.

The responsibility of leadership frightens even the biggest and bravest men.

ANOTHER VERSION.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 2, 1:03 a.m.—The political crisis which is the newspaper sensation of the hour, is generally believed to mean the future control of all war measures, both military and economic, by a Cabinet directorate of five, advised by Gen. Sir William Robertson, Chief of the Imperial Staff, and Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe, First Sea Lord.

The question of the resignation of Premier Asquith to give place for David Lloyd George or Andrew Bonar Law also is discussed, but that Mr. Asquith will resign appears improbable. The Premier had a long audience with the King today, which furnished a basis for the afternoon papers to predict his resignation. But he would consult with the King, as a matter of course, over any important government changes.

A war council was formed in the Cabinet last year, but the minimum number of five, which Mr. Asquith then announced, has been exceeded and the popular impression is that the council has been largely a failure because its decisions were subject to ratification by the full Cabinet.

The forecast of the new war council, Premier Asquith, David Lloyd George, Andrew Bonar Law, Arthur J. Balfour and Sir Edward Carson, still stands, but doubts are expressed whether Sir Edward Carson, who resigned from the Cabinet a year ago because he was dissatisfied with the government's policy in the Balkans, when Serbia was being hard pressed, will rejoin.

The attacks upon the government and certain members of the government have recently risen to the highest tide attained since the beginning of the war. Although the newspapers have attacked the government and individual ministers whenever it was thought affairs were going wrong, there has been no press censorship whatever on political discussion.

While the Northcliffe press and the Morning Post have made the fiercest assaults, even such carefully speaking journals as the Daily Chronicle, the Westminster Gazette and the Manchester Guardian recently have become critical. The trend of discontent has been partly against the government system, partly against certain members of the Cabinet. Slowness in reaching decision and inaction is the gi[illegible] the indictment. The principal [illegible] of this are the man power [illegible] questions, while recently d[illegible] faction with what some consi[illegible] a want of vigor in the managem[ent] of the navy and weakness in the Foreign Office has been increasingly expressed.

The appointment of a food dictator was announced more than a fortnight ago, but none has been appointed yet. This is one complaint. The unwieldiness of a Cabinet of twenty-three for managing a great war is a point on which the critics seem unanimous.

As a counter-balance to the critics, there is a widespread and weighty, but less local, sentiment that they fail to credit the administration with the great work it has accomplished in the military and financial fields within two years.

King Constantine finally agreed to surrender the mountain guns demanded by the allies and the latter are withdrawing their troops with the exception of a small guard.

Disturbances began as soon as the allied troops were landed. Greek troops fired on the Entente forces which occupied the Zappeion, while Reservists and Venizelists exchanged shots in the streets. A pitched battle between the opposing Greek forces occurred in Stadium street.

The Dutch and Spanish ministers finally intervened and induced the King to surrender the guns on condition that the Entente withdraw the troops, except 300 left in the Zappeion. offensive on the first instance in force chose the . Until that time been able, in al- nce, to dictate on fighting should be been able to main- at its original fury, the British would have done much on the west front to interfere with the success of the Rumanian campaign. But the Somme offensive died away owing to the enormous losses and the bad weather.

During the first two years of the war the allied General Staff seemed to be unable to think in world terms; unable to see the fighting in the light of one battlefield reaching from Ostend to the Persian Gulf; to counter an offensive in Serbia by a blow in Flanders. A new conception of fighting now seems to be theirs and they evidently plan to rescue the Rumanians by a Russian blow in Bukowina and a British charge from Ypres.

BRITISH SHORTCOMINGS.

British critics now admit that this has been one of their shortcomings as strategists. The military critic of the Manchester Guardian recently wrote that the British now realize that Winston Churchill's much-abused Dardanelles expedition was the one enlightened example of British strategy; that the real mistake was not in having undertaken the attack upon Gallipoli, but in having abandoned it. The British now see that the Dardanelles expedition, if prosecuted longer, would have made it impossible for the Turks to have turned over large bodies of troops to Von Mackensen for the conquest of Dobrudja. Nobody knows what has become of the Russian offensive in Armenia, but it seems to have died away and the Turks are now the main support of the German generals.

QUID PRO QUO.

The whole thing seems perfectly hopeless to me. I can't see where either side has any chance of beating the other.

The defeat of Rumania has already given the German army an enormous amount of supplies, including grain and crude oil.

The allies are now pressed more severely for food than are the Teutons.

Hilaire Belloc, the great English military critic, looks hopefully on next year. He says the Germans will then be short of men as they are using up their reserves at a fearful rate.

Other critics sneer at all such theories of attrition. If the fight could go on to the real end probably it would end with nine men, six of whom would be allies. And the allies might have $3 more than the Germans. But it is not likely to go on that far.

It looks as though the war would dribble out to an inconclusive, miserable ending for lack of money on all sides. Lack of money is now the most critical feature of the war. Unless I am very much mistaken that supressed speech in the Duma the other day had to do with a financial dispute between England and Russia.

In order to eliminate grave military dangers at the first of the war, England was forced to take upon herself frightful financial burdens, which she cannot carry.

Germany is under a financial strain just as severe, but, as outlined many times in the Checkerboard, Germany cannot stop, no matter what the circumstances. She must choose between annihilation and fighting on.

The defeat of Rumania came just at the wrong time for the allies. It must have undermined their financial credit to a disastrous extent. Also, it cut off what they hoped would be a means of replenishing their diminishing supply of wheat. If many more British ships are destroyed, the English will face a severe food famine.

Rumanians Retreat.

offensive, which is designed for the salvation of Rumania."

ADDITIONAL DETAILS.

The Russian and Rumanian forces are continuing to make fierce attacks along the Bukowina and Moldavian frontiers. Today's statement from army headquarters says the attacks were without success and that heavy losses were inflicted by the Teutonic troops.

BERLIN, Dec. 2 (by wireless to Sayville)—A great battle has developed in western Rumania. The Austro-German army advancing from the region of Campulung has defeated the Rumanians in a pitched battle, breaking through their lines.

More than 6000 Rumanians have been captured in Western Rumania, together with forty-nine cannons. In the advance toward Bucharest the Teutonic forces have reached the Argechu River.

The text of the statement follows.

"Front of Archduke Joseph: Russian and Rumanian attacks continue in the wooded Carpathians and along the mountains of the Transylvanian frontier. Yesterday they were directed especially against our position on the Babaladova and Guerarucada and west of Dorna-Watra and in the Trotus and Oitos Valleys. The attacks were unsuccessful, the enemy suffering heavy losses. German troops during an advance at one point in the wooded Carpathians took more than 1000 prisoners.

"Front of Field Marshal von Mackensen: The engagements in Wallachia are developing into a great battle. The army which left the mountains southeast of Campulung has gained ground in the wooded mountains on both sides of the Dambrovitza sector during engagements.

"On the Argechu, southeast of Petechti, the first Rumanian army which offered battle has been broken through an defeated after a tenacious struggle by German and Austro-Hungarian troops. Already Bavarian reserve regiment No. 18, which has frequently distinguished itself, has pushed ahead to the Division Staff headquarters where from imprisoned officers of the General Staff were taken orders proving that in the position through which we had broken the first army should have fought to the last man. The commander of the army, apparently aware of the poor morale of his troops, added to an exalted Latin expression that he expected them to 'withstand and fight to the death against the cruel barbarians.' The menace of death was set forth, immediately to be executed upon cowards in his army.

"Farther down, to near the Danube, we have fought our way to the Argechu.

"The number of prisoners taken on December 1 as far as it is possible to enumerate them at present was fifty-one officers and 6115 of the rank and file and the booty forty-nine cannons and 100 loaded ammunition carts, in addition to many hundred other military vehicles.

"In Dobrudja Bulgarian troops repulsed strong attacks by the Russians."

ITALIANS ACTIVE IN CARSO SECTOR.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The official statement issued today by Austro-Hungarian general headquarters repeats in substance the German official statement but adds the following:

"The Rumanian resistance in the Dumbovitza valley southeast of Campulung has been broken.

"The Italians continued their gun fire in the Carso sector with a liberal expenditure of ammunition. During the night the artillery duel was more lively, especially on the southern portion of the plateau.

"An attack by enemy airmen on villages in the Wippach Valley met with no success."

GERMANS SHELL BRITISH FRONT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The communication from British headquarters in France issued tonight reads:

"During the day there was intermittent shelling against our front on both sides of the Ancre. A small party of the enemy entered our trenches north of Le Sars but were at once rejected.

"In the neighborhood of Ypres, Armentieres and Hohenzollern there was considerable trench mortar activity on both sides."

AMERICAN AVIATOR WEDS FRENCH HEIRESS

BY FRED B. PITNEY.

[BY WIRELESS AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PARIS, Dec. 2.—The civil marriage of Paul A. Rockwell of Atlanta, the American aviator, and Mlle. Leygues was performed today in the Maire Arrondissement in the presence of M. Paul Deschanel, president of the Chamber of Deputies; the Dowager Marchioness of Anglesey, Gen. Duport of Toulouse and several others. Mr. Rockwell's witnesses were James McConnell of the American Aviation Escadrille, a former companion of Mr. Rockwell in the Foreign Legion, and Vicomte Du Peloux of Paris, while Georges de Fontenailles was best man.

M. Deschanel and Gen. Duport were the bride's witnesses and Mlle. Marguerite the maid of honor. There also were present the father and mother of the bride; her sister, Mme. Raphael; Mrs. Allice Weeks of New Bedford, Mass., and Corps. Fred Zinn and Lincoln Shattkof, both of whom are American aviators.

The religious ceremony will be celebrated on Monday at the Church of St. Clothilde. The honeymoon will be spent at the villa of the bride's parents in St. Raphael and later in Spain.

Paul Rockwell is a brother of Giffin Rockwell, who was killed recently in a battle with German aeroplanes, and has himself been wounded in action. His bride is heir to a large fortune. Her father was the founder of the Louvre Department Store. The couple will make their home in Paris.

DRINK HOT TEA FOR A BAD COLD.

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacupful at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

Only True Tonic for Liver and Bowels Costs 10 Cents a Box.

Cascarets are a treat! They liven your liver, clean your thirty feet of bowels and sweeten your stomach. You eat one or two Cascarets like candy before going to bed and in the morning your head is clear, tongue is clean, stomach sweet, breath right and cold gone and you feel grand.

Get a 10 or 25-cent box at any drug store and enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced. Stop sick headaches, bilious spells, indigestion, furred tongue, offensive breath and constipation. Mothers should give cross, peevish, feverish, bilious children a whole Cascaret any time.

Raise High Priced Wheat on Fertile Canadian Soil

Canada extends to you a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help feed the world by tilling some of her fertile soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think of the money you can make with wheat around $2 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming in Western Canada is as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year is asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is a great demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service. The climate is healthful and agreeable, railway facilities excellent, good schools and churches convenient. Discovery.

FINDS THE GUINEA PIG IS A CHOLERA CARRIER.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

MANILA, Sept. 10.—What is considered by insular health officials as a most important discovery, has been disclosed by Dr. Schobl of the government bureau of science, who has been experimenting with guinea pigs. His experiments have shown that guinea pigs are intermittent cholera carriers in that they can be inoculated with the cholera germ and later will throw off the germ. Then without further inoculation, a feeding of bile brings back the cholera germ.

These experiments, say local health officials, explain remarkable conditions which have been found to prevail at Bilibid prison, the big insular prison in Manila. During the slight epidemic of cholera which has been affecting several provinces of the islands, inspections at Bilibid have discovered cholera carriers among prisoners who, on previous examination, were found to be negative. Cholera infection appeared afterwards when there had been no possibility of their exposure to the disease.

Cholera carriers are a big problem in the Philippines, and through Dr. Schobl's discovery, local health officials hope to be able to solve the problem of effectually killing the propensity of certain individuals to harbor the deadly germs.

AN ANCIENT CASE FINALLY DROPPED.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2.—The case of the United States against Jose Lymentour, set down for trial on the court calendar for April 25, 1859, was "left open for a few days" on the request of the government's attorney. Nothing has ever been done since, and the action was formally wiped from the books today by United States District Judge William C. Van Fleet on a nolle prosequi entered at the request of Asst. U. S. Dist.-Atty. M. A. Thomas.

This was one of a batch of twelve old cases that have cumbered the records from 1859 to 1878 in which similar orders were entered today, and in which no action had been taken for years. Two were murder charges, to which the defendant pleaded not guilty in 1862. The record is silent as to what became of the accused.

BIG AVIATION SCHOOL OF BRITISH IN EGYPT.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

CAIRO (Egypt) Sept. 15.—At a place which can be designated only as "somewhere in Egypt" the British forces are establishing what will be one of the largest and most completely equipped aviation schools in the world. An Associated Press correspondent who recently visited the site found the school was nearing completion, and he was told that at least seven thoroughly qualified pupils in the art of flying will be graduated each week so long as the war lasts, for service not only with British forces in Egypt, but elsewhere if their service were demanded.

This part of the world was chosen for the school mainly because it is adapted climatically to flying the whole year round, and because it is handy to the various theaters of war. Incidentally an observer here might remark that the sands of the desert also furnish a soft bed for the inexperienced to fall upon.

The school will accommodate, in addition to the pupils, fifty officers and 500 mechanics and other workers. Each student will require from four to six weeks' training. A large number are already receiving instruction.

MITTENS CAUSE KILLING.

Theft of Pair in Alaska Said to Have Led to Slaying.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEWARD (Alaska) Dec. 2.—The theft of a pair of mittens is believed to have been the cause of the killing of John Hendricks and the fatal wounding of W. N. Irving, section men on the United States Railway, by Walter Stoker, a hunter and trapper, near here last Thursday. Stoker, who fled to the woods, is believed to be insane. Unless he seeks shelter it is thought he will perish, as the temperature is 14 below zero.

Stoker, a native of Edinburgh, Scotland, and a former student of the University of Chicago, recently accused section men of having broken into his cabin. Thursday he ate Thanksgiving dinner at Twelve-Mile roadhouse and complained some one had stolen his mittens. Shortly after he started home the body of Hendricks was found near the roadhouse. A section hand brought word that Stoker had shot Irving after demanding the return of his mittens.

FIRST COUNTY JUDGE TAKEN.

Ygnacio Sepulveda Passes at Home in this City.

Long Prominent on the Bench Here and in Mexico.

Legal World Pays Tribute to Dean of Profession.

Judge Ygnacio Sepulveda, history maker, pioneer Californian and the first judge of this county, the friend of thousands and one of the best-known and loved men of the city, passed away last evening at the age of 74 years. Death came to the aged jurist at his residence, No. 2639 Monmouth avenue, after a short illness.

Judge Sepulveda was born in this city, educated in Massachusetts and spent the greater portion of his life here and in Mexico City. In the latter place he practiced law for thirty years and was the administrator of jurisprudence and legislation of Mexico under Diaz.

Of a legal turn of mind, Judge Sepulveda early in life became identified with the administration of law in this State. Admitted to the bar in 1860, after serving a term in the Legislature, he was elected a county judge in 1863. In 1875 he was district judge and in 1879 was made the first superior judge of the county. In 1895 he became the first secretary of the United States to Mexico.

Most of the attorneys of this county who became noted in the affairs of State and nation practiced under Judge Sepulveda and last evening paid tribute to the departed jurist, their friend and adviser. Former Gov. Henry T. Gage tried his first case under Judge Sepulveda and became his warm friend and supporter in after life. Scores of the older attorneys now practicing at the bar spoke of the warm personal friendship that existed between the judge and the Los Angeles attorneys and business men.

In addition to a widow, thre are left two daughters, Mrs. Conchita Chapman and Miss Ora Sepulveda; two sisters, Mrs. T. D. Mott and Miss T. Sepulveda. The funeral will be held Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, details to be announced later.

The youngest daughter of Judge Sepulveda, Conchita, a girl of rare beauty, was married two weeks ago to Charles Henry Chapman, a San Francisco clubman and business man. The wedding was an elaborate one, Archbishop Hanna officiating. The ceremony occurred at the hacienda of Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, near Pleasanton. Miss Sepulveda was in the nature of a protege of Mrs. Hearst, having since childhood been a close personal friend. While Judge Sepulveda was connected with the United States Embassy at Mexico City he became interested in the Hearst estates in Mexico and from then on the two families became closely associated. Mr. and Mrs. Chapman have established their home near the scene of their wedding on a beautiful ranch. Many notable guests from San Francisco, New York and Los Angeles attended the wedding.

CITY MAY SELL FISH.

Councilman Wheeler Decides There are Latent Possibilities in Improvement Association Plan for Municipal Food Industry.

A request that the city turn itself into a municipal fishmonger was made to the Council yesterday by the United Improvement Association, when it asked the city to go into the business of supplying fish to the people. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee and Chairman Wheeler said he will have experts look into the possibilities, after which the committee will present recommendations.

Councilman Wheeler said he believes the city could deliver fish at the door of the consumer at 6 cents a pound and make a profit, after paying all expenses of handling, ice, dressing and delivery.

"There is a whole ocean of fish that ought to be brought to the tables of the consumers in Los Angeles," he said. "On our own land in our own fish harbor, we could [illegible] in stall a plant, dress the fish, put [illegible] up in ice, and then bring the[illegible] city either by auto truck [illegible]

THREATENS TO KILL.

Following an Argument Regarding Money Exchange in Bank Italian Vows to Return to Kill Cashier, but is Arrested by Guarding Police.

Armed with a heavy revolver, an Italian giving the name of Tony Monteleone was arrested early last night by Police Detectives Blue and Williams in the Bank of Italy, where he had gone to kill John Cadeschi, the cashier, according to his statements. The Italian was booked at Central Police Station on a charge of carrying a revolver, and will be examined today.

According to Mr. Cadeschi, the Italian drew some money from the bank late in the afternoon. Later he returned and stated that he had been short changed. When Mr. Cadeschi told him that he must be mistaken and refused to give him any more money, he left the place swearing to come back and kill the cashier.

Detectives Williams and Blue, who were sent to the bank upon the request of Mr. Cadeschi following the threat against him, arrested the Italian about an hour later, when he returned to the bank. The revolver was discovered in his pocket.

DOCTOR'S FAVOR EIGHT-HOUR DAY

Assert it Betters Social and Moral Conditions.

Say Workers Can Give More Under its Usages.

Women Trade Unionists Tell of Law's Violations.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The eight-hour day promises industrial efficiency, improves the health of the workers and betters moral and social conditions, speakers representing employers and the medical profession agreed at the interstate conference of the Woman's Trades Union League of New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore here today. The conference will conclude tomorrow.

Dr. Frederick S. Lee of Columbia University discussed the eight-hour day from the physician's viewpoint, Dr. Lee K. Frankel of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company gave his views as an employer, and Mrs. Florence Kelley, general secretary of the National Consumers' League, told how the consumer regards it.

"If workers are going to maintain the proper attitude of efficiency toward society," Dr. Lee said, "they must be kept in good physical condition. This is impossible without the eight-hour day. Whenever a shorter day has been tried out the result has shown improved health for the individual, inspired better moral and social conditions and given greater industrial efficiency.

"Employers say the eight-hour day would cause the diminution of output which they could not afford. This argument falls to the ground as it is shown that workers can do more in eight hours than they can in nine, ten or even twelve."

Dr. Lee made a plea for the reduction of working hours for women workers to eight and six hours per day, depending on the character of the work and the capacity of the workers. He recommended an investigation to determine the maximum hours of work necessary in certain callings.

Dr. Frankel declared himself unequivocally in favor of the eight-hour day and said that the work day should be made even shorter if the nature of the work required it. He said his company had already installed a seven and a half hour day with five-minute rest periods at 11 and 3:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Kelley charged the existing labor laws for women and children are not enforced and that publicity is the only remedy for the condition brought about, she said, by the "laggard servants of a negligent public."

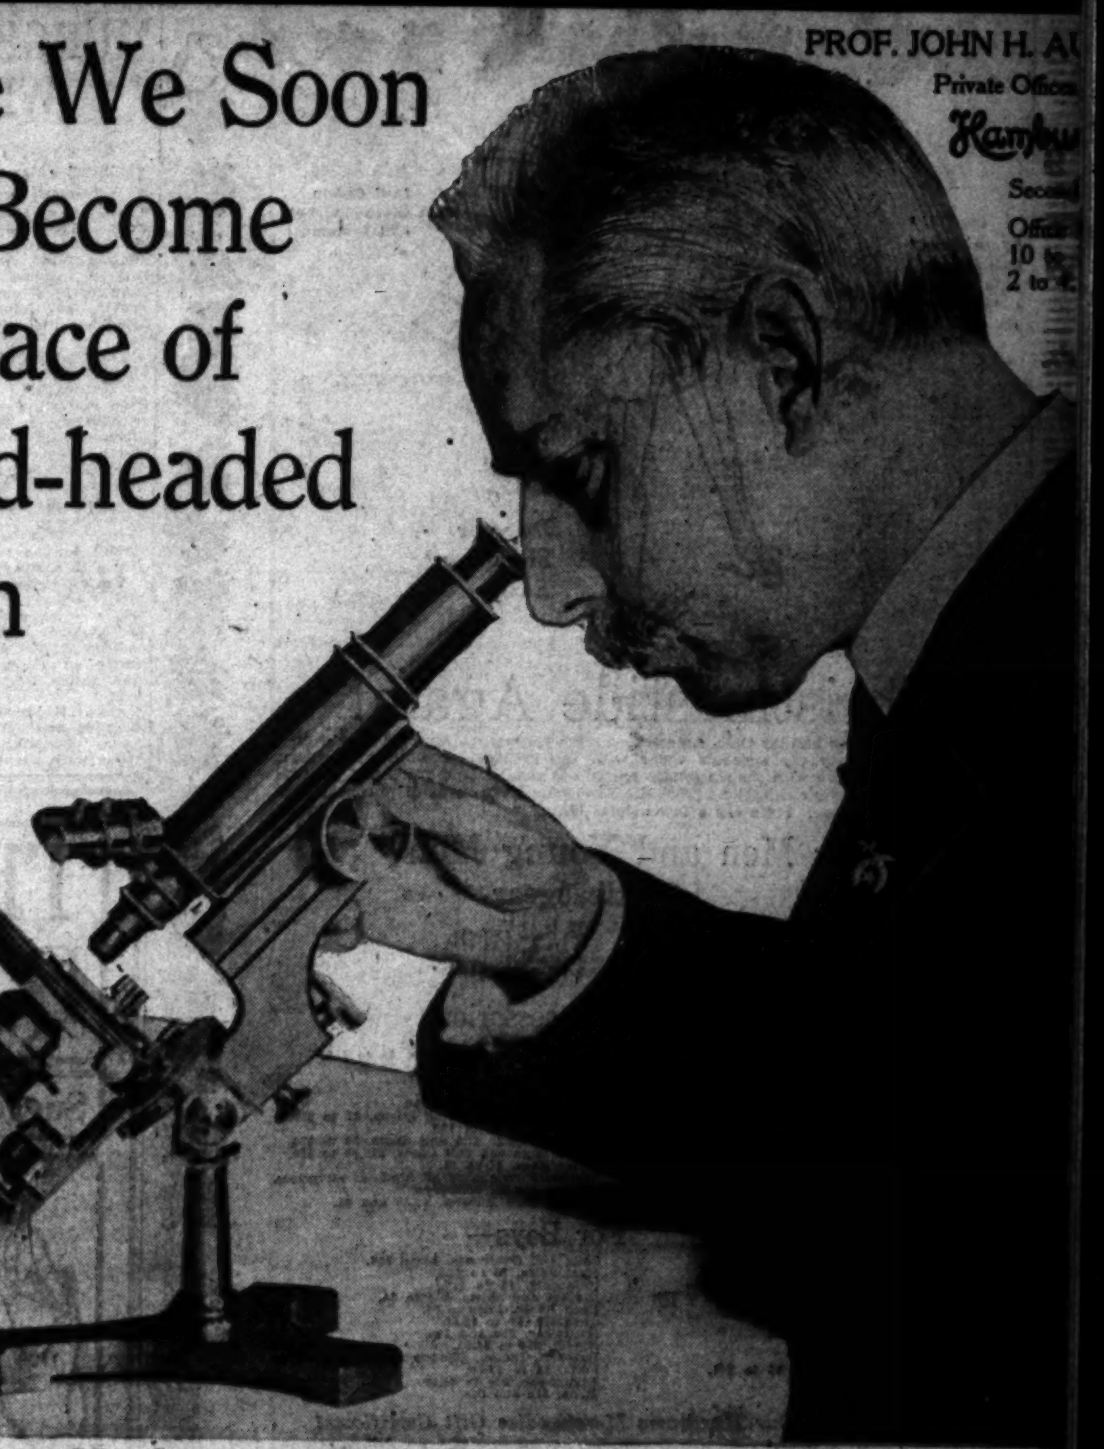
Are We Soon to Become a Race of Bald-headed Men ?



Prof. John H. Austin, Established Since December 6th,

Thirty-eight Years' Practice

—And, a record of unbroken success. Established headquarters for the past twenty-si at McVickers' Theater Building, Chicago. Branch office and laboratories for the Pacifi established Feb. 7th, 1915, Hamburger's, Los Angeles. During the past two years has been at Hamburger's he has examined the hair and scalp of over fifty thousand me women.

Prof. John H. Austin

Hair Specialist of Chicago, Who is Now at Hamburger's Talks Most Interestingly About the Hair.

Modern Life Tends to Lessen the Growth of the Hair Follicle.

Prof. Austin says that baldness is increasing rapidly among men and points out some of the reasons. Prof. Austin is probably right in saying that about one man in every hundred ever thinks about his hair at all, except to comb it two or three times a day. If it falls out he looks anxiously at the falling hair, and then promptly forgets it until the next time he uses a comb.

A man will give the utmost attention to his teeth, because he knows that when trouble arises he will have more trouble and probably lose his teeth if he doesn't go to a dentist promptly. But his hair doesn't ache, it just gradually dies, and when it is nearly gone, and the roots are dead, he anxiously tries a dozen different remedies at once and then resigns himself to baldness.

According to Prof. Austin, there are something like 60 different conditions of the scalp and hair. Some are contagious. Others develop from neglect. Practically all of them are curable in the early stages.

—Professor Austin says that the use of mange cures, dandruff cures, hair tonics, vaseline and elixirs is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure.

Prof. Austin examines the roots of your hair with a powerful microscope. He finds out just what is the trouble with YOUR HAIR, and then he tells you what to do for that trouble.

Prof. Austin has devoted thirty-eight years to studying the hair and scalp. Surely it will be worth the few minutes it takes to let him turn the microscope on your hair.

During the past two years at Hamburger's Prof. Austin has made over fifty thousand free microscopic examinations of the hair and scalps of Hamburger's patrons—and they enthusiastically appreciate this free service.

He will make FREE MICROSCOPIC EXAMINATION of the hair and scalp all this week in his private office on the Second Floor, Hamburger's. Hours, 10 to 12 m. and 2 to 4 p. m.

Women need not take down their hair.

Free Microscopic Examination of the Hair and Scalp of M Women, and Children. Hours 10 to 12, 2 to 4, Daily.

(Women Need Not Take Down Their Hair)

Prof. Austin Says:

—I do not use an ordinary microscope. I use one of the most power machines known to science. There is no microbe so small that its pre not be detected. Once the cause is known the cure is a matter of co you must be fair with me, with Nature and with yourself. You must until you are entirely bald. That means that the parasites have done th There is nothing left for me or for Nature to work on. The hair roots It is when the hair begins to fall that you should seek help.
—Let me destroy the bacteria before they destroy the hair roots. Natur long and well, and if given help at the right time will replace the lo new, stronger, thicker and more beautiful hair. I have cured many com plete baldness where the papilla, or hair root, was still alive, but it mean and more tedious battle. If taken in time I can cure you. If you wait unt bald, I MAY cure you. MURGUIA'S FORCES JOIN WITH TREVINO'S ARMY.

JUAREZ (Mex.) Dec. 2.—An official dispatch from Mexico City that Gen. Murguia had defeated troops that tried yesterday to block his advance and was moving on Chihuahua today, received confirmation here in a report by direct line from Sauz to the effect that Murguia and Trevino had joined forces and were attacking the city on the south today.

The position of Gen. Murguia and his division had puzzled the Carranza authorities here for some days, and even started a rumor that he had withdrawn to Torreon. It is now officially said that his slow progress north from his base at Escalon, about 185 miles south of Chihuahua, was due to the effective wrecking of the Mexican Central Railroad track by Villa.

Gen. Ozuna is reported to be stationed to the north of Chihuahua city with a strong government force.

Trains, supposed to be filled with loot, were reported leaving Chihuahua west over the line of the Mexico Northwestern several days ago.

Villa bands have been reported north of Sauz, which is twenty-five miles north from Chihuahua city.

Gen. Marrero, a Trevino commander, was reported to be near Ojinaga, opposite Presidio, Tex., late today with a column of 400 men, according to a message received at military headquarters here.

It was believed here he became separated from Gen. Trevino's main command, after the evacuation of Chihuahua city and having been unable to effect a junction with Trevino's column started for the border at Ojinaga.

TO BUY LINCOLN'S PORTRAIT.

Prominent men throughout the country have become interested in the campaign to raise, by popular subscription, the amount necessary to purchase from Oscar Marshall the famous portrait of Lincoln. It is the intention of the Marshall Lincoln Memorial Association to present the portrait to the nation, to be hung in the White House on Lincoln's birthday in 1917. Among the recent contributors are J. P. Morgan, Simon Guggenheim, William Barnes, Levi P. Morton, Roger A. Pryor, Gustav Pabst, Theron G. Strong, E. H. Clift, Constant A. Andrews and W. H. Marshall. The portrait by Marshall has been pronounced by Robert T. Lincoln, a son of the emanicipator, as an exson of the emanicipator, as an excellent likeness, and also by Edwin M. Stanton, Lincoln's Secretary of War, and Schuyler Colfax, former Speaker of the House of Representatives.

FUNERAL TOMORROW.

Mrs. Josephine Grant Wheeler, Artist, Writer and Musician Passes.

The funeral services of Mrs. Josephine Grant Wheeler, well known artist, musician and writer, who died on Thanksgiving Day in Palm Springs, will be held from the family residence, No. 421 South Harvard boulevard on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be private.

Mrs. Wheeler was the wife of Henry O. Wheeler, Jr., a prominent attorney of this city. She was born in Franklin, Pennsylvania, July 16, 1882 and married Mr. Wheeler, May 20, 1914.

She is survived by her husband, her brothers, Edwin F. Grant of Los Angeles, Henry Fay and Denison W. Grant of Franklin, Pa., and a sister, Mrs. Kate Grant Pohl of Redlands, Cal.

Among the many articles written by Mrs. Wheeler were numerous stories for children, many of which appeared in St. Nicholas and other magazines.

WHITE SLAVE ARREST.

Fred Gargulia, alias Fred Kelley, arrested in San Diego some time ago on a charge of being a fugitive from justice, was brought to Los Angeles yesterday by Deputy United States Marshal Carse and will this afternoon be taken to Phoenix, Ariz. Gargulia was indicted by the Federal grand jury at Tucson for alleged violation of the Mann white slave act, it being alleged that he took his wife, Mabel, from this city to Tucson for an immoral purpose.

Allied Demand.

government had in mind solely Greek interests and not, as has been repeatedly insisted on, sympathy with one of the two groups of belligerents. A Greek government could only think of the interests of Greece. The geographical situation of Greece, which places it in very direct contact with one of the two groups of belligerent powers, makes the application of its policy of neutrality very difficult; it is for that reason she has been forced to submit to the occupation by foreign arms of her Macedonian provinces and to permit the belligerents to dispose of her ports, public buildings and works of art; that her highways and railroads have been forcibly occupied, while bridges and tunnels worth many millions have been completely destroyed.

"At the moment when the present Greek government assumed power an imposing fleet was blockading the entrance of the Strait of Salamis, the anchorage of the Greek fleet, and in spite of our protests and our formal refusal we were constrained to order our officers and sailors to abandon the vessels of the light fleet in order to spare them the grief of surrendering the vessels upon which not very long ago they had contributed to two victorious wars.

"For about a month the Greek people have seen with a very real pain the administration of foreign control of nearly all its public services, its land communications, its postal service, telegraph and telephone service. The Greek commercial fleet has seen its activity hampered by repeated inspections and restrictions of every sort. For a long time Greece has been able to import from abroad only what is absolutely indispensable to feed and sustain the country, and to furnish for its commerce, both by land and sea, the necessary fuel.

"And now the traditional hospitality of the Greek people has suffered an affront which has been profoundly painful. The will of the strong has been constantly placed in opposition to the legitimate protests of Greece; nevertheless the latter has up to now endured everything with the patience and dignity which small nations possess in the highest degree. But the last demand of the admiral commanding the naval forces of the Entente in the Mediterranean, in which he invites the Greek government to hand over the war material, acquired at the price of heavy sacrifices and from which the nature of the Greek people can serve only for the defense of the national interests that demand, I say, is one of those which the people, its constitutional leaders, the army and the navy, are unanimous in refusing.

"The Greek government, confident in the support of the entire nation, has rejected, and will continue to reject, this last demand which most deeply wounds the Greek conscience and which constituted a serious infringement of the sovereign rights of the country.

"Greece cannot surrender its arms and cease for the future to protect herself against possible dangers.

"I believed it my duty, Mr. Minister, to set before you in all frankness the very painful situation in which Greece now finds itself, in order that you may enlighten your government and the public opinion of your country on this subject. The Greek government desires that the neutral nations understand that the spirit of conciliation and of equity, of which it has given proof, has been unable to save the Hellenic people from the grave vicissitudes through which the country is now passing.

"We are not strong enough to escape them, for they are the unpleasant result of the geographical position of Greece and of the conflict of interests of the great belligerent powers. Nevertheless, strong in its right, Greece is not losing heart, but is confident that, despite all, she will come out of the present crisis weakened but intact and ready to recuperate its strength for the accomplishment of its duties toward Hellenism.

"I do not doubt, Mr. Minister, that you will give me, in these painful circumstances, the support which I ask you for. I am convinced of the sympathetic interests which you have for the affairs of our country and I can assure you that this conviction is a precious one for the Greek government and the Greek people, in the midst of the trial which they are experiencing.

BOYCOTT EGGS AND BUTTER.

Louisville Women Decide on Two Weeks' Experiment.

Chicago Diet Squad Gains on Forty-cent Limit.

Drop in Dairy Prices Comes in Salt Lake City.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) Dec. 2.—An absolute boycott on the use of butter and eggs for a period of two weeks, effective immediately, was decided upon here late today at a conference of representatives of more than forty Louisville organizations. The conference was called by the Louisville Women's Suffrage Association and will reconvene December 15.

DIET SQUAD RESULT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Members of the "diet squad," whose two weeks' test of the theory that 40 cents a day is enough to feed a person well in Chicago will end Tuesday night, are approaching the completion of their experiment slightly heavier than when the dieting began and with no signs of indigestion and distresses of the stomach.

The diet, while planned to be within the 40-cent limit, also has been arranged to supply all the elements needed for properly-balanced meals.

Tomorrow's menu is as follows:

BREAKFAST
Grapefruit
Griddle cakes Syrup
Coffee
DINNER
Consomme with rice
Leg of lamb Candied sweet potatoes
Creamed cauliflower
Mock plum pudding Hard sauce
SUPPER
Lyonnaise potatoes Cold meat
Sugar cookies Cocoa

AT TOLEDO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

TOLEDO (O.) Dec. 2.—Two hundred Toledo housewives, members of the Housewives' League, began a boycott on butter and eggs today. All members are pledged to refrain from the use of the two articles for thirty days and longer if deemed necessary to force down the price. The housewives also began to bake their own bread.

IN SALT LAKE CITY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 2.—Housewives of Salt Lake made their boycott on butter so effective that it was one of the chief reasons for a drop in price today.

Commission men, in announcing the reduction in the wholesale price of butter from 41 cents a pound to 39 cents, said that people would not buy butter at the high price.

The result was the accumulation of a large stock of butter and the attendant reduction in price.

REICHSTAG ADOPTS COMPULSORY BILL.

SOCIALISTS SCORE ACTION IN DEPORTING BELGIANS.

Deputy Accuses Von Bissing of Violating Promises Made to Those Who Came Back from Holland—Dr. Helfferich Deplores Discussion as Aiding Enemies.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM (via London) Dec. 2.—The Reichstag today adopted the compulsory civilian service bill, after the third reading, says a dispatch from Berlin. The vote was 235 to 19, and several members did not cast their ballots. The bill as passed, it is added, was not changed after the second reading.

In the course of debate, a Socialist proposal that a permanent workmen's committee be appointed in connection with industrial workshops and railways was defeated by one vote.

Dr. Karl Helfferich, the Vice-Chancellor, the dispatches said, opposed the proposal on the ground that powers conferred on existing committees of railway men already exceeded in practice the limits of the demands submitted by the Socialists.

SCORE DEPORTATIONS.

The Socialists took advantage of the debate to condemn the action of the government in deporting Belgian workers.

Deputy Hugo Hasse, a Socialist, said that neutral governments had protested against placing the Bel[illegible] under the provisions of the [illegible] bill, and he condemned the [illegible]tions as a violation of inter[illegible] law. Ten Dollars In Cash Prizes

To School Girls and Boys for the best answers to the following question.

Now and then we have the wrong address, and consequently deliver goods to the wrong place. What would you do under these conditions?

This is one of our series of weekly questions, dealing with the problems, difficulties and unusual things that are met with in conducting a furniture business.

Open to all schoolgirls and schoolboys in the Southwest, not over 16 years of age. No obligation to purchase anything. Awards will be made for those answers which offer the most satisfactory solutions to the questions asked, in accordance with conditions as they apply to the business, same to be determined by Mr. W. A. Barker, President of Barker Bros.

$5.00 Cash for Best Answer. Five Additional Prizes, $1 Cash Each for the Next Five Best Answers.

Consult your fathers and mothers—ask them what they would do—and when you have decided what you think would be the best solution of our question, write us, clearly and briefly, your answer. Do not use any more than 150 or 200 words, write on one side of paper only, give the name of school you attend and grade, give your father's or mother's full name and address and sign your name. Answers to this week's question must be mailed to reach us not later than Thursday, December 7, 1916.

This contest is NOT open to the children of any employees of Barker Bros.

Solution of Last Week's Question: "Delivery of Goods When No One Home"

When a customer sets a date for delivery, our salesman cannot presume to ask him to be at home on that date. Consequently when we arrive at the house for delivery of the goods and find no one there, the question of what to do rests chiefly upon the judgment of the driver.

We try to obtain the telephone number of every customer and the driver goes to the nearest neighbor who has a telephone, and tries to telephone to the business address to see if he cannot locate either the customer or some means of access to the house. If it is a large load, the driver proceeds with other deliveries and returns later. Should this fail he consults with the neighbor about the delivery. They decide whether the goods should be placed on the front porch, back porch or garage, or left at the neighbor's house. Should this plan fail, he brings the goods back to our warehouse. In every case, however, he places a card under the customers' door, stating what we have done, and asks for further information.

In case of C. O. D.'s the driver rings up our Credit Dept. for instructions.

Beautiful Art Lamps:

What more acceptable Christmas remembrance than a lamp for the home? Such a gift is specially choice because it is at once decorative, practical and useful.

A Kimball for Christmas

KIMBALL

The Kimball is the pride and pleasure of nearly three hundred thousand good American homes. It is the one piano of prominence and position at a price you are prepared to pay.

The Perfect Kimball is without a superior in America or Europe. It has few equals. It is a brilliant leader in that small and exclusive group of pianos known as the better class.

Great musicians, Sousa, Damrosch, and hundreds of world-loved artists, use the Kimball and conscientiously recommend it. Myrtle Elvyn, the Premiere of American Pianistes, has chosen it as her piano for concert, conservatory and home.

The greatest expositions, from the World's Columbian at Chicago to the Panama-Pacific at San Francisco, have awarded the Kimball Highest Honors.

The Kimball is consistent. It is great.

Proven and chosen, time after time, not once, but always, the Kimball is named as the First Piano of America.

This is a good, not a "cheap" piano. It is a new, not a used piano. It is in many respects as good as pianos costing twice as much.

In musical quality, in the sweetness and purity of its tone, it is a revelation.

It is an honest, reliable piano through and through and it is guaranteed for ten years.

CALIFORNIA STOCK AT CHICAGO SHOW.

STUDENTS ENTER CONTEST TO JUDGE CATTLE.

University at Berkeley has Number of Sheep and Other Animals in the Exhibit Which is in Charge of Prof. True—Japanese Agency Especially Active.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 2.—Student stock judges, representing fifteen colleges from all parts of the United States and Canada, held the center of the stage at the International Livestock Exposition today. The show opened this morning and will continue until December 9.

Eighty students entered the contest. After making their selections each of the students were taken before a committee of prominent breeders and college authorities, where they gave their reasons for their selections. The result of the contest will not be announced until tomorrow.

The University of California has a number of sheep and cattle entered in the show, but did not send a judging team. The California exhibit is in charge of Prof. True, head of the animal industry department. This is the first time in the history of the stock show that California has sent entries. Prof. True said, however, that in 1913, the university entered a Shropshire lamb in the name of another exhibitor. The lamb went back to California carrying a blue ribbon around its neck. The California school hopes to carry away ribbons in proportion to its exhibit this year. They hope to do as well with their cattle.

Stock raisers from all parts of the world are on hand with a view to buying prize animals to take back to their farms. Among these is J. H. Guilford, who owns a ranch near Willows, Cal. He is here after some blue ribbon sheep to take back to California. He is one of the many admirers of the University of California sheep this afternoon. H. K. Ushhiku and T. T. Kofayashi of Tokio, agents of the Japanese government are here among the early arrivals. Both carried note books and made frequent notations regarding many of the animals they inspected. Mr. Ushhiku said that they came here to study live stock breeding and that in Japan breeders were endeavoring to build up their herds with a view to broadening their field of exportation of meat.

Bishop Brothers of San Ramon, Cal., occupy the entire south end of the sheep pavilion with their exhibition of Shropshires.

The judges will not begin their work until Monday.

Solemn Requiem.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Many Descendants of Europe's Central Powers Attend Mass at St. Vibiana's Cathedral, Celebrated in Honor of Late Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria.

Approximately 1000 persons gathered yesterday morning at 9 o'clock to honor the memory of Francis Joseph, late Emperor of Austria, by attending solemn requiem mass at St. Vibiana's Cathedral. The mass was celebrated by Rt. Rev. Patrick Harnett, V. G.

Mgr. Harnett was assisted by Father Brady, who officiated as deacon; Father Buckley, sub-deacon, and Father Fitzgerald, master of ceremonies. Most of the audience were of Austrian descent. Many Americans of German parentage were present. Masses were offered throughout the country by the Austrians and Hungarians for the late ruler of their country.

BENEFIT PERFORMANCE.

Woman's Court Plans to Raise Funds to Conduct Work Now Being Carried on by the Members Personally to Build Girls' Home.

To administer justice seasoned with mercy is the aim of the Woman's Court, which plans to give a benefit performance in January to help the unfortunate women who come under its supervision.

The scope of the Woman's Court is very broad in its plans to give timely help to those who need it, and as an institution it ranks first in dealing out practical charity. The court considers carefully the cases brought before it and, in case probation is recommended, the offender is given in charge of one of the members who becomes personally responsible for her welfare and behavior. She tries to get work for her protegee, and in order to do this it is often necessary to send the girl to another town, or provide for her room and board until she secures employment.

Up to the present time the ladies themselves have borne all such expenses, but, as the work of the court has become heavier, it has become a drain on the charitably-inclined women who have donated their services and financial aid. So it is planned to give a vaudeville performance, with the aid of local and professional talent, to raise a fund that may be used to defray expenses of travel and lodging for the girls brought before the court.

The women also plan to build a home for girls who are on probation so they may be better cared for while they are looking for work.

SOCIAL FAVORITE AS A LOAN SHARK.

SECRET OF KINGS' INTIMATE REVEALED IN COURT.

Elusive Career of Frank Jay Mackey, Millionaire Yachtsman, Polo Player and Member of the "Four Hundred" at Newport, is Based on Mortgages to Poor.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 2.—This story concerns the elusive Frank J. Mackey, millionaire yachtsman, polo player, social favorite and—loan shark! Mackey's exploits with the "four hundred" at Newport, his adventures with the King and Queen of England, his dazzling social flights in Continental Europe are known to every newspaper reader.

Not so well known, however, is the fact that the money which pays for all this gaiety is wrung from the poorer class of American wage-earners.

The Chicago headquarters for Mackey's chain of loan banks is located at No. 81 East Monroe street and is known as the Chicago Loan and Mortgage Company. Neither Mackey's name nor that of the company appear on the ground-glass panels of the doors. No name appears on these doors save that of Fred Huettmann, secretary and treasurer of the company.

Mackey never appears at this office. A Chicago locomotive engineer named Robert Hutcherson disclosed Mackey's identity with the lucrative loan industry and this in turn led to other revelations.

Hutcherson borrowed $50 from Mackey's office and paid back $77. He then borrowed $100 and paid back $133. He asked for a third loan of $175 and received $86 in cash, the remainder being applied on the balance he owed on the second loan.

His case, like many others, was called before Federal Judge Landis and the hidden skeleton in the company's darkest closet was brought into the glare of publicity.

STUDENTS PRESENT PLAY.

A three-act comedy, "The Dean of Tuscaloosa" was given by the Dramatic Club of St. Vincent's College, as its initial production of the season, at the Father Meyer Memorial Hall on Grand avenue near Washington, last Tuesday evening. Toyo Kisen Kaisha Will Operate Monthly Service of Steamers from Los Angeles Harbor to South American Ports. Is Building More Ships.

Announcement of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, the Japanese steamship company, has been received by D. F. Robertson, manager of the travel department, California Savings Bank, stating that, effective on the 22nd inst., it will begin the operation of a monthly service of steamers from Los Angeles Harbor to South American ports.

It is also announced that the company is completing plans for the construction of a shipyard in Japan and the building of seven new vessels. The company is now building two vessels, one of 25,000 tons and the other of 10,000 tons capacity. The total cost of the proposed ship building and the yards is placed at $18,500,000.

Los Angeles people who will leave San Francisco next Friday on the steamer Shinyo Maru, one of the vessels of this company, include Mrs. C. W. Clark, Mrs. Alice Clisbee, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wheeler, Miss Nellie Grant, J. J. Vosburg, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Shutts, J. E. Killain, Mrs. K. Ikeuchi and family and Mr. and Mrs. John F. Walters. On arrival in Japan, the party will proceed by automobile through Japan, thence traveling through Korea and Manchuria to Peking, China, and then to the Philippines.

HE TROUNCES BURGLAR.

Court-street Man Finds Unwelcome Visitor Ransacking Silver Chest and Pummels Him Until He Dashes Out, Only to be Captured by Police.

C. W. McFarlane entertained a burglar in his home at No. 419 Court street early yesterday morning with a short but successful exhibition of boxing that caused the intruder to run for his life.

Mr. McFarlane surprised the man while he was ransacking the silver chest, and immediately started to pummel his face. The burglar tried to fight back, but could make no impression on the fighting house-owner.

During the fracas Mr. McFarlane's father, in another room, called for the poice. Just as they arrived, the burglar dashed out of the house flying from the fists of McFarlane. Detectives Greeley, James and Davidson caught the man after a short chase. At police headquarters he gave the name of Archie Stewart, but refused to talk.

CITY POWER SUPREMACY IS OFFICIAL FORECAST.

Proposed Merger of Two Great Southern Electric Companies Greeted with Joy as Paving the Way for Greatest Municipal Plant of its Kind—Consolidation Financing Revealed.

LOS ANGELES will have the largest municipal power plant in the world when the deal now pending with the Southern California Edison Company and the Pacific Light and Power Corporation goes through, John W. Kemp, a member of the Board of Public Service Commissioners and of the city's power committee, said yesterday.

It will be in a position before very long to develop 100,000 horse power, asserted President Betkouski of the City Council, another member of the committee. Both also spoke optimistically of the proposed merger of the two companies. The combined result will be that the city will have the world's greatest municipal power plant and Southern California will have one of the largest electric operating companies in America, they declare.

"The two deals will be of vast benefit to this section of the country," Commissioner Kemp stated. "The merger means there will be a large amount of additional capital brought in and it also means the industrial development of Southern California by cheap power. It will be of great benefit to laborers, opening up new channels for their employment and the bringing in of new capital should result in better wages being paid."

EVERYBODY INTERESTED.

As 95 per cent. of the people of Los Angeles use electricity they are vitally interested in the consummation of the negotiations and they will get the benefit of lower rates, President Betkouski said. "This deal will make it possible for the city to reduce the present electric light rates and power rates," he stated. "I believe the reduction can be 15 per cent. to domestic consumers. Instead of a 5-cent. rate they will be able to get a rate of 4½ cents per kilowatt hour."

Commissioner Kemp will confer with the representatives of the power corporations tomorrow and the Public Service Commissioners expect to receive a formal acceptance of the city's offer from the companies not later than Tuesday.

FINANCING PLAN.

The Edison company will take over 95 per cent. of the capital stock of the Pacific Light and Power Corporation and assume its bonded indebtedness of $25,000,000. The stocks, bonds and notes to be taken over have a face value of $31,880,298. The Edison company will issue $12,029,900 of its 5 per cent. second preferred stock and give $4,000,000 in cash on account of the purchase of the stocks and bonds and will also issue $11,152,200 of its common stock to the Pacific Light and Power Corporation, which will remain in the treasury of that corporation. By reason of its ownership of 95 per cent. of the stock of the Pa Light and Power Corporation, wh it will acquire from H. E. Hun ton, the Edison company wil reality own nearly all of this $11,152,000 of common stock, so th the final analysis only approxima ly $550,000 of this will be actu outstanding as capital.

Mr. Huntington will become largest individual stockholder in Southern California Edison Co pany by reason of his ownership more than $12,000,000 of its preferred stock.

BENEFICIAL.

That the taxpayers will be relie of all taxation now necessary paying the interest and the sink fund on the outstanding bond, result of the taking over of the L Angeles distributing systems by city, is the further assertion of Kemp.

"The income will be sufficient pay the interest and sinking on the bonds to purchase the dis uting systems from the power panies and also further bonds essary for the development of city's power projects along the of the aqueduct," he said.

"It eliminates the waste by competition, the pole nuis and the necessity of tearing up downtown streets to lay un ground conduits. Practically street would have to be torn up der competitive conditions."

INVESTMENTS.

A large amount of the new ca will be invested in the further velopment of the Southern Cal nia Edison Company and the Pa Light and Power Corporation, cording to Mr. Kemp.

The commissioner says the bination of all hydro-electric pow generated by the companies toge with that to be by the city will m that there will be ample power tribution in Southern California large industrial enterprises a cheap price.

"While the power enterprise is result of the building of the aq duct," said Mr. Kemp "the inc from the power department for first year will be almost double income from the power departm by the purchase of the distribu systems and the city obtaining practical monopoly."

BLOWING GLASS AT Torrance

The Modern Industrial City

The most wonderful sight in Southern California—dazzling in the glowing intensity of heat and light, marvelous in the dexterity, and skill and strength of the men, absorbingly interesting in the process of turning dead, inert substances like sand, and lime, coal and ash into clear, sparkling transparent GLASS is to be seen at the factory of the TORRANCE WINDOW GLASS COMPANY.

See the great furnace, heated by natural gas, in which the ingredients are mixed, combined and purified at the tremendous heat of 3200 DEGREES FAHRENHEIT.

See the molten glass, flowing like taffy, in a whirling flow of incandescent LIGHT, glowing in a soft luminescence of its own.

See the glass maker dip his blow pipe into this inferno of heat, pick up the melted glass, form it into a ball, keep that ball in perfect shape by steady whirling, until he has SEVENTY POUNDS and more at the end of four feet of steel.

And then—with a dexterity greater than that of any juggler, with a suppleness of mighty muscles exceeding that of the "strong man" of vaudeville, with a strength and steadiness of lung power for which there is no comparison—see this man blow that sphere of glass into a mighty wonderful BUBBLE.

The picture shows this process just well started. He swings the great crystal bubble back and forth so that centrifugal force may keep the fibers flowing evenly through the whole fabric; he shapes it by dextrous twists and swings and turns. He handles the seventy pounds of weight as though it was but a bubble. Only by seeing the swing of muscles can you realize that this bubble is HEAVY.

The bubble grows, takes shape, becomes a perfect cylinder 80 inches long and two feet in diameter, exactly the same thickness, in every part. And then—most wonderful of all—see this cylinder split open, see it rolled out, in flaming heat and smoothed into a perfect; monster sheet of glass, as a laundress irons a handkerchief.

To arrange to see this, in the day, or in the evening, the greatest spectacle in or about the city of Los Angeles, all that you have to do is to make your arrangements with JOHN S. DAGGETT, Manager Torrance Office, Thomas D. Campbell & Company. Telephone Torrance ONE (Sunset), or go directly to his office, opposite Pacific Electric Station, next to Postoffice.

GLASS is only one of the marvels of Torrance. Schedule your next automobile trip to Torrance and you will come home to tell your friends that you have seen the most interesting, the most important and the most thought-provoking feature of the whole Los Angeles region.

Here is a residence city in which every attention has been directed to design, to convenience, to health and education. To be the most beautiful city in California. See the miles of parked and paved streets, the parks and lawns and flowers, the bungalows of tasteful, elegant, convenient design, the "little farms" within walking distance of the shops.

See the great shops of the Union Tool Company, where 362 men are at work making gas engines and oil well machinery; see the great new steel plant of the Llewellyn Iron Works, running day and night, lighting the whole heavens when the great crane lifts 35 tons of molten steel and pours into ingot moulds. One hundred and eighty-five men work here now, and construction work has only fairly begun. See the active factory of the Hendrie Rubber Company to which materials flow from points 5000 miles away, to make tires which roll back to eager markets, again 5000 miles distant, as well as in Los Angeles. Sixty-four men work here.

See the big shops of the Pacific Metal Products Company, making tractors and steel barrels. See the Torrance Pearl Factory where delicate and beautiful articles are made from the jewels of the Pacific Ocean.

of the speakers this evening has either said or intimated, that our long-standing and delightful friendship with the people of France has come from a community of ideals and identity of purpose. One republic must love another republic just as one body of human beings must understand and sympathise with another body of human beings. There is a common pulse in us all; there is a common contact with life; there is a common body of hope; there is a common stock of resolution. All the world over the life of the individual means the same thing to him. It means opportunity not only, but it also means his relationship to others and he comes to his full dignity only when he stands upon the level with others and looking in his neighbor's eye knows that he belongs with him to a common, free community of purpose and thought and action. The peace of the world is not going to be assured bv the compact of nations, but by the sympathies of men.

"When I see the Statue of Liberty and think of the thrill that must come into some hopeful heart as for the first time an immigrant sees that statue and thinks that he knows what it means, I wonder if after he lands he finds the spirit of liberty truly represented by us; I wonder if we were worthy of that symbol; I wonder if we are sufficiently stirred by the history of what it means; I wonder if we remember the sacrifices, the actual concessions, the righteous yielding of selfish right that is signified by the word and the conception of liberty.

"I wonder if we all wish to accord equal rights to all men, and so it is profitable that occasions like this should be frequently repeated, and that we should remind ourselves of what sort of image we have promised to be; for the world is enlightened, my fellow citizen, by ideals, by ideas. The spirit of the world rises with the sacrifices of men; rises as men forget to be selfish and unite to be great.

"This, to repeat that beautiful phrase of Lincoln in his Gettysburg address, is not a time of self-adulation, but a time of rededication. Let us determine that the light that shines out of our lives upon the uplifted image of liberty shall be a light pure and without reproach."

The President was the last speaker at the banquet, which was attended by 1200 men and women. One of the notable features of the evening was the reading of a message from President Poincare of France, sent to the French Ambassador, J. Jusserand, in apreciation of Liberty's illumination. In the message he said:

"In offering, thirty years ago, to the government and people of the United States, the statue which welcomes and lights those who land in America, France had wished to honor liberty and the heroes fallen in her cause. It is for that sacred cause the French people battle and suffer today; they feel sure that they can always count on those friends of theirs in America from whom they have already received so many tokens of sympathy and who have shown the world that they are still enamored of the same ideal."

NAVAL SALUTE.

The great guns of a division of the Atlantic fleet boomed a salute as the statue flashed into view, outlined in white lights. The whistles of countless harbor craft shrieked in unison and flares of red light blazed up along the New York and New Jersey shores.

There was a flash of flame high above the statue and Ruth Law, in her aeroplane, added a spectacular touch to the ceremonies of illumination. Spouting sparks and fire from the tail of her machine, she circled the lower end of Manhattan Island. A roar of cheers from the thousands gathered in Battery Park greeted her as the letters "L-I-B-E-R-T-Y" outlined in electric lights were revealed on the bottom of the airplane.

The course of the Mayflower was marked by the rays of the most powerful searchlight in the world as the yacht's anchor was hoisted and the Presidential party headed for the Battery to disembark for the motor car parade which preceded a dinner in honor of Mr. Wilson and Ambassador Jusserand.

BILLION DOLLAR SKYLINE.

The party on the Mayflower looked out upon a city of lights. New York's "billion dollar skyline" literally was ablaze. A searchlight played upon a floating flag atop a lofty building and lights gleamed along the seawall.

Close behind the Mayflower steamed the U.S.S. San Francisco with Secretary of the Navy Daniels aboard, followed by the U.S.S. Yankton, carrying members of Mayor Mitchel's committee of 200 and other invited guests. The passengers were discharged at the Battery, where electric [illegible] cars were waiting to [illegible] uptown.

DIVIDE HONORS IN THE WIXON SUIT.

SOCIETY LEADER KEEPS HER THREE CHILDREN.

She Gets Twenty-five Thousand Dollars from Family Estate—He will Have Full Control of His Property After this Payment. Divorcee Here.

Mrs. Chester A. Wixon of Hollywood, wife of Chester Wixon, owner of the public utilities of Rhinelander, Wis., divided honors with her husband in the divorce courts at Rhinelander yesterday. While she was divorced by her husband, failing to contest his suit, she gained custody of her three children and the sum of $25,000 from the family estate. The divorce was granted, according to reports from Milwaukee, all because of a fracas at a party at Rhinelander when it is alleged, Mrs. Wixon threw a cup of hot coffee in the face of her spouse.

Mr. Wixon will have full control of his property after the payment of the sum of $25,000 as this was given in full settlement of any claim the wife might have on the property. Any further provision for the children must be made by the father of his own free will out of court.

Mrs. Wixon, who was a leader in social affairs in her home town, is now residing in Hollywood, where she has become one of the well-known young matrons. Her children are to be educated in the Hollywood schools.

Mr. Wixon is owner of the Rhinelander electric light plant, which provides private residences as well as the city with illumination. The plant is rated as worth more than $125,000, and he has other valuable holdings, including a $6000 residence at Rhinelander. He receives an income of $2000 for managing the plant he owns in addition to his dividends, it was testified in court.

Gen. M. H. Sherman is Host at Gathering of Friends at Clark Hotel to Honor San Franciscans and Vice President of Union Pacific

Gen. M. H. Sherman was the host at an elaborate luncheon given at the Clark Hotel yesterday in honor of Alfred Holman, editor of the Argonaut, San Francisco; Messrs. George W. Scott, and Charles E. Green, of the Crocker National Bank, San Francisco, and H. V. Platt, vice president of the Union Pacific Railroad Company.

The guests were seated at an immense round table, and here good followship reigned untrammeled for more than two hours. There were no formal speeches, but many a merry story and humorous quip, yet withal there was considerable discussion of the affairs of the day.

Besides the host and guests mentioned above, there were present: H. W. O'Melveny, attorney and member of the Municipal Park Commission; Stoddard Jess, of the First National Bank; Max F. Ihmsen; J. J. Byrne, general passenger agent of the Santa Fe; Newton H. Foster, purchasing agent of the Salt Lake Railroad; Reese Llewellyn, of the Llewellyn Iron Works; M. S. Hellman, of the Security Trust and Savings Bank; S. F. Zombro, of the Citizens' National Bank; J. A. Graves of the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank; Gen. Harrison Gray Otis, Frank A. Miller, of the Glenwood Mission Inn, Riverside; H. J. Whitley, William M. Humphreys, I. L. Hibbard, general superintendent of the Santa Fe Railroad; W. B. Scott, president of the Columbia Oil Producing Company; J. B. Van Nuys; A. M. Jamison, of the Santa Catalina Island Company, and Harry Chandler.

RICH CHINAMAN DIES.

Wong Sue Chong, 69 years old, proprietor of the Mon-Jen Low restaurant on Apablasa street in Chinatown, died last evening at the Pacific Hospital of heart trouble. Wong Sue Chong, who was known as "Chappa," which means Shorty in Chinese, was one of the best known characters in Chinatown. He leaves one brother here and a family in China. He is reputed to have been worth at least $25,000. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

RUSSIA'S NEED TO AID BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made that at a meeting of the Council of Ministers in Petrograd a decision was passed permitting the importation of sugar from abroad into Russia free of all duty until September 1, 1917. The quantity of sugar allowed to pass into Russia from all the frontiers is not to exceed 20,000,000 poods and sugar after importation from abroad will be subject to the regular excise tax of 2 rubles 80 kopecs per pood, which is an increase of 80 kopecs.

It is well known Russia consumes an enormous amount of sugar and the lifting of the bars for imports should result in a heavy demand from this country. The foreign demand has been responsible for the high price of sugar in the United States during the past year and a half. In fact, it was only the placing of embargoes on the importation of sugar by a number of the allied countries that has prevented the situation from growing acute at times.

The lifting of this embargo by Russia, as announced above, will probably have a bullish influence on prices, when a decline due to the advent of the new crop of raw sugar in Cuba was expected. Foreign cables state there is a great demand for sugar in the dominions of the Czar at the present time, and an especial call for confectioner's sugar for use in candy factories. Thus, in all probability, Russia will be such a heavy consumer of the Cuban crop, that its marketing will have no effect on the present standard of sugar prices in this country.

This means the United States consumer can look forward to possible continued high prices. However, what is one's loss is another's gain, and if the consumer is forced to pay fancy prices for sugar, these fancy prices will mean an increased profit for sugar beet growers of the West and particularly California. Shipments can be made direct from the Pacific Coast ports to Siberia and thence by rail to European Russia. This should have the effect of stimulating the beet sugar industry of the Golden State, which is already on a firm basis of prosperity.

Thomas A. Edison

EDISON'S SECRET

Music Re-Creation is Mr. Edison's most sublime gift to the world.

Many have asked, what is the secret of this miracle of art. By what wizardry has the master inventor made genuine music a universal possession?

That is Mr. Edison's own secret, worked out behind the locked doors of his laboratory—after five years of incessant experimenting—toiling eighteen and twenty hours a day—delving into the very depths of chemistry. The secret is HIS, and rightfully.

But the fruit of his labor is YOURS—YOURS, with which to live and enjoy and grow in the broader world which good music reveals.

The new EDISON DIAMOND DISC PHONOGRAPH

As the critics say—

"—It is enough to know that the master inventor has given to the world, at last, an instrument whose music cannot be distinguished from the living tone. A miracle, it seems—but TRUE." Actual tests have repeatedly proved it. Over two hundred severe newspaper critics have publicly proclaimed it a FACT.

MOTHER! LOOK AT YOUR CHILD'S TONGUE

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Constipated—They Love It.

Watch Children Now! Guard Against Colds, Grippe, Sore Throat and Sickness by Keeping Liver and Bowels Free from Poisons.

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has the grippe, or a sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "Calofirnia Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation, poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. See that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't merely ask for Syrup of Figs, but ask for "California Syrup of Figs." Remember, "California."

SOCIETY MATRON BETTER.

After Grave Operation Mrs. W. W. Mines Rallies Favorably.

The condition of Mrs. W. W. Mines, prominent society matron and wife of the president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, who underwent a grave major operation at the Good Samaritan Hospital Thanksgiving Day, was reported to be very favorable last night.

The operation was performed by Dr. E. C. Moore and Dr. W. A. Edwards shortly after 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The patient rallied and has been resting as well as could be expected ever since. Mr. Mines is constantly at his wife's bedside. He is the only one allowed in the sick room with the exception of the nurse and doctors, although her mother has been allowed to see her.

EQUALITY FOR RACES.

Americans Should Treat Foreign Born who Come Here as Strangers and Develop into Good Citizens in a Human Way, Declares Dr. Shiels.

Americans should purge themselves of patronages when dealing with foreigners, who come here first as strangers and then become residents and citizens, said Dr. Albert Shiels' superintendent of schools, who spoke on "The Foreign Born," at the City Club luncheon yesterday.

Dr. Shiels urged that the foreigners be treated in a natural, human way and Americans, who themselves were descended from people who came from foreign countries, should not adopt a superior attitude toward them.

With Judge Myers, president of the City Club, Dr. Shiels will attend the exercises at Los Angeles High School, Thursday night when a large classe of foreigners will receive certificates of citizenship. Former Judge Bordwell will present the certificates and Rabbi S. Hecht will deliver an address.

Busted Romance.

MARRIAGE BROKER IS SUING FOR HIS FEE.

MATCH WASN'T WORTH PAYING FOR, SAYS BRIDEGROOM.

Bride Secured Through "Get Acquainted Club" Packs Clothes and Departs, and Deserted Man Doesn't Feel Like Putting up Good Coin to Wedding Promoter.

The end of a shriveled romance, emanating from a matrimonial agency, came to light yesterday when Benjamin W. Padley, a marriage broker, entered suit in the Justice Court to collect a fee of $5 from Charles Patton of No. 2418 Marengo street.

Mr. Patton, a widower well beyond middle age, becoming enamored of the idea of another wife, wrote to B. W. Padley, seeking his co-operation in this direction. The latter conducts a "get-acquainted" club at No. 521 West Tenth street.

"I wish to become a member of your club and I herewith subscribe to one year's membership. If through this medium I shall find one with whom I unite in marriage I will pay an additional $5," is what Patton wrote, and is the basis on which Mr. Padley is suing.

The aged man sat around the matrimonial club for a time, became acquainted with a widow and married her about last June. It was not long before the new Mrs. Patton apparently tired of her spouse, for she packed up her clothes and departed for some place unknown.

When the matrimonial agent came around to collect his fee about this time, Patton assured him the woman he married was not worth the $5 that was demanded. After considerable haggling the match-maker finally declared he would take the matter to court, and yesterday made good on his threat.

In Trouble.

A DOUBLE LIFE?

Police Investigating the Report that a Man Who Sold Shoes by Day also Operated as an Expert Automobile Bandit at Night Time.

Complications that may develop into a startling denouement for Edward Jones, beau brummel and suspected burglar, yesterday caused the police to investigate the report that the prisoner, now held in the City Jail, lived as a respectable shoe salesman by day, and employed his nights as an expert auto bandit.

Jones, who is 27 years old, was arrested several days ago on a charge of shoplifting. He gave bail and was rearrested on a charge of suspicion of burglary. He was on his way to the bank, where his deposit showed a balance of $7000, with Detective Walter Woods, when a passing well-dressed woman stopped the pair and identified Jones as the driver of the bandit car that robbed her home in Hollywood several weeks ago. The woman refused to give her name, but volunteered to be on hand when the case comes to trial.

Jones was arrested at No. 624 South Figuroa street. He said he lived at No. 924 Potter Park avenue.

SOLDIERS ON BORDER DU SUFFER MONOTONY.

The Red Cross Calls for Read- ing Matter, Writing Material and Games to Furnish the Holida Cheer and a Hearty Respon is Anticipated.

Maj.-Gen. Arthur Murray, U.S (retired,) former acting chairm of the Central Committee of American Red Cross, is now on Mexican border and has just s mitted a report showing that, w there is no physical suffering am the troops there, the long-contin monotony of camp life in isolat places is a very real hardship t the Red Cross can do much to leviate. He has visited many of camps and discussed the matter w a large number of officers of grades and branches of the serv

While, he says, the troops are cupied as far as possible in d and other military duties there necessarily many empty hours w weather conditions and other cumstances leave them unemplo and at every point in his itine there was a universal demand reading matter, writing material a games. As these articles can be tained in large quantities at v little cost, the Red Cross has out a call for books, magazines (p ticularly complete sets and b volumes,) pens, pencils, ink, e lopes and writing paper, puzzles such games as chess, checkers back gammon.

There are, as a rule, 100 soldie a company, and it is suggested each box contain at least one p age for each soldier. All pack should be wrapped carefully daintily, marked with a card sent or taken to the office of the Angeles Chapter of the Ame Red Cross, or addressed pla packed securely and sent, exp prepaid, or by parcel post, as lows:

Mexican Formally Accused of Committing a Murder—He Denies, but Three Alleged Companions Take Officers to Burial Place.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, Dec. 2.—Faced with the bones of the man he is alleged to have slain four years ago, P. Magdelina, a jitney bus operator and restaurant proprietor, sat calmly in the Sheriff's office tonight and refused to impart anything in reply to questions of Deputy District Attorney Ben F. Warmer and Sheriff J. L. McMinn. The remains of Jesus Matrona, whom three Mexicans, who are held as witnesses against Magdelina, say was murdered by him as a result of a quarrel over a poker game in a county road camp in Santa Ana Canyon in 1912, were exhumed today when the three Mexicans took officers to the grave near Bellyache Spring above Clark's ranch. The gruesome display of bones seemed to make little impression on Magdelina, who denied his guilt. One of the witnesses declares that he helped Magdelina carry the body of Matrona to the grave and was threatened with death if he ever told of the murder. The bones of both legs from the knee down are still incased in the high boots which Matrona wore when he was stabbed. Magdelina will be formally charged with murder Monday.

GETS A JUDGMENT AGAINST AUTOIST.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, Dec. 2.—After deliberating thirty minutes, a jury awarded Clarence D. Rankin, who was struck by an automobile driven by Bert F. Starry a year ago, a total of $5391 damages. Starry's wife, Alice Starry, was made a co-defendant with him in an action for $25,000 damages brought by T. M. Holliday as guardian ad litem for Starry. While attempting to cross Market street, according to the testimony, Rankin was struck by Starry's car. Among the injuries sustained was a fractured skull and four broken ribs.

CLUB WOMAN DIES AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, Dec. 2.—Mrs. Stella Hicks Shaver, wife of H. G. Shaver of this city, member of the Wednesday Morning Club and a woman much beloved in the community, died at the home of Mr. Shaver's sister at Pasadena last night, a few hours after he had left the sick woman's bedside in the belief that she had taken a turn for the better. She is survived by two daughters, students in the Girls' High School, and two sisters, Mrs. W. R. Dowler of San Bernardino and Miss Louamie Hicks, a trained nurse, who cared for Mrs. Shaver during her last serious illness.

QUARANTINE WITH AID OF SHOTGUNS.

The action was taken when it was learned one man was dead and four were dying in the Mexican quarter from smallpox.

The health officer found a dozen other Mexicans ill, and they were not expected to recover. The white residents of the town were vaccinated.

INDIANS PLAN FUNERAL PYRE.

Strange and Novel Ritual to be Given.

Invitations Issued Written Upon Bark.

Ceremonies will Begin Next Monday at Sunrise.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BEAUMONT, Dec. 2.—Elaborate preparations are being made by the Indians living on the Morongo reservation, located a few miles east of Beaumont, for a week of memorial services for their dead. There are more than 250 members of the Morongo band on the reservation and as invitations are being sent to all of the other Indian tribes in Southern California to attend and take part in the services the attendance is expected to be large, in keeping with the importance of the event in the list of religious observances followed by the Indian race.

FUNERAL PYRE.

Featuring the various ceremonies of the week, each of which has deep religious significance, will be the lighting and burning of a large funeral pyre. Dolls will be dressed to represent the bodies of such departed ones as it is particularly desired to honor. No expense is spared in costuming these dolls, various bands and families vying with each other in thus paying honor to certain favored departed spirits. After the fire is lighted the dolls are cast into the flames and, while they are being consumed the tribal orators in a wierd, sing-song tone, recount the prowess and heroic deeds of the mighty chiefs who have gone before.

TRIBAL DANCES.

Almost equally impressive are the tribal dances and chants which will also form prominent parts of the programme during the week. Most of the dances will be held at night and will be witnessed by many white visitors.

The week's ceremonies will begin on Monday, December 4, and will close with a sunrise service on Sunday, December 10. The beautiful "dance to the sun," it is expected, will be given at this closing ceremony. Custom requires that all of the Indians present participate in this tribute to one of their principal gods.

INVITATIONS ON BARK.

True to the traditions of their race, the invitations being sent to neighboring tribes are fashioned on the bark of trees and are printed in the sign languages, familiar only to those well versed in Indian lore. Modern means of transportation are scorned by the Indian messengers, who are carrying the invitations on foot, or in cases where the distance is extreme, are mounted bareback on ponies. The messengers are attired in full tribal costume from feathered headpiece to beaded mocassins.

William Pablo, chief of the Indian police, is at the head of the committee arranging for the ceremonial.

COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS TREE IS PLANNED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

AZUSA, Dec. 2.—Two score representatives of every organization of Azusa met at the City Hall to discuss plans for a municipal Christmas tree and holiday celebration. The plan first broached by Mayor Roach was enthusiastically accepted and committees appointed to carry on the work.

A huge evergreen tree will be erected in the fountain of Library Park and a programme of Christmas music will be given on Friday night preceding Christmas. The tree will be lighted every evening during the holiday week and on New Year's eve will glow until midnight as a beacon for the dawn of 1917.

OXNARD, Dec. 3.—Having manufactured 1,150,000 bags of sugar, about 250,000 more than any previous season, the American Beet Sugar Company's factory here closed for this season last night.

The increased production is due partly to the unusually high percentage of sugar in this year's beets and to the increased acreage, particularly in the San Fernando Valley.

JUNE DROP CAUSED BY PECULIAR FUNGUS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Dec. 2.—Experiments which were conducted here this season by P. J. S. Montgomery, who owns one of the largest orange groves in El Mirador, north of here, apparently has fully verified the announcement from the University of California that the so-called "june drop" of oranges is caused by a fungus. If these experiments are further borne out by more extensive work the annual saving to orchardists of this county will reach more than $1,000,000.

Montgomery declares that last spring he treated a portion of his orchard with a recognized brand of fungicide, and later in the season sprayed it again. On these trees thus treated, he says, practically every orange remained, and many of the trees required half a dozen props to keep them from breaking down. The trees averaged about twice the fruit on those untreated, and from which the oranges dropped about as usual.

Preparations are being made by a large number of the growers to use fungicides in their orchards on a large scale this year.

HOME OF ISLAND KING BLOWN AWAY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VENTURA, Dec. 2.—Capt. Webster, who is King of Anacapa Island by reason of a lease from the United States government, had his home at Webster harbor on Anacapa carried away in bits, by the heavy wind which struck the harbor recently.

All that remains of the house is the concrete floor, the building was situated on a low ridge which forms the backbone of the island, when the wind came down from the mainland, it simply picked up the house, completely demolishing it. Mrs. Webster with their two sons was away at the time of the occurrence. Mr. Webster will rebuild.

KRUTTSCHNITT BOOSTS PORTERVILLE DISTRICT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Dec. 2.—"Another Southern California, with Porterville occupying the position in relation to it that Los Angeles does in the south—that is what you will have here one day." This was the statement of Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the board of directors of the Harriman lines, on a tour of inspection of new interurban extensions tributary to Porterville. Mr. Kruttschnitt's prediction was made after he had been taken to the summit of Breen Hill, just south of the city limits, from which point of vantage he could see orange orchards for miles in every direction.

With Mr. Kruttschnitt was President Sproule and Vice-President Campbell of the Espee system. They declared there will be no delay in carrying out plans for further extensions of their interurban lines in the southern portion of Tulare county.

SHY OF APPLES, SEEK ORANGES.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Dec. 3.—Representatives of apple firms, who are large factors in the market in North Yakima and other Washington and Oregon districts, are here making a study of the orange situation, with the purpose, they say, of handling some of the Tulare county crop. Due to the damage done the late apple crop in Washington it will be impossible for them to supply their trade with Christmas apples and they propose to sell them Porterville district oranges instead.

According to statements made by some of the fruit brokers who are investigating here, a serious car shortage retarded picking of the late varieties of apples in many parts of Washington, the early freeze caught much of the fruit, and the resulting loss to the growers of the State will aggregate more than $3,000,000.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Dec. 2.—Four heavy earthquake shocks of a local nature were felt here yesterday afternoon. Vibrations were from east to west, extending to the ocean front, nine miles distant. People rushed from buildings. Shocks were heaviest on the coast, where everything movable was jarred from shelves, much glassware and china being broken. At Avila plaster shook from the cottages of the Union Oil Company, and some stacks at the refinery toppled over.

Port San Luis Obispo had a large landslide in Dairy Canyon, along the tracks of the Pacific Coast Company. Small slides are being removed by the section gangs.

BIG PUMPKIN FIELD.

San Fernando Rancher Finds Profit in Raising the Common Garden Pumpkin for the Cannery; Seeds from Prize Winner at St. Louis Fair.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VAN NUYS, Dec. 2.—"Some pumpkins," exclaimed every one who sees the field grown by Joe Robinson at Van Nuys. Pumpkins of the common or garden variety have always been sneezed at more or less, but the fact remains that pumpkins are a profitable crop.

Twenty to thirty tons to the acre, without irrigation, is not an exceptional crop and they pay $3.50 per ton in the field and $4 delivered on cars at the present time. Pencil and paper will prove that this will yield about $100 per acre. Not so bad, when you consider that there is nothing to planting pumpkins otherwise than just sticking the seeds in the ground.

One grown by Joe Robinson weighs 140 pounds, and there are literally thousands in the field that will weigh over 100 pounds each.

Thousands are being used for canning purposes at the canning plant in Van Nuys, and the stockmen from all over the country come here to buy them. The large specimen shown in the picture is a member of the F.F.V.'s of the pumpkin family, having been produced from a direct descendant of the famous 450-pound prize-winning pumpkin at the St. Louis Exposition, seeds from which sold for $1 per seed. Mr. Robinson purchased six at the time and is now in possession of several pounds of this excellent variety of seed.

The shell or meat of this particular kind is from six to twelve inches thick.

YOUNGEST LIFE GUARD IN ALL THE WORLD.

REDONDO BEACH, Dec. 2.—This city claims the distinction of having the youngest life guard in the world. Little Edward Dodge, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Dodge, of this city, aged 4 years, is the champion overhand, backstroke, under stroke and high diver, in his class.

Ray Henderson, life guard of this city, has put little Edward through all the tests of life guard service and claims he can stand the actual proof and meet the requirements. He can swim forty feet in less than one minute and can tow 162 pounds, when rescuing a man, supposed to have drowned. He seems to be fearless and is anxious to make high dives from the springboard. Ray Henderson, his tutor, claims the youngster will be a wonder and will not let him try the high dive, for fear that he will be hurt and be afraid afterwards.

GIVES BULLOCK FOR BARBECUE.

Railroad Entrance to Town Cause of Celebration.

Ancient Valley to Listen to Toot of Engine.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FALLBROOK, Nov. 29.—By courtesy of Jerome O'Neil of the great Santa Margarita ranch, extending from the San Luis Rey River at Oceanside on the south, to the Orange county line on the north, and to within a short distance of the townsite of Fallbrook on the east, the fattest bullock of the domain will be slaughtered for the barbecue to be held in connection with the celebration of the completion of the Santa Fe railway from Oceanside to Fallbrook early in the new year.

Months ago, when the agitation was on for the discarding of the old route of the Santa Fe up the Temecula Canyon, from a point near the Santa Margarita ranch-house, with the depot site in the canyon, nearly two miles west of the townsite, and instead the adoption of an easy grade out of the canyon and leading into the townsite itself, the proposition was heartily indorsed by Mr. O'Neil, who co-operated with the people of Fallbrook in interesting the officials of the Santa Fe to make the change.

When the building of the line over the new route was assured Mr. O'Neil promised Fallbrook that it should have the fattest steer on his ranch for the barbecue of the celebration. The bullock is now retained on a special diet, subject to the call of the Fallbrook Commercial Club, under whose auspices the celebration is to take place, and which is making active preparations for the event. According to President H. V. Alexander of the club, it is the intention of the town "to put the big pot in the little one, close up shop, throw the keys of the city away and have one high old time."

With the celebration of the coming of the railway will be coupled that of the installation of an olive factory, a packing-house for the Citrus Union and the entrance of the electric light and power utilities, the current being brought from the plant of the San Diego Consolidated Gas and Electric Company at San Diego. Fallbrook will start the new year with bright prospects.

MISSING BEER.

When Court Held Evidence was Insufficient Plaintiff Tried to Find the Beer Which the Officers Seized When They Made the Arrest.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Dec. 2.—Whether or not the City Council will be compelled to pay for three dozen bottles of the brand of beer which is alleged to have established the reputation of Milwaukee, together with as many pint flasks of whisky, is the weighty problem which has been put up to the City Attorney for solution. Last week the city police officers raided the home of W. W. Welch, a nurseryman, resident of Garden street, and seized the liquor on the allegation that he had been violating the liquor laws. Judge Schuhl dismissed the case for lack of evidence. The court ordered the liquor returned to Welch. Then it was discovered that the beer and whisky could not be found. Attorneys for Welch have filed a claim against the city for the value of the liquids. Members of the Council have ordered an investigation.

ZIGZAGGING ON ROAD CAUSES AUTO SMASH.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

OXNARD, Dec. 2.—One automobile was demolished, a second badly smashed up, and six people had narrow escapes from serious injury in a head-on collision yesterday evening. In one car were Joe Bordenare and Peter Fondre of Oxnard, in the other were Harry Tico and Harold Duckham of Oxnard and Misses Anne McAdams and Helen Short of Ventura. Tico claims that Bordenare was zigzagging in the road and that he could not miss him. Miss Short and Duckham were thrown some distance from the telescoping cars and sustained considerable injury. Duckham's head struck on a sharp rock and a gash to the bone was cut from his forehead to his neck. Bordenare was pinned between the two autos and was crushed and bruised.

PALM FRUIT RANCH BRINGS BIG PRICE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Dec. 2.—One of the largest real estate transfers to be reported in the past several months was in the sale of the Palm fruit ranch of 640 acres in deciduous fruits and alfalfa, situated in the Wasco district, south of here, which was sold to M. Henderson and associates of Los Angeles.

The property formerly was controlled by a syndicate of Southern California owners, who received $250 per acre for the tract. For the past two years it has been under lease to a Japanese partnership. The fruit crop of last season, it was stated, brought in $50,000 to the tenants.

AND ENVIRONS.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

"Prayer; Its Rationale."

Mrs. Fannie F. Young will give a lecture this evening in the headquarters of the Los Angeles Lodge of the Theosophical Society, Blanchard Building, on the subject of "Prayer; Its Rationale." The public is invited.

For Catholic University.

In all the Catholic churches of the diocese of Monterey and Los Angeles today collections will be taken for the Catholic University of America. The purpose is to help raise a fund for the extension of the work of the university.

Overseas Club Ball.

The British Overseas Club will give its annual masquerade ball on Wednesday evening in the Fraternal Brotherhood Hall, Lincoln and Figueroa streets. Four prizes are to be awarded, two to the most original ladies' and gentlemen, and two to the most descriptive costumes. All "Britishers" are invited.

Druid Benefit Ball.

Called upon to help a worthy cause the Druids and their friends responded in large numbers at the benefit ball given by Magnolia Grove No. 97, United Ancient Order of Druids, last Friday night. A Druids' evening was recorded on the committee's calendar, which will encourage them to greater efforts. Dancing was indulged in and refreshments were served.

Baroness not Sick.

The report that Baroness Rosa von Zimmerman is lying seriously ill at her home, Castle Rosamond, in Oak Knoll, and that she is making a brave battle for her life, was emphatically denied yesterday afternoon. Word from her home was that she was at that time in town shopping and would attend a dancing party last night. Members of the household expressed surprise at the report.

Federation Elects.

At a meeting of the Federated Improvement Association last night the following officers for the coming year were elected: H. M. Lannan, president; H. S. McCallum, first vice-president; Benjamin Groves, second vice-president; H. M. Chapman, secretary-treasurer; John H. Martin, attorney. Arrangements have been made for a social to be given at Redman's Hall on South Hill street December 15. Members of the allied associations are cordially invited to attend.

In Woodcrest School.

The Vermont Boulevard Association has issued a call for a meeting Friday night in the Woodcrest schoolhouse. It also announces that Vernon avenue, between Manchester avenue and Vermont heights, has been extensively repaired and is now in good condition for auto travel. In order to reach the meeting place, autoists are instructed to turn west at Lincoln or 108th street. Persons going by street car should take the Vermont heights cars marked West Athens, get off at Lincoln and walk two blocks west.

Fumigation.

SHORT ON CYANIDE.

Citrus Growers in San Antonio District Find Themselves Out of Cyanide and thus are Unable to Complete work of Cleansing Trees.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, Dec. 3.—With six-sevenths of its work accomplished the Growers' Fumigation and Supply Company, which controls the scale for the co-operative citrus growers' of the San Antonio Fruit Exchange, had been forced to knock off work and wait for a fresh supply of cyanide. The chemical will be shipped from the Atlantic Coast and it will be from three to four weeks on the way.

Every fumigation outfit in the valley and most of those in the inland country will have a loafing spell after this week, because they are all out of cyanide. Some of them will be unable to get a fresh supply, but the big concerns which brought their supply on contract a year ahead will be able to get it whenever the supply houses can get cars to transport it.

This year the Growers' Fumigation Company got an early start on a 4500-acre run. It ran into a wet and foggy spell at the start but has since had excellent weather, and during the past fourteen weeks it has treated 3900 acres of trees. There are only 600 acres of trees left to treat, and if work continued uninterrupted the gangs could finish by the middle of December, but the delay in cyanide shipments will run the work well into January and more rainy weather may retard the work. However, a good share of the work is done and the weather has been so favorable that the fumigating has been unusually effective. The trees which have been treated are much cleaner than usual, and the splendid quality of the fruit this winter is mighty good evidence of the benefit that the trees derived from doses of gas in former years.

FRUIT ORCHARD SELLS FOR HIGH FIGURE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASCO, Dec. 3.—The Palm fruit ranch near here consisting of 640 acres in fruit and alfalfa, has been sold to M. Henderson of Los Angeles, who paid $250 per acre for the property. It belonged to a syndicate of capitalists from the South.

The Hotel Pepper in Los Angeles was traded in on the deal.

For the past two years the ranch has been leased to Japanese tenants. A $50,000 fruit crop was taken from the Palm ranch this season.

THE FIRST CAR OF LEMONS ON ITS WAY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

OXNARD, Dec. 3.—The first shipment of lemons from his young orchard in Pleasant Valley, near Camarillo, was made this week by W. P. Daily. He has between thirty-five and forty acres of two and three-year-old lemons just beginning to bear.

Mr. Daily has had lemon trees in his yard for over twelve years, which have never been hurt by frost. The big freeze of 1913 did not touch the trees, and this first caused the belief that in Pleasant Valley was a new frostless belt for lemons.

The Gift Buyer Will Find Timely Suggestions

"Christmas comes but once a year," but good gifts remain with all their cheer throughout the year. With this thought of permanency we have always chosen our stocks. Quality is our watch-word, and in providing the generous exhibit for this season we have been much more lavish than any time past. Lavish in selection and genuinely good in quality.

In gem-set jewelry especially does our stock excel. We offer a satisfying range in the unique and dainty platinum-set jewelry so very chic and popular now.

For the matron whose thoughts are of the home and its beauty and usefulness, and who prides herself on the appointments of her table, we have provided in silverware, etc., most wonderfully satisfying buying privileges, for those stocks are replete with the best the markets of the world affords.

Choosing Here is as Pleasant as Gift Getting Stocks are Teeming with True Christmas Cheer.

Diamonds
Nothing can be more acceptable than one or more of these favorite jewels. Here you will find carefully selected stones of excellent quality. Diamond Rings, priced as low as $25, and others as high as you care to pay.

Watches
From all indications this will be a Watch Christmas. We have left a few of those handsome 15-jewel movements in wrist watches, either ribbon or bracelet style, at $15. We ordered 500 of these, but could only get fifty. Just a few left for early shoppers.

OT RECEPTION'S PREPARED HERE FOR INCOMING HORDE OF I.W.W. AGITATORS.

dvance Guard that Seized Train Declares Big Army of Trouble-makers is On its Way to Los Angeles from the North and East, Bent on Terrorism—Officials Ready to Strike Hard.

HERE IS WHAT Los Angeles authorities have to say of the threatened invasion by I.W.W. agitators and their hobo following:

"I shall take every step necessary to prevent this horde entering the county and shall, by legal procedure, expel all those who s my guards. I am going to keep them out if it means fight. They are not going to overrun this community; they will find Los gles a poor winter resort. The advance warning they have sent to officials will not frighten us, and we are prepared to enforce the and fully protect the citizenry."—Sheriff Cline.

"Panhandlers, yeggs and I.W.W.'s who have been run out of the northern cities, and are said to be coming here, had best take ing. They will not be allowed to make Los Angeles a hang-out. They must stay away unless they want to work on the gang. The city police are working in harmony with the county officers and those of other municipalities, and we are in a ion to give these fellows a warm reception. And if they come on they'll get it."—Chief of Police Butler.

The Sheriff has made application for additional deputies and the chief has asked for fifty extra policemen, to meet a possible emergency. The recent street murder by two young men, scores of hold-ups and other crimes of violence point to a rising wave of crime that must be stemmed at the start.

SHERIFF DETERMINED.

Feeling the gang is a menace and has an evil purpose in moving on this city, the Sheriff has declared he will not permit the I.W.W.'s to congregate here.

"I am informed," the Sheriff said last evening, "that a gang of 300 I.W.W.'s is en route here from Seattle and another mob is coming in from the South. They have no good intentions and are bold enough to boast they will make things hot in this section this winter.

"I shall make every effort to keep the acknowledged trouble-makers out of the county, as they are only a detriment to the laborers. All those we have so far had to deal with are, to use a common phrase, 'no goods.'

"I will get all the deputies I require to keep the peace and put down rowdyism. I will go the limit in keeping out toughs and preserving the peace of the community. I have a number of excellent officers and I am informed that the Supervisors will give me as many men as I may require to round up these undesirable fellows who are endeavoring to secure a foothold in the Southland and injure the reputation of the workers."

WANTS MORE MEN.

Chief Butler has been preparing for the invasion of the hobos for several weeks, but is at present crippled in the matter of number of policemen. He said:

"If Council can be awakened to the fact that we are in danger we will probably get some extra policemen. I have asked for fifty men, but have received no encouragement. The Council say they have no money for the extra men.

"I want to re-establish the river-bed squad and patrol the 'jungle' haunts of the I.W.W.'s and other menacing tramps. The advancing horde of tramps will be handled, if necessity compels, by the present force of men, but we are really greatly handicapped. No one learns this more quickly than the criminals. They know perfectly well which districts are well-policed districts and which unprotected. If the Council refuses us the needed men the public will have to suffer."

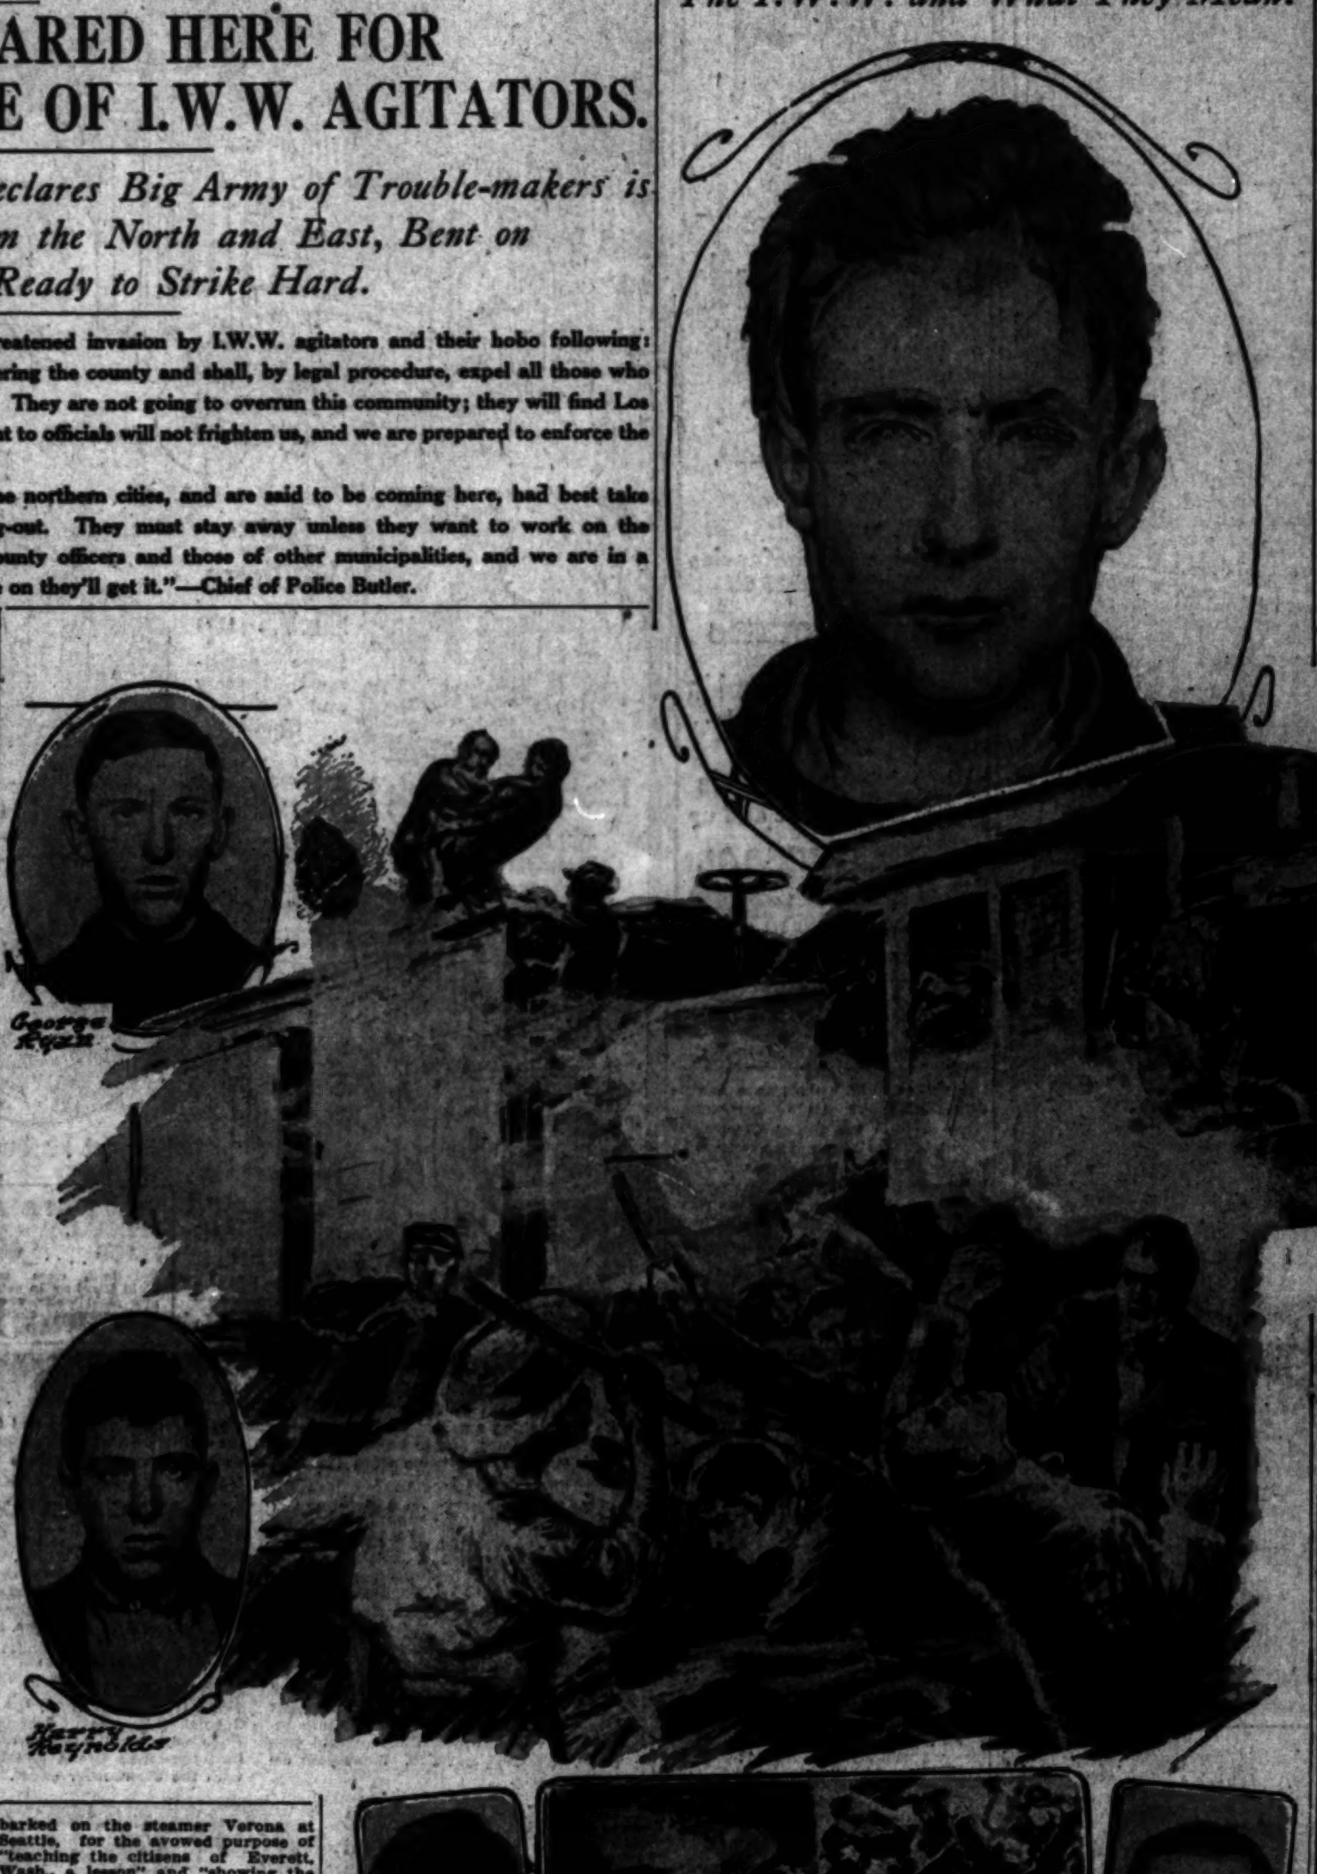
THEIR "JUDGMENT."

Early in November, in response to an appeal in an I.W.W. publication for volunteers, 300 rowdies embarked on the steamer Verona at Seattle, for the avowed purpose of "teaching the citizens of Everett, Wash., a lesson" and "showing the lumber kings that they cannot trample I.W.W.'s in the dust." The appeal called on the 200 volunteers to arm, go to Everett and there use their judgment. That judgment was the killing of six men and the wounding of forty others.

Just such an appeal has been made to invade Los Angeles and "use your judgment." The reds, suffering from their defeat in the North, are coming south, without arms, so that when arrested they cannot be convicted of carrying concealed weapons. Ragged and unkempt, each supplied with the literature of their kind, they are coming to live on the workers of the south. What they hope to obtain, other than food, for which they will not work, is a matter of conjecture.

From the statements of the advance guard it would appear that the men, by force of numbers, intend to stir up the workers here and persuade them to provide food and clothing, shelter and entertainment, until the warmer days arrive, when they can return to the north and again become a menace to the citizens there.

The I.W.W. and What They Mean.



"If it is to be war, Los Angeles is ready."

At the top is a composite photograph of the gang now awaiting trial on vagrancy charges in the Los Angeles County Jail and scattered around the edges are individuals of the same group. In the center is a drawing made from a description of the manner in which they seized a train, and below of the gun fight on the docks of Everett, Wash., between I.W.W.'s and officers.

Epochal.

CALIFORNIA LEADS WAY TO DYE-STUFF FREEDOM

Product of Lowly Moss, Orchilla, Has German Monopoly at Grips.

A REVOLUTION in the dye industry that, it is expected, will forever free the United States from dependence on the dye factories of Germany and the rest of Europe, has actually begun in Southern California. What is thought to be the first factory ever erected in this country for the manufacture of vegetable dye, commenced operation last week at National City, and the first carloads of the finished product that will eventually furnish color for the rugs, clothes and other commercial fabrics of the country have already started to pass through this city en route to the East.

This industry, operated by the Lower California Chemical Company, promises to develop into one of the largest in the country, and is devoted to making dyestuffs from orchilla, a moss or lichen found in parasitical growths along the western coast of Lower California. As the supply of orchilla is practically unlimited, and the process used by the chemists of the new company efficient and cheap, the products of the new factory can, it is declared, undersell the aniline dyes of Europe even in times of peace. The results obtained by use of these dyestuffs, experts have agreed, is the equal if not superior to those achieved with the foreign products.

GERMAN ORIGINATOR.

Perhaps the strangest part of this gigantic move to take a world product, the trade in which has heretofore been universally considered Germany's right, is that the originator of the process by which the dye is created from the orchilla is a young German chemist, educated and initiated in one of the great aniline dye factories of Berlin, who found himself stranded in this country at the outbreak of the war.

This young German, George V. Heyl, is now superintendent of the new laboratories at National City, and is directing the work of development of the industry with as much fervor as if he were building a new trade for his fatherland.

The use of orchilla for making dyestuffs antedates the discovery of aniline dyes by many years. In fact,

CITY MONEY IS KEPT IDLE AS OFFICIALS SPLIT HAIRS.

THE sum of $117,179.11 in favor of Los Angeles is awaiting collection at Sacramento while City Treasurer Powell and State Controller Chambers settle a little controversy as to how it shall be turned over to the city. Treasurer Powell suggested what seemed to be a simple way, viz., that Chambers mail it to him. The State Controller says the law and the rule of his office prevent him doing this. He says all the Treasurer has to do is to ask T. M. Eby, secretary of the State Board of Equalization, or some equally trustworthy person at Sacramento to call for the warrant, receipt for it and mail it. Treasurer Powell retorts that City Attorney Stephens has advised him he has no power to do that.

Meanwhile the money, which is the refund due the city by the State because of outstanding bonded indebtedness on November 8, 1910, when the new tax system went into effect, is lying idle in the State treasury. Controller Chambers thinks that, were it not for the amount involved, the difference of opinion might be called a tempest in a teapot.

This is not the first difference of opinion the State Controller has had with city officials. Recently he refused to accept a city warrant and demanded a certified bank check. City Auditor Myers pointed out that Los Angeles city warrants are as good as gold and are accepted everywhere, being cashed even in London, New York, Paris and other big cities. The Auditor sent the warrant back and finally the State Controller accepted it.

WOULD BROADEN POWERS OF COUNTY GOVERNMENT.

Local Officials Plan to Make Strong Effort for Removal of State-wide Uniformity Restriction, Now Linking Los Angeles with Alpine in Matter of Organization and Administration.

WITH the commencement of the biennial session of the Legislature close at hand, officials of Los Angeles county are preparing to submit to the State law-making body a number of recommendations to govern the handling of this county's business. The initial step was taken at a recent conference in the County Counsel's office, attended by the members of the present Board of Supervisors and one of the Supervisors-elect and members of the County Counsel's staff.

Among the several matters discussed, one of chief importance was a proposed change in the Constitution of the State whereby it would be possible for this county to obtain for its government laws, it is said, which would be better suited than those now in force, to the great complexity and diversity of its governmental needs.

Under the present Constitution it is required that all legislation affecting county government be uniform throughout the State. Legislation cannot be adopted for Los Angeles county, with its nearly 1,000,000 inhabitants, and its annual expenditure for county government of more than $10,000,000, which is not at the same time applicable to little Alpine county, with its small popula-

Van Nuys
Is a Gilt-Edge Proposition

Van Nuys is one place that received the commendation of the governor's commission sent out to inspect land colonization and real estate development. The principal reason for that, perhaps, is because we consider the future of the individual buyer and land holder. We have laid things out broad and deep in a manner to insure the permanent success of the community and of each individual in it. We have the co-operative idea thoroughly established and working. In fruit and vegetables it is carried out in the Producers' and Canning Association with a modern cannery and marketing organization. In poultry it is carried out through the Van Nuys Poultry Association. Just to be informed you should see for yourself and know what is being accomplished there. If you are interested in a living from the soil, or a suburban home, either for yourself or for any relatives or friends, it will be wise and profitable for you to inform yourself thoroughly about Van Nuys, the wonderful country in the city, or city in the country, 54 minutes from Hill street. Virile New Industry Born from War-made Needs.

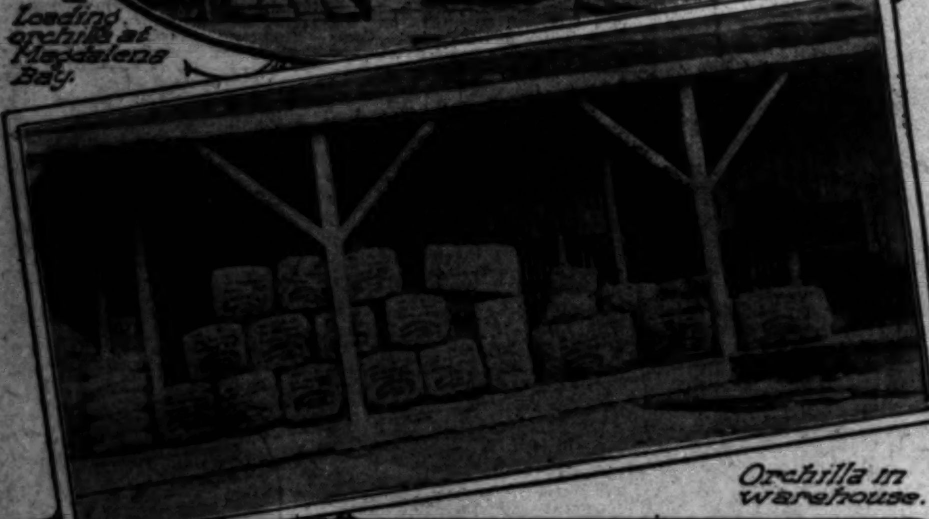
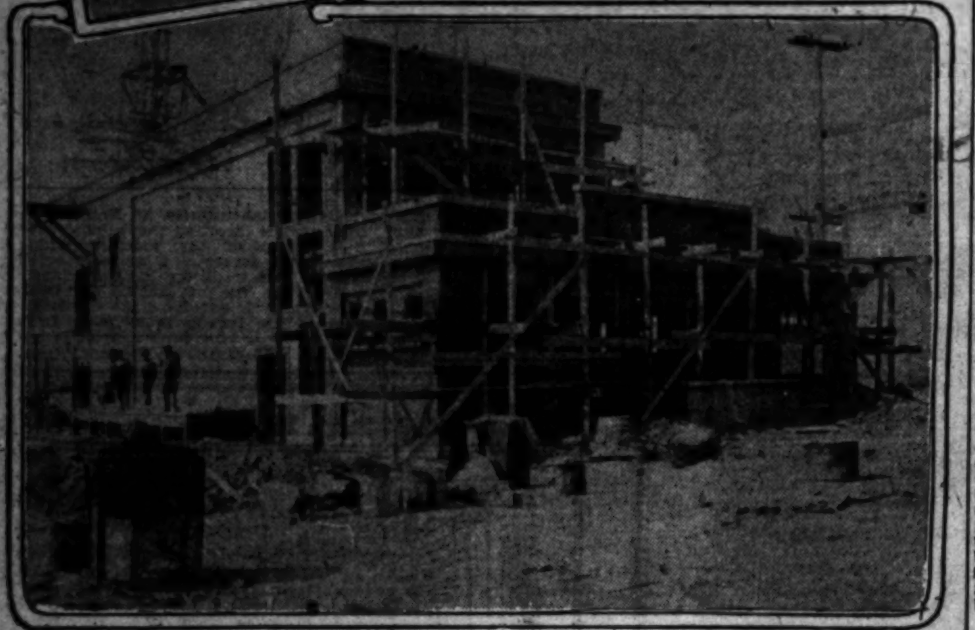
Orchilla camp in Lower California.

Loading orchilla at Magdalena Bay.



Orchilla in warehouse.



First unit of new dye factory.

Cutting under the aniline pigment manufacturers.

These views show how the Lower California Chemical Company is utilizing a once-despised lichen of the great peninsula, in establishing a real American dye-making industry, that is expected to break forever German control of the market. The lichen, known as orchilla, grows plentifully not far south of the California line, is harvested in great quantities, shipped by schooner to the company's plant, the first unit of which has just been put into operation at National City, and is manufactured into pigments of thirty-two shades. Already the first carloads of the product, which can undersell and is said to be fully equal to the aniline dyes, are moving to markets in the East and long-term contracts have been secured from American textile manufacturers and other domestic users of coloring materials.

County Government

tion and its proportionally small annual expense for county government. The powers of the Board of Supervisors and of other county officers must be the same in both counties; the governmental machinery for the construction and maintenance of highways, for the auditing and disposition of claims and other accounting, for the purchase of supplies, for the handling of public charities, is under the present law necessarily the same for both Los Angeles and Alpine counties.

PARALLEL DISPARITY.

It is said to be as if the city of Los Angeles, for instance, were required to operate under the same municipal corporation law as the city of Tropico, or any other of the small municipalities of this county. Probably county population in California at the time the constitutional provision requiring uniformity of county government was adopted, was sufficiently uniform to justify the requirement, but with the great disparity in population which has come now to exist between the larger and the smaller counties of the State, this requirement of uniformity is declared to be absurd.

There is a popular idea that the situation was completely relieved by the adoption of the Los Angeles county charter. This, however, is declared, a mistaken notion. The county charter is restricted in its operation, broadly speaking, to the subjects of manner of selection, term of office and compensation of county officers. It did not and could not under the Constitution reach the field of powers and duties of county officers. There is found a possible exception in the provision allowing boards of supervisors to create offices not known to the general law.

SCOPE DOUBTFUL.

It is doubtful, however, authorities say, how far this provision goes, and it is not available, in any case, to change existing general-law requirements as to the powers and duties of officers. Notwithstanding the charter, the county officers are still to a large extent working under and are bound by uniform State laws in the discharge of many important functions. Road construction and maintenance, administration of charities, auditing and accounting systems, are examples. While these county activities are at present conducted, it is said, in a satisfactory manner, it is in spite of laws long since outgrown. Improvements could readily be made in the direction of greater economy and facility of operation if the uniform law provision did not stand in the way, according to proponents of the amendment plan.

Two possible remedial measures are pointed out. One is to amend the constitutional provision under which county charters are framed or amended, so as to enable this county in its charter, in appropriate cases, to prescribe powers and duties for officers different from those laid down in general laws adopted by the Legislature. The other is to remove, in part at least, the present constitutional prohibition on the Legislature, so as to enable it to classify counties by population and legislate separately for each class in matters pertaining to powers and duties of officers, as it has the right to do, and has done, in the case of municipalities.

UNIFORMITY NEEDS.

There are some matters, possibly, it is argued, as to which the requirement of uniformity might with advantage be continued, for example, elections, taxation, schools, administration and other like activities in which the county acts largely as a unit in a State system. Even here, however, it is believed the Legislature might be trusted to determine for itself those cases wherein uniformity is necessary or desirable.

It is only by one of these two methods, local officials say, that Los Angeles county can secure the desired legislative changes in its government. Efforts to have uniform county laws amended to the advantage of Los Angeles county have failed frequently in the past, and unless a change in the power of the Legislature is made along the lines indicated, will fail in the future, it is said, because of the opposition from smaller counties which do not find the changes proposed suitable to their conditions.

Los Angeles county has its own cement plant, rock quarry, oil pits and tools necessary for road making and a mechanical department equipped for constructive buildings. If such a constitutional amendment were passed, it would be possible for the Legislature to so classify counties that road building or other public work might be done in Los Angeles county by force account or day labor, without like power necessarily being granted to other counties.

Safety First.

HOLDS UP ACTION.

Councilman Wright Refuses to Suspend Rules for Immediate Action On Ordinance Designed to Reduce Speed Limit on Broadway from Temple North.

Councilman Wright yesterday refused to agree to the suspension of the rules to allow the immediate passage of an ordinance which would include North Broadway, from Temple street to the bridge over the Los Angeles River, within the area controlled by a speed limit of twelve miles an hour.

Councilman Conwell said the ordinance is urgently needed because a large number of accidents have occurred along that stretch of Broadway due to speeding by automobiles. He said even with the twelve mile limit, automobiles would run about twenty miles but even this would be safer than the dangerous thirty-mile pace which many travel now.

Councilman Roberts said he favored extending the twelve-mile limit to College street, but Councilman Wright opposed this. President Betkouski said the ordinance is necessary and will be passed next Saturday, he expects.

Dye-Stuff Industry.

the use of aniline dyes as a substitute for the vegetable dye made from orchilla was the real cause for the latter's sinking into obscurity during the past twenty years. But until the Lower California Chemical Company started operating in California the manufacture of the dyestuffs in this country was almost unheard of.

As early as 1880 the Flores-Hale Company of Lower California was shipping orchilla from the peninsula by the thousands of tons. But the moss was taken from the property and shipped in raw form to foreign countries for manufacture. No concerted action was taken to investigate the possibilities of manufacturing the vegetable dye in this country.

With the discovery of aniline dyes, the sale of orchilla fell off to almost nothing. By the time the raw product was shipped to Europe, manufactured and reshipped to this country, the selling price had become almost prohibitive in the face of the competition offered by the aniline dyestuffs. Experts testified the two methods of creating dyes were about equally good from the standpoint of the consumer, and although the vegetable dye was perhaps the best, in view of the purity of its ingredients, still the difference in price gave the aniline dye the best of it.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS.

As a result, the Flores-Hale Company gradually ceased its great shipments and when, in 1907, the immense property of the company changed hands, the exportation of orchilla had stopped. Since 1907 practically nothing has been done with the moses, the new owners preferring to develop the property for colonization. Then came the great war and the shortage of dyestuffs in the United States.

When the new owners of the property were urged to reopen the orchilla industry to alleviate this stringency, they were inclined to believe it useless, as no precedent in the manufacturing of the moss in this country had been established, and it was thought the industry could last only as long as the war continued. However, the matter was referred to the Hill Chemical Company of this city.

It happened the young German chemist, Mr. Heyl, was temporarily employed by that concern, living as best he could until the war ceased and he could return home. He advanced an offer to manufacture the dye by a process he had evolved while in the aniline factories of Berlin.

Taking the orchilla he developed from it an archil liquor, with which he created his dyestuffs. These base colors, red, violet and blue, were created, and from these he developed thirty-two shades. These colors were made at a cost less than that of aniline dyestuffs in time of peace.

PLANS REALIZED.

As soon as these experiments were completed a Los Angeles architect, Thomas Fellows, was retained to draw plans for a huge factory at National City. The first unit of the factory was nearly enough completed so that it could be put into operation last week. Other units will be erected as the business develops. It is estimated that the present unit will turn out over 20,000 pounds of the finished product each week.

The factory is situated in an admirable location on San Diego Bay. Two railroads, the Santa Fe and the San Diego and Arizona (the new road recently turned over to the Southern Pacific by John D. Spreckels) pass less than 300 yards away. Switches from both lines run to the factory.

John E. Blackman, general manager of the company and owner of the controlling interest in the company that holds title to the property where the orchilla grows, has already started operating the first of what is intended to be a fleet of schooners, running between Magdalena Bay and National City, to carry the moss. The Mexicans of the peninsula have been put to work, and the accompanying prosperity had dispersed all thought of revolution in that section.

And so well has this movement been received by the great woolen mills and fabric manufacturers of the East that the entire output of as many units of the factory as can be erected, has been contracted for during the next ten years. As there is about 150,000 tons of the orchilla now laying on the peninsula ready to be picked and shipped, and as this plant renews itself every three years, the new industry is said to be limited only by ability to add units to its factuory.

Grand Jury Investigates Charge of False Swearing in an Important Civil Action — Vote Fraud Matter Still Far from Being Cleared Up.

In addition to continuing an investigation into alleged election frauds in various parts of the county, the grand jury is making inquiry into allegations of perjury on the part of a witness in an important civil action recently tried here.

It was indicated yesterday that the vote-fraud matter will require several days, and possibly even weeks, for thorough investigation. A number of Pomona election officials were again closeted with the jury and several tomes of registration statistics were carted to the jury room by Registrar of Voters McAleer and his assistants.

COMPANIONS.

We know a man who always carries in his pocket a book written by Emerson, Marcus Aurelius, Carlyle or some other giant intellect who in times past scattered broadcast the blossoms of his thought that future generations might inhale their fragrance. In this age of hurry and feverish achievement, when men seem to have little time for sober reflection, it is good to be able to summon, at will, such blessed companions to one's presence.

SELF STINGERS.

Up to this time we thought the scorpion was the only insect which ever stung itself to death. To the scorpion we now add the food speculator. In attempting to boost food prices these men have stirred up a storm that threatens to blow them higher than Mr. Gilderoy's kite. They are charging these awful prices, in many instances, because there is a lot of money in the country and they think they can get it.

IMPOSSIBLE.

Occasionally there may be found in this fair America an immigrant who refuses to become a citizen of the United States, claiming that he is sadly disappointed with the country and its government. He smiles cynically at our customs, sneers at our charity, asserts that our churches, courts and public schools are dominated by "predatory capitalists" and, in other ways, gives us to understand that he considers America no whit better than the land which is so happily rid of him. Such a man always looks for mud and never fails to find it. The man who cannot love the land of his birth can never learn to love another country.

CHINESE LABOR IN EUROPE.

The Old World is falling back on "Chinese cheap labor," which a generation or so ago was a disturbing element in California and the rest of the United States. France and Russia are importing Orientals to work in the munitions factories and arsenals. About 20,000 of these easterners are already at work in France, 20,000 more are under contract and Russia is to have 20,000. However, this labor will not be as "cheap" as that of which complaint used to be made in this country. Most of the eastern workers are said to be selected because of skill, and many are paid $5 per day. They replace Frenchmen and Russians who are needed on the firing line.

FORTIFYING CATALINA.

The proposed fortification of Catalina Island, making of it an American Helgoland, is a brilliant idea.

The theory of defending Southern California is this:

The forts at San Pedro will compel the enemy to land at one of the open beaches like Santa Monica. The proposed railroad batteries at Santa Monica and other beaches will compel the enemy to stand off shore with his warships and send his landing parties in small boats.

Catalina, fortified, will make uncomfortable the position of the enemy warship standing offshore acting as a base for the small boats carrying the landing party.

WHOSE FEET WERE COLD?

Did J. Pierpont Morgan really yield to the opinions of the Federal Reserve Board or did the Federal Reserve Board help J. Pierpont let go of the bear's tail? There is much upon which to base the latter theory. The defeat of Rumania indicates that Germany has slipped out of the trap the allies had set for the Kaiser. If the war is to go on they must, in a measure, begin all over again.

There is some limit to the money in this world, and it looks as though the limit was dangerously close. It is all very well for the allies to say they will "find some way to do it." As it happens to be our money, we in America would like to see the way first.

WHOM THEY LOVE.

An indignant lady writes to The Times disputing the conclusions of an editorial writer who pooh-poohed the chicken in short skirts. She says that man will turn away from any sensible woman to pursue a chicken with her "boots running up to her waist line."

We stoutly deny this. Chickens have no attraction for men. Girls only wear high boots out of friendliness for the leather trust. The kind of women that men like are those with beautiful souls and high power intellects. They love the highbrow girls with a mind on geometery and angles—and other shapes.

If they sometimes appear to warm toward the chick with short skirts, this shows how the Christian loveth the naked and the lonely.

CAUTION.

While on his way to visit a friend a well-dressed man in an eastern city was robbed of money and a valuable jewel because he was imprudent enough to pass through a rendezvous of rogues at a rather late hour. Although it is well to guard against the danger to one's peace of mind in becoming oversuspicious, caution is always necessary for safety in a world inhabited partly by vicious and irresponsible persons. Everything in nature, including plant life and animals of the lower orders, protects itself against the elements that would destroy it, and man belongs as much to the natural order of things as does a bird or a flower. If you possess a precious gem keep it only where friends and lovers may see it. Do not wear it in your hair nor on your shoe-cap.

THE SEASON'S BOOKS.

The Annual Book Number of The Times is a part of this issue, and contains in addition to the usual reviews of the season's fiction, verse and dramas, a number of articles on distinctive and unusual books of biography, economics, history and theology. The number appears as "Part III-B" of The Times today.

Among the most remarkable of these books reviewed is Mark Twain's posthumous work, "The Mysterious Stranger," which embodies a philosophy so pessimistic and at the same time so brilliantly expressed, that it will undoubtedly amaze all who have known and loved his work.

Few people know that O. Henry was an ex-convict. All who did know it, and it was known by various people engaged in literary work, have, out of respect for the great story writer, preserved a conspiracy of silence. But C. Alphonso Smith, in the first biography of O. Henry to be published, tells the whole story and shows that O. Henry was unquestionably innocent of the charge upon which he was convicted.

Dr. James A. B. Scherer, president of the Throop College of Technology, Pasadena, has embodied in "Cotton as a World Power" his lectures delivered at Oxford and Cambridge which trace from the earliest times to the present the well-nigh unbelievable influence of the "vegetable wool," as it was called by the ancients, upon civilization.

The first of Rabindranath Tagore's short stories have been translated under his supervision into English, and very surprisingly show that he is a complete master of the narrative technique valued by English writers.

For the first time Treitschke's militaristic teachings have been translated into English, and show how the great German historian exhorted his countrymen to put their faith in the sword and to abhor the "blessings" of peace.

Other books which have received special attention deal with Bernard Shaw, "the man and the mask;" the Bible, as interpreted by a Syrian who came to this country as and immigrant and now fills one of the distinguished pulpits; the most gorgeous period of French history as described by a rigorously veracious historian; the reminiscences of a veteran statesman who served under three American administrations.

SOME ELIMINATED PATRIOTS.

The Times observes that three members of the pay-roll brigade have tendered their resignations as members of the Legislature. They evidently trust that by so doing they may evade the new section, added to the Constitution in the last election, providing that no member of the Legislature may hold any appointive office under the State for the term for which he has been elected. Several others have organized to fight the new amendment in the courts. They will contend that it is not in the province of the people to pass such class legislation, that a man cannot be penalized legally because the people have seen fit to elect him to State office.

There is no question as to the intent of the amendment or the intent of the voters who adopted it by a majority of a little more than two to one. But the holders of State sinecures are concerned a great deal more about their salaries than about the will of the people. It is all very well to assert that the people rule while the campaign is on; but when it comes to having the people rise up and pass legislation that separates good friends of the administration from $5000-a-year jobs, then it becomes a question of safety first.

Twenty-eight members of the old Legislature are directly affected; but there are twenty others who received occasional fees from State boards and commissions. The real number who were drawing pay from the State in addition to their salaries as members of the Legislature is forty-five. Most of these declined to run for reelection, and most of those who did run were beaten, so that the actual number of new members holding State positions is but eight. Two of these, Mouser and Lyon, are in Los Angeles. The country voters seem to have watched these pay-roll parasites closer than those of the city; not a member of the Legislature from a country district, holding another State job, was reelected. Only in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Alameda counties were they able to win.

All these patriots are eliminated today from the State pay roll. It is generally understood that they are all to be reappointed by Gov. Johnson after the first of the year. This refers to the ones whose terms as legislators expire on January 1. The others seem to be left out in the cold.

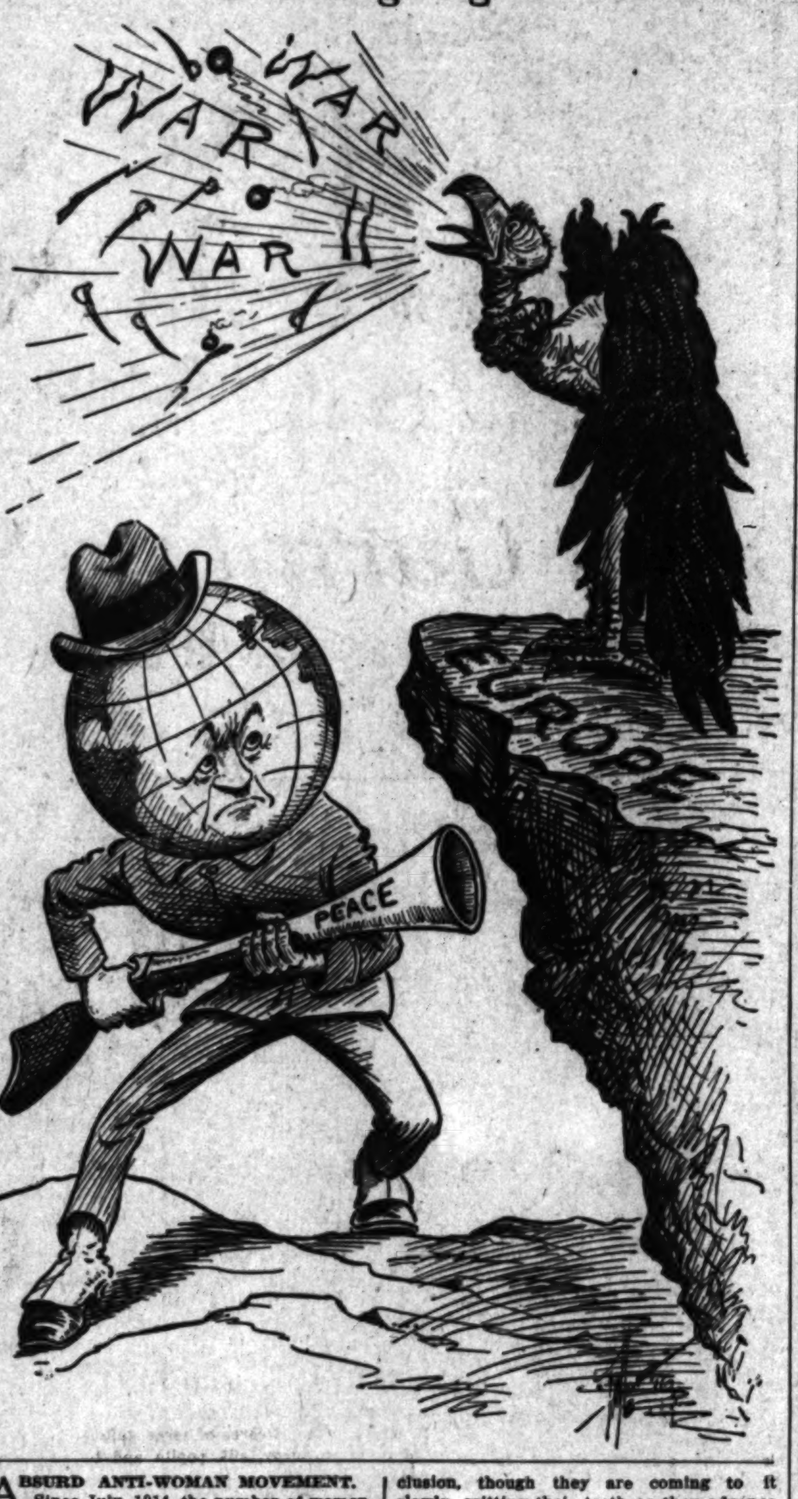
Gossip from the State capital has arranged a number of new jobs for the early part of the new year. Al McCabe, private secretary to the Governor, the dispatches say, is to receive a place on the Railroad Commission. Gov. Johnson has been forced reluctantly to the conclusion that McCabe is too much of a rough neck to be permitted to appear in Washington society. McCabe is a South-of-Market product and was a Democratic boss before he changed his political garments to get in with the Johnson administration. Paul Herriott of the Board of Control is said to be slated for the place as secretary to Senator Johnson in Washington. Mr. Herriott was press agent for the Governor during the last two campaigns; he is a natural-born lackey and suits the Governor well.

Gov. Johnson is reported by the correspondents to be preparing to take a place in the law firm of Sullivan & Roche of San Francisco, the firm to be Sullivan, Johnson & Roche. This firm has enjoyed a political practice worth probably $25,000 a year during the last five years. E. A. Dickson, a Los Angeles newspaper man, is reported to be the choice of Lieut.-Gov. Stephens for private secretary. Dickson now holds a place as member of the Tax Commission with a salary of $5000 a year. He is also a regent of the University of California—appointed of course by Gov. Johnson. What a triumph for pure, holy, disinterested and pious journalism!

NOT NECESSARY HERE.

The Los Angeles twenty-nine-cent-a-day diet squad was demoralized by Thanksgiving lures. Southern California is a poor country in which to attempt to inaugurate a diet system. There's always plenty to eat here, and the bright sun and sweet air never allow the appetite to flag.

Gunning Again.



ABSURD ANTI-WOMAN MOVEMENT.

Since July, 1914, the number of women employed in banking and financial firms in Europe has risen from 9500 to 30,000. Of these women 26,000 are directly replacing men.

There are now employed in Europe in the metal trades 332,000 women, in the chemical trades 77,000, and in government arsenals, shell factories, etc., 69,000. Between 300,000 and 400,000 women are probably on munition work, excluding the large number who are making other goods for the use of the forces, such as food and clothing in the food trades there have been many cases of substitution. In grain milling the number of women has risen since July, 1914, from 2000 to 6000, in sugar refining from 1000 to 2000, and in brewing from 8000 to 18,000. The increase in these trades is almost entirely due to the direct replacement of men by women.

Women are doing men's work to an appreciable degree in tanning and leather working, sawmilling and wood-working, glass, china, earthenware and rubber.

Women have directly replaced men even in building, mining and quarrying. Pierce C. Williams, American commercial attache in London, reports that in the British Islands 866,000 more women were employed in July, 1916, than in July, 1914, and 766,000 of this number have directly replaced men workers. This report is corroborated by the October issue of the Board of Trade Labor Gazette, a British government publication. The Gazette further states that before the war the railway companies only employed about 11,000 women, clerks, cleaners, attendants, etc., now 33,000 are employed. "Women," reports Mr. Williams, "have been adapting themselves remarkably to positions formerly held by men. The men are going to encounter much competition for these positions when they return. This will be one of the most important problems to be solved after the war."

The Illinois State Federation of Labor at its recent session adopted a resolution which it forwarded to Sam Gompers's Federation of Labor, setting forth that conditions in all the warring countries have filled trades, hitherto supplied by men workers only, "with tremendous numbers of underpaid women, unorganized and voteless." Fear is expressed that these exploited women will be used to lower the wages of men as well, permanently and everywhere." To prevent such a calamity the Illinois Federation demands that the government of the United States shall enter into international agreements with the nations of Europe that "the wage paid for definite work must be absolutely independent of the sex of the individual performing it." Nothing more utterly absurd could be proposed. If it were possible to make such an international agreement and enforce it, as it is not, the European nations would not make it because it would increase the cost of producing commodities in Europe, and the one hope of Europe of geting back its gold, repairing the ravages of war, and paying the enormous interest on its public debt is in recapturing its foreign trade. This it cannot do if high wages are paid to its workmen.

There is but one way by which the workers of America can preserve their great home market from being wrested from them by foreign pauper and female labor. That way is by a return to the Republican policy of a protective tariff. There are signs on the political horizon that the Democrats are coming to this conclusion, though they are coming to it slowly, gritting their teeth as they advance and consoled only by the reflection that it is the only way by which they can hold on to the Federal offices.

THE MAYOR DISPLAYS VIGOR.

The liveliest satisfaction is expressed throughout the city at the promising stage which has been reached in the negotiations for the purchase by the city of two out of the three company power distributing systems. The only regret expressed is that the third company should have felt compelled to withdraw, owing to unfair tactics adopted by employees of the city in connection with the wasteful paralleling scheme.

It is an open secret that no small credit is due to Mayor Woodman, who at a time when the negotiations seemed to be at a deadlock, stepped in and made some of the city officials recede from their position of biased antagonism to the power corporations.

Some months ago The Times showed how Engineer Scattergood had failed to carry out his promises in regard to municipal power, yet it was this engineer who seemed to take a delight in throwing all the cold water possible on the proposed arrangement with the power companies, which will result in Los Angeles securing a practical and profitable monopoly.

But the engineer reckoned without the fact that in recent months Los Angeles has obtained a Mayor with a determined chin. It is believed at the City Hall that Mayor Woodman read the riot act to the engineer. At any rate a change came over the spirit of the Scattergood cogitations after he had had a seance with Mayor Woodman. It is gratifying to have a Mayor who knows how to put recalcitrant officials in their places.

HIGH JINKS ON BORROWED FUNDS.

President Wilson proposes to borrow money to meet the cost of his prospective Mexican war. An early bond issue is projected. Wilson's "waging peace" in Mexico has cost the United States about $200,000,000 already. Meantime the treasury balance to meet this $2,000,000,000 government is only $142,000,000. Internal revenue to date has brought in $15,000,000 more than last year, while the Underwood tariff law has brought in $4,000,000 more than in 1915. It is estimated that the "admirable" new income tax will yield a hundred millions more than last year. The treasury expects to gather in $17,000,000 inheritance tax this year and at least $54,000,000 when the law is fully operative. The Treasury Department has the Panama Canal bonds up its sleeve, under which $230,000,000 of new funds can be raised. It is thought that the twelve Federal reserve banks will fill the gap. Evidently, remarks the Lewiston Journal, there is money to burn under the spoils system of Democratic government, high finance and high jinks.

Lilioukalani, one-time Queen of Hawaii, is seriously ill. Remember when President Cleveland sent his "Paramount Commissioner" Blount to Hawaii and took down the American flag from the Capitol Building and was addressed by the ruling monarch as "my great and good friend?" Do you also recall that with the administration of Benjamin Harrison that flag was put back and that it is still flying. The ex-Queen is 78 years of age.

Almost time for some other potentate to set Poland free. Pancho Villa is yet to be heard from.

STREAKS OF WIT.

When Living Cost Is High.

[Judge:] Mr. Harduppe: Let us hang a piece of suet out in the yard and see if it will not attract the birds.

Mrs. Harduppe: Rather let us hang it near a grocery store and see if it will not attract the other ingredients of a plum pudding.

Needed Excitement.

[Houston Post:] "I saw a war picture, and one of the soldiers on the firing line, amid bursting shells and dead and wounded men, was yawning."

"He was probably a football player to whom his surroundings seemed tame."

Art Comparison.

[Washington Star:] "He is always talking about his family tree."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "I have been interested in it. It is one of those trees which get shadier as they grow older."

Where Socialism Fails.

[Judge:] "I tell you, comrades," cried the socialistic orator, "if you will only give socialism a chance, you will find it works—"

"Aw, go wan!" replied the cheer leader in the audience. "What we want is suthin' that abolishes work."

Must Obey Orders.

[Harper's Magazine:] With but three minutes to catch his train, the traveling salesman inquired of the street car conductor, "Can't you go faster than this?"

"Yes," the bell-ringer replied, "but I have to stay with my car."

Ulterior Motive.

[Boston Transcript:] Customer: I want to get a collar for my wife's poodle.

Dealer: Something plain, sir?

Customer: No, something showy and expensive looking. I want some one to steal the little beast.

Indicted.

[Pittsburgh Post:] Husband: You charge me with reckless extravagance. When did I ever make a useless purchase?

Wife: Why, there's that fire extinguisher you bought a year ago; we've never used it once.

Self Protection.

[Washington Star:] "Yes," said Mr. Growcher, "I intend to keep up the idea of Santa Claus in my family as long as possible."

"What for?"

"I don't want the children to blame me when they don't get just the presents they were looking for."

RIPPLING RHYMES.

OUR DESTINATION.

The poorhouse has no Persian rugs, no costly chandeliers; and there we'll dwell and chase the bugs in our declining years. On bread and meat and spuds and pie there's an unroly price; the cost of coal has gone so high the poor are burning ice. The butchers used to give away the liver of the cow; today they wrap it up and say, "Cough up a quarter now." The poorhouse has no movie stage, no joyous minstrel troupe; and there we'll spend our wintry age, and live on cabbage soup. When o'er the daily sheet we glance, we drop it with a frown; the price of everything's advanced, and nothing has gone down. The printer howls because his stock more precious is than gems; the tailor wets with tears the frock which drearily he hems. Man wears his sweater in his bed, because he has no shiwt, and cries aloud, while seeing red: "Oh, whither do we drift?" The poorhouse has no plutocrats, no closed or open cars; and there we'll dwell and swat the rats until we climb the stars.

WALT MASON.

Synthetic Jewels.

Nearly all artificial gems, that is to say, stones that are really made by artificial means, are compounds of alum crystallized under special conditions. The metallic salts that are added during fusion determine whether the stones produced shall be sapphires, rubies or oriental topazes, amethysts or emeralds. Early attempts to manufacture artificial gems on a commercial basis failed because of the difficulty in obtaining the tremendous heat necessary, but the oxyhydrogen flame solved the problem, and producing artificial gems is now an important industry. According to La Chronique Industrielle, the basic material is ammonia alum, which is converted into calcined alum, by heating it in muffles. To that is added the coloring matter in suitable proportions—oxide of chromium for rubies, titanic acid for sapphires. The finely divided powder is permitted to trickle down into the oxyhydrogen flame, which attains a temperature of 1800 deg. The powder fuses into a pear-shaped body that weighs from ten carats to 200. The ruby is also manufactured by fusing together natural rubies too small to be of value in their original condition. Since great quantities of rubies are used for the bearings of watches and other instruments of precision, the synthetic rubies find a ready market among manufacturers as well as among dealers in gems.

Land Shark Beaten.

[Topeka State Journal:] Because of the prices the owner of the townsite of Keystone, a thriving village in Logan county, placed on town lots, the residents of the village and officers of the Scott City Northern Railway decided to move the town.

A new townsite, two miles northwest of the present village, was quietly purchased and the city began its move overland. The station, sidetracks and shipping docks of the railway already have been moved and business houses on moving trucks are on the way to new site.

For a One-term President.

[New York Herald:] The experiences of the last four years—indeed, of the last twelve years—have driven home to the American people the need of legal provision against a President succeeding himself in office. A single term of six or seven years would seem the best solution of the problem.

Con Cuchillo.

CHILE CON CARNAGE.

BEING THE PARTICULAR PEPPER IN SOME PERSONAL OPINIONS

Of Don yo de Chiltepin.

I had the comfort to know Tom Nast, when his dollar-mark cartoons drove "Boss Tweed" into the hole, and to know Keppler when his "Tattooed Man" lost Blaine the Presidency. And like every great artist I have known, they were lovable as they were great—poets, friends, Real People. They were generous and gentle not "as a woman" but as The woman—tender as Mother—but not afraid of anything on this bald earth. And, luckily, there was no "Business Office" to hold down their genius. The only limit they had was their own sense of decency and fitness. And that was enough. In all their thousands of cartoons, they never transgressed the boundaries of good taste and patriotism. Their pencil was as a lash—but it was in the hands of a Thackeray, not of a Legree.

Peace to their dear ashes! I hope neither of them is aware of modern cartooning. The technique (largely borrowed from them) might make them willing to come back to this tiresome world and "give lessons." But the modern Taste, I am sure, would often make them Glad they Went. If they could see, for instance, in one of the leading weeklies of this our neutral country—our land made up of all lands—if they could see a double-page, Gibsonesque cartoon; John Bull, Johnny Crapaud and Czar Nick on the platform with glad thumbs each to an electric button; and the Kaiser in the electrocution chair; and Columbia sitting in front of the "victim" and saying, "Get hung, Nigger! Get Hung!"

Luckily, these great men never saw so indecent a debasement of the cartoonist's art. Nor did I ever, save once. In a hot political campaign in Peru, some twenty-three years ago, a mongrel sheet pictured its native land as a dead jackass; and the candidate it disfavored for President of Peru, it showed in the role of a turkey-buzzard attacking the carcass in the fashion familiar to all who have watched turkey-buzzards, but not discussed in society.

"Life," of New York (thank God it's so far from life in California!) has prizes out for "the best epitaph on the Kaiser," and has printed many delicate contributions—such as: "An execrable monster . . . assassin . . . murderer . . . despised and detested of all men. . . . Judas, Pontius Pilate and Herod."

Tut, tut, "Life." It's a little too day-after-tomorrow to be writing epitaphs on the Kaiser, already yet. When England and her chestnut-pullers shall have succeeded in putting him away (if they ever do, which grows no nearer) it will be time for angiomaniacs to make as many tombstones for him as suits their spite, and erect said marbles beside their own hearths as monuments to their own un-Americanism.

For it is un-American to hate any other nation. We are a nation compound of all nations, and we have good will to them all. A very few of us came from England; and we owe her the rudiments of our speech (but have improved.) We owe her also our Independence—because we walloped her into allowing it to us. In fact, all we owe England we have taken out of her jaws, despite her teeth. And not one Briton-born out of every 10,000 living in the United States is a fellow-citizen.

We owe France much—and never had to fight for anything we have of her. She helped us, out of sheer gallantry (and hostility to England) when England was trying to crush England's thirteen first colonial infants. And about one France-born resident of every 500 here is a citizen.

We owe a great deal to Russia. In our Civil War probably nothing did so much to dissuade England from backing the Confederacy, and disrupting the Union, as a nice, careless-like visit of the Russian fleet to our harbors. And about one in every five of the Russians that come here to live, becomes an American citizen as fast as he can.

We owe a great deal to Italy. Nearly all her sons take out their "papers." And a good deal to Austria. I am not talking of the "neutral nations."

But it is not only silly but sickly to talk of England "Giving us our Language and Literature." England never gave anybody anything. Or of France and Italy "giving us Art." We have paid for all we got—to England in bloody toil, from Lexington onward; to Italy and France in hard American dollars at five times the price their paintings would have fetched at home. That's the reason their Art is in America. They would have preferred to keep it at home—but "The jingle of the guinea helps the hurt that honour feels."

But we owe as much to Germany—which is standing off the world in arms (including our munition-makers.) Ever hear of a German in the United States who wasn't a citizen thereof? Ever hear of an English, French or other Europeo-American, "hyphenated" regiment fighting for America, as the German-Americans "fought mit Sigel?" So, isn't it sort of decent and American to let our European neighbors settle their own family quarrel, with a sane remembrance that it's no skin off our shins; and not call names or write epitaphs untimely?

Like my Fellow-Groucher, Harry Carr, I view with alarm the female vote, and confess it a flat failure. But if women have to vote at all, anywhere, there's one lady I'd give the ballot—even in a State where she can't have it. There have been a thousand righteous thunders against our "Mexican Policy" (if you chance to know what this is.) But the purr of this little woman is the most damning indictment I now recall. And this will be part of next Sunday's sermon.

Choose any one of these fine Ready-Cut Bungalows and save hundreds of dollars

Ready-Cut Bungalows are modern & up-to-date

You wouldn't go back to using candles or kerosene lamps or ox teams, would you? That's what we mean when we say that our Ready-Cut Bungalows are the NEW IDEA in home building for all the fussing and trouble of the old way is done away with. The material in the ordinary house built according to old methods is furnished in lengths as it comes from the mill. The carpenter on the job must then saw and fit it to the proper sizes. In our Ready-Cut Bungalows all this work is done at our mill. We actually furnish the material cut-to-fit. When you buy one of our Ready-Cut Bungalows you simply nail it together and instead of waiting three or four months your house is all ready in a few days. Remember that this is not a makeshift like so-called portable houses, but a Real Home.

If you are handy with tools you can build one

When we say that the man who is at all handy with tools can build one of our Ready-Cut Bungalows we mean just that, for it has been proven hundreds of times by actual experience. Mail the coupon and get complete information about this MODERN WONDER, the Ready-Cut Bungalow.

Special for Carpenters and Contractors

In designing and selling our Ready-Cut Houses, we have the contractor's and carpenter's interests constantly in mind. We co-operate with him in every possible way by saving him money on materials and labor, and at the same time afford him an opportunity of making a legitimate profit on the building. In writing us, please ask for "Special Proposition for Contractors and Builders."

We guarantee that anything you purchase from us will be exactly as represented. You run no risk whatever for if your purchase is not right we make it right. Our Money-Back Guarantee is your protection.

Solution.

ADVOCATES BOYCOTT OF ADVANCED FOODSTUFFS.

THE only solution to the high food prices in Los Angeles which can be recommended by County Sealer of Weights and Measures Fuller to Mayor Woodman tomorrow, will be a general boycott on the articles that have gone way up. After making the investigation requested by the Mayor, Mr. Fuller yesterday stated that there was some speculation in food stuffs, but not as much as has been suggested by those who have been crying most loudly against the advances.

Not only did the sealer study local conditions, but he secured the co-operation of the Department of Agriculture and was informed that the crop production of the nation was 12 per cent. lower than that of a year ago while the exportation has more than doubled in two years, thus causing the shortage.

Here in California, the shortage of such products as potatoes, beans and other vegetables and dried fruits might be higher now if it had not been for the shortage of transportation to get these products to eastern points where quotations are higher than in this State.

California might well emulate the example of the great Pharaoh, Potiphar of Egypt, who established huge granaries and storehouses at the advice of Joseph, and thus had ample supplies during the seven years of drought and want, following the seven years of plenty, according to Sealer Fuller. He will recommend that municipal storehouses be established and that products be stored at the time they are low in price and then held for release during the periods of shortage, thus preventing speculation on the part of dealers and keeping the average cost of food nearer a level from one end of the year to the other.

Mr. Fuller has written the various women's organizations, such as the Friday Morning Club, the Ebell Club, the Million Club and others, suggesting the boycott be placed on eggs, butter, potatoes and a few other products until the men holding supplies of these things are forced to let go at a fair price.

URGES EVERYONE TO QUICKLY GET ON WATER WAGON

Drink Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast to Wash Out Poisons.

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside-bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.

NO WORK; HE STEALS.

Needed Jap's Money for Food, is Italian's Defense.

"When I asked him for work, he told me to beat it," said Vincent Marsigale yesterday when arraigned before Justice Forbes on a charge of having burglarized the home of Y. Hashimure at Bendino Station. "I needed the money that I took, to get something to eat, and that's why I went into the Jap's house," he declared.

Marsigale was willing to have this considered his preliminary hearing and admitted he had served time at Ione for a similar offense several years ago.

He is an overgrown Italian youth and his capture was effected by the Jap, who jumped on his back and stayed there despite efforts of Marsigale to unseat him.

He was bound over to the Superior Court on bail of $2500.

HOG-RAISERS COMING AS HERALDS OF STOCK SHOW.

AS a forerunner of the national stock show for Los Angeles, which now appears certain to be accomplished, steps have been taken within the past two days to make definite arrangements for the Swine Breeders' of California convention, to be held in this city on January 18 and 19. It is expected that during this convention, which will draw to Los Angeles many of the most prominent stockmen of California and the great Southwest, definite arrangements will be made for the launching of the greater project—a national annual stock show.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday the following committees were appointed to arrange for the swine breeders' convention and to carry out the programme for a two-days' meeting:

THE COMMITTEES.

Entertainment: Frank Hauser, Herbert Newcom, Charles F. Hardy, N. R. Vail, Herman Janss, S. R. Dixon.

Reception: B. A. Benjamin, O. B. Fuller, Stoddard Jess, Harry Chandler, A. T. Brant, H. J. Hauser.

Attendance: Frank H. Thomas, Mr. Hall, LeRoy Holt, A. L. Hobson, C. S. Johnson, E. F. Sanquinette, Roy Farr, F. E. Peck.

Executive Committee: Herman Hauser, chairman; S. R. Dixon, J. C. Good, John Woodward, N. Russell Vail, Herbert Newcom, John E. Maurer.

The tentative programme for the convention is as follows:

THURSDAY, JANUARY 18.

9 a.m.—Business session.

10:00 a.m.—"The California Swine Breeders' Association," by President C. B. Cunningham, Mills.

10:30 a.m.—"Feeding, Growing and Market Hogs," Leon L. Hamson, Holtville.

11 a.m.—"The Breeding Herd and the Pure-bred Business," William Bernstein, Hanford.

11:20 a.m.—Discussion: Feeding Problems, Self-feeders, etc.

12 m.—Luncheon.

1:30 p.m.—"Why the Prices of Swine in California are Lower than in Oregon or in the Middle States," representative of one of the packing-houses.

3:30 p.m.—"Why Strictly Grain-fed, Milk-fed, Alfalfa-fed and acorn-fed Hogs all Bring About the Same Price in California," representative of one of the packing-houses.

3:30 p.m.—"What is Being Done and What Should be Done for the Good of the Swine Industry in California," D. O. Lively, San Francisco.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 19.

8:30 a.m.—Killing demonstration at Cudahy Packing Company.

10 a.m.—Curing display at Wilson & Co's.

11:30 a.m.—Inspection of plant and luncheon at Hauser Packing Company's.

1 p.m.—Visit to moving picture studios and other points of interest in Los Angeles.

DISPLAY OF BOOKS.

Juvenile Volumes Shown at Public Library Main Office and the Branches This Week, that Parents May have Good Guide for Gifts.

With the object of informing parents on the proper choice of gift books for their boys, an extensive display of appropriate Christmas volumes for "Young America" will be shown this week at the main office of the Public Library and also at the various branches.

The realization that boys should have books which relate wholesome adventures rather than those which describe the shedding of blood in indiscriminate quantities, is responsible for the exhibition. Economy is also considered in the displays—better reading matter but less expensive bindings.

An effort is being made all over the United States by the Boy Scouts of America to have this week observed as "Good Book Week." The movement was originated by Franklin K. Mathiews, chief scout librarian, and has been indorsed by numbers of prominent educators.

Why It Sells.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the largest-selling cough medicine in the world today, because it does exactly what a cough remedy is supposed to do. It stops the cough by curing the cold, and does it speedily and effectually.—[Advertisement.

Point of View.

BEATING THE COST OF LIVING BECOMES ZESTFUL ADVENTURE.

Anybody Can Spend Money, but Making a Dollar Stretch is a Feat that Takes Brains and Heart—What a Casserole and Glorified Stew Can Mean.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

"ISN'T the high cost of living simply scandalous?" snorted the lady who always wears an atmosphere of affluence wrapped round her, she who considers a georgette crepe negligee and silk "undies" essential items of her wardrobe. "Fourteen dollars for a pair of shoes that I should have considered dear at $8 a couple of years ago!"

"Yes, indeed," agreed the prominent club woman, "and all my clubs have considered this a suitable occasion on which to raise all their dues. George's clubs are costing him nearly twice as much, too. It is simply outrageous."

"Myron says we shall have to part with the car if this sort of thing goes on," sighed the society matron with two eligible daughters. "Oh, I simply hate economizing, don't you? It's so hard on the girls."

Oh, I simply hate economizing.

"Seems to me a little economizing would not hurt some of us," remarked a thrifty dame, who is suspected of Scotch descent. "It is about time the rising generation had a little lesson in the gentle art of doing without. Such extravagance as we have seen for the last few years would have been considered little short of criminal in my young days."

"Yes," murmured the quiet little Englishwoman, shyly. "I do think things are getting awfully dear, but somehow, you know, I rather like economizing. I was awfully poor once and learned a lot of little economical tricks. It used to be a matter of pride to me to make a dollar go as far as anyone else's five. But, of course, when living was cheap and money plentiful, it seemed rather indecent to practice my talents. One felt so scandalously tightwadish. I always maintained I should have been absolutely wasted on a millionaire. I should never have done him any sort of credit. But now, you know, I can indulge my taste for economy to my heart's content. I suppose that sounds rather disgusting to you affluently-trained Americans. You see, I never could make money—no head for business at all. But I did learn how to make a little go a long way. And now, of course, I am absolutely justified in all my little stinginesses."

SHE EVEN LIKES IT!

"You don't mean to say that you like economizing," came the shocked, incredulous chorus of voices. "Listen to this, girls—she says she likes economizing."

"I expect it does sound rather cheap of me," smiled the renegade, "but I will confess to taking a secret pride in my ability to make the very most of my modest income. You see, anyone can spend money, waste money, dribble it away, but it takes both a head and a heart to economize gracefully."

This was such a new and disconcerting point of view that we simply gazed at the unique creature in amazement. With sugar up to eleven pounds for $1, with meat out of sight, and with eggs at 65 cents a dozen, with shoes at the price of diamonds, with 30-cent brooms at 65 cents, with bread up to 12 cents, with underwear in our carefully cultivated taste for silk at the place where we had to consider an ignominious return to longcloth, with even our magazine rates raised on us and father cussing at the cost of tobacco and imported wines and gasoline, with war taxes on long distance calls and tickets to Europe, with club dues raised on all sides, and Lucille et Cie charging us $49.50 for a $10 hat, and here a woman daring to say she liked it. What plebeian taste! And yet . . . well, there was the attractive zest of adventure in her point of view.

"Any fool can spend money." That rankled a bit. "But it takes a head and a heart to economize." Well, there was a certain amount of logic in that, we had to admit.

She continued to press her advantage home. "One feels something like a soldier, you know," she was saying. "They like war because it tests their pluck and endurance and gives them a chance to show their grit. That's why I like economizing. It gives one a chance to display one's talents for the good of the family. It's a sort of triumph over conditions, if one can show a credit balance at the end of the month."

BEHOLD THE LUXURIES.

So that is how we came to embark on our adventure in economy. We left off cultivating our culture for a bit and sat down to readjusting our ideas on essentials. If only economizing were as fashionable as spending, it can prove every whit as enticing.

We decided it came under the head of domestic science and invited the plebeian economist to discourse.

"Well, the first thing to do is to review one's expenditures and carefully segregate the luxuries from the necessities," she said. "You'd be surprised what an awful lot of things can conscientiously be placed under the heading of luxuries. And is isn't necessary to begin on father's tobacco and drinks either, although one can tactfully work round to that. And one doesn't have to hurl a cereal-vegetarian diet at the family stomach and start nagging the grocer, or take a violent drop from silk or flannelette, or put a drastic brake on one's charities. Your clever economist does not apparently alter his style of living at all—he only makes his dollar do its utmost."

Thereafter she proceeded to details. Some of them sounded pretty petty to us, I can tell you. For instance, about matches. By lighting the old match whenever there is a burning gas jet we could save a box a month. By seeing that the gas was turned low directly the saucepan boiled, by watching that only just enough and no more water was heated for the bath, by seeing that lights were never left burning in rooms not in use, by keeping a careful tab on wasted water, dripping faucets and the like, by insisting that the family teeth exercise themselves on the crusts so that never a crumb of bread was wasted, by sharing up magazine subscriptions with a friend, by reinforcing new stockings at the heel and toe with a slender silk darn, and the same with underwear at the weak spots, by putting the patch in Johnny's pants on the inside directly they were purchased, by cleaning and pressing most of the clothes at home, by washing and ironing one's own shirtwaists and neckwear, by reserving white petticoats for special occasions, by cleaning one's own gloves, by keeping a watchful eye on the butter and seeing that the members of the family do not leave chunks on their plates, by using lard and shortening instead of butter on numerous legitimate occasions, by lighting the fire for sociable purposes and keeping an oil heater for the ordinary times when one is busy about other things, by cultivating a taste for careful mending, by washing one's hair oneself instead of sallying forth for a luxurious shampoo, by cutting out expensive face creams and trying what cold water and pure soap will do, by eschewing perfumes—in short, by exercising vigilance and thoughtfulness and cultivating a certain enthusiastic busyness, it proved possible to save $20, $30, $40 a month without feeling it, according to the size of the household.

CASSEROLE MAGIC.

Then on the food. What we learned about casserole dishes was illuminating. We found that a casserole could make 15-cent steak tender and savory, transform 10-cent lamb stew into a delicacy, turn cold mutton into a curry de luxe, make rice au gratin at a cost of about 10 cents for a family of six, seem like an epicurean feast for the gods; produce the most wonderful, savory head cheese out of any old scraps with the subtle addition of a sprinkling of the right herbs, and, as for fish, well, 20 cents worth done a la casserole, properly flavored, proved sufficient for five of us, and the Los Angeles Country Club chef would not have scorned to claim it for his own. There are about twenty ways of making cheap fish an epicurean dish, and, when served with the suitable vegetables, they make an adequate repast for a king.

And what that woman knew about soups? She could make a dozen nourishing, savoury soups, all with distinct flavors, with 10 cents' worth of materials, and glowed with pride as she divulged their cheapness. She managed to win us all round to a pride in economy; there wasn't one of us who could ever have the face to brag of how much, but rather of how little, things had cost after that.

One dish she taught us was essentially English—the boiled meat pudding. For four people it takes a piled-up cupful of flour, a piled-up cupful of finely chopped suet, a pinch of baking powder and salt, mixed into a dough with cold water. A basin is greased and lined with the dough. Fifteen cents' worth of round steak and two lamb's kidneys are cut up into small pieces and piled in. Half a small onion is chopped up, a dash of pepper and salt, a tiny piece of mace—fill it up with water, cover tightly with dough, tie in a pudding cloth, plunge into boiling water, boil for an hour and a half, and you have such a savory, nourishing dish for 25 cents that the family will be demanding it. The same procedure is good for the lean of the cheap parts of lamb, but instead of mace use a sprinkling of thyme, and behold another dish for the gods!

STEW TRANSFORMED.

In her hands, too, the stew of evil fame became a banquet. Our respective families insisted upon giving it fancy names, since they could not bring themselves to believe it was common stew. The cheapest cuts of beef and mutton present themselves on the table with melting tenderness under responsive treatment, and, by the judicious addition of the right kinds of herbs and spices, vegetables and cereals, easily vie with the vaunted chickens and turkeys. The old fashioned stews, that taste all alike and in which the hasty housewife thinks Preliminary Hearing.

PURE FOOD VIOLATORS FACE BAR OF JUSTICE.

Over Hundred Dealers and Manufacturers, Many of Whom Were Merely Careless of the Manner in Which Their Package Goods Were Marketed, Must Answer State Board of Health Charges.

MORE than 100 violations of the Pure Food and Drug Law came up for preliminary hearing yesterday before the State Board of Health in Sacramento. Many of the cases were those of dealers and manufacturers who were honest in principle, but careless of the manner in which their products were handled, thus giving rise to many improper packages. Los Angeles was represented by over a score of cases.

Thirty-nine cases of eggs, sold as fresh eggs, but containing from one to three rotten eggs to the dozen, were considered; eleven cases of drugs, consisting of cure-alls, with false statements on the labels, and four cases of walnut meats, in which the nuts were either rancid, moldy or infested with parasites, were investigated.

SPECIFIC CASES.

The 115 specific violations investigated by the board were:

Four cases walnut meats; nuts rancid, moldy, or infested with insects. Two of these samples were collected from an ice cream manufacturing plant and were used in the making of nut ice cream. The other two samples were taken from a wholesaler, who sold this class of goods to ice cream manufacturers and bakers.

One case of pork sausage, containing sodium sulphite, a prohibited preservative.

Seven cases of fish, canned sardines; decomposed. Cans swelled and corroded.

Thirty-nine cases of eggs, sold as fresh eggs, but consisted of stale eggs, storage eggs and in many cases, one, two or three rotten eggs to the dozen.

One case of milk; condensed skimmed milk; decomposed and contained excessive bacteria.

Two "egg custard powder" cases made from starch, gelatine and coal tar dye, without any eggs.

Seven cases of gluten bread, made largely from common flour, materially below standard.

One case of bread, labeled and sold as "Butter Bread, Pure Creamery Butter Used." The shortening in this bread consisted almost entirely of cottonseed products, with only a trace of butter.

Two cases of maple nut ice cream made with imitation maple extract and rancid nut meats.

One case of gluten flour, materially below standard.

Two cases of macaroons, containing a large amount of wheat flour. Genuine macaroons are made from almond meal, sugar and white of eggs, without any flour.

ADULTERATED COFFEE.

Three cases of coffee, containing chickory, roasted cereals or dried fruit. These samples were collected from restaurants where a cheap grade of coffee, mixed with the above adulterants, was served. Restaurants which serve coffee with chickory, etc., should indicate the fact on the bill of fare.

One case of gelatine, inferior [illegible] refined product containing glue and excessive bacteria. This gelatine was used in ice cream.

One case of jelly, made largely from exhausted apple stock and sold as raspberry jelly.

Two cases of prepared mustard, artificially colored with turmeric and adulterated with cereals.

One case of mace; inferior, worthless mace substituted for true mace.

Eight cases of tomatoes and tomato pulps, consisting of decomposed and moldy stock containing excessive bacteria.

One case of canned strawberries consisting of decomposed and filthy material.

Three cases of extracts, deficient in strength.

Two cases of vinegar, consisting of watered vinegar in one case and cheap, imitation vinegar in the other.

One raspberry syrup case; contained coal tar dye in imitation of the genuine product.

Three cases of orangeade, made with water, sugar, coal tar dye, citric acid and orange extract, with a slight amount of orange juice.

Two cases of cider, consisting entirely of imitation products, artificially colored.

Three cases of ginger ale, containing capsicum (red pepper,) not declared on the label.

One case of absinthe; the sale of absinthe is prohibited in California.

One case of beer, label deceptive.

Four cases of liquor, consisting of cheap imitations, sold under an imported label.

Eleven drug cases, consisting of cure-alls with false and misleading statements on the labels; pyorrhea paste, with misleading statements on the label; two mineral waters with false and misleading statements on the label, and aceto salicylic acid adulterated with starch and sugar.

old thing can be popped, are some affairs that have gained the dish its bad name. But your adventuress in economy knows a trick worth two of that. She would as soon mix her spices and herbs as she would wear a sport hat with an evening dress. Cooking, like dressing, is merely a matter of discriminating taste. Thus to put thyme with beef or clove and mace with mutton are gastronomic crimes. Onion with chicken is dastradly, as also is sage. But onion and sage with duck—ah, that is another story.

After a month of this economic adventure we are inclined to agree with our tutor. We positively like economizing. With living costing twice as much as it did three years ago, we are saving many dollars a month on our housekeeping bills. Some people's idea o feconomy is letting the other chap pay for the tickets, using the other chaps' car, letting the other fellow provide the cigarettes and drinks, and owing the grocer and the bucher until the last possible date. But any sincere adventurer in economy would scorn these graceless means. We prefer to take it put in vigilance and thought.

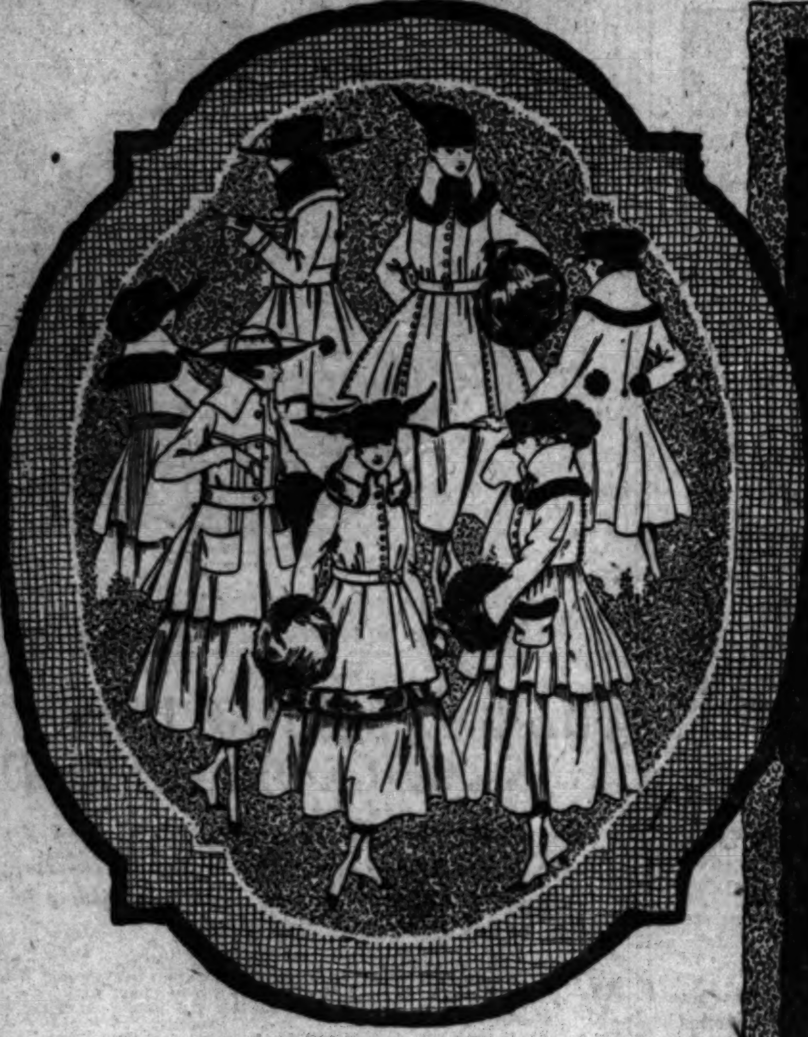
The Paris ½ Price Suit Sale



Beginning Monday, 9 A. M.

The sale unrivaled—for which Los Angeles women have been waiting. An event that gives the fullest meaning to the word bargain, for it includes the grouping together of all the broken lines of wonderful Paris Store suits, with the addition of many special purchases.

The selling will continue Tuesday, and as much longer as there are half-price suits to be closed out. Our opinion is, however, that the sale will be over by Tuesday night. Such values as these will be snapped up quickly.

$19.50 Suits, $ 9.75
$25.00 Suits, $12.50
$29.50 Suits, $14.75
$32.50 Suits, $16.25

$42.50 Suits, $21.25
$49.50 Suits, $24.75
$55.00 Suits, $27.50
$65.00 Suits, $32.50
$75.00 Suits, $37.50
$85.00 Suits, $42.50

Nearly every good material is represented in this sale and there are all sizes for misses and women. Smart models in broadcloth, plain or checked velour, gabardine, serge, chiffon velvet, kitten's ear cloth, duvetyne, suede cloth and Vicuna velour. Many are exact copies of high priced originals, novelty styles, Norfolk and Empire models, belted and fitted-at-the-waist models. Colors are the winter's most fashionable, such as plum, Burgundy, green, seal brown, navy, mustard and black. Collars, cuffs, bandings and trimmings of Hudson seal, moleskin, skunk, opossum, raccoon, beaver and Kolinsky. And there are plain styles for the women who want to wear their own separate furs.

This sale usually does not come until after Christmas, but this year we can supply all your holiday suit wants at half what you expected to pay.

Coats

The Reduction Spirit Has Brought 200 Fine Styles Down to $13.50, $16.50 and $19.75

There are rich Bolivias, kitten's ear velours, plain or checked wool velours and dyed chinchillas, mixtures, boucles, broadcloths and Peruvian cloths, made especially for us from selected materials and fur trimmings. Burgundy, plum, mustard, green, brown, navy and black are the colors and they are full, loose flaring models.

SANDALS ARE REPLACING MILADY'S DEAR BOOTS.

FOUR million dollars saving in one year in the shoe bills of Los Angeles women is the ultimate possibility represented by nifty and wholly comfortable Grecian sandals that nowadays adorn the feet of Miss Vivian Haynes and other Southern California society women. In this day when $25 boots have become everyday shoes, there is a serious movement afoot to discard the styles dictated in the East, and to wear abroad the "comfy" sandals now very common in homes of fashion.

According to comparatively accurate estimates made last year, the women's shoes sold for $10 a pair, milady in this city alone spent more than $3,000,000 for her footwear. But now eastern dispatches have brought the information that no smart woman's shoe can now be made to sell for less than $25 and $30 a pair. Leather of all kinds has become exceedingly scarce and the prices have soared out of sight.

And there is said to be no relief in sight, because the warring European countries have contracted for the South American supply, which formerly furnished this country with shoe leather.

Not with any thought of economy, the women of the motion-picture colony some time ago adopted for home Grecian sandals, and found them so becoming and so comfortable that $15 and $20 shoes were actually tabooed.

Then other women seeking grace and beauty and comfort in their footwear began to don Grecian sandals in the house. But when the news was flashed broadcast that women's shoes were to sell at prohibitive prices this year, they said why not wear these shoes on the street? Why pay $25 when we can appear in something much more beautiful and much more comfortable and pay only $2.50 or $3 a pair, at the most?

If such a style should be generally adopted, it is said, it would be a godsend to the less fortunate women, who can ill afford to pay even $5 or $6 a pair for their boots. When they pay $25 it is evident they must suffer, for the difference in the price of their shoes they must take from necessities.

Besides the 150,000 women in Los Angeles affected by the high cost of shoes, there are about 200,000 children.

In California there are no snows and no bitter cold to nip my lady's toes. On the other hand, the votaries of the sandal declare, there is every inducement to cure corns, give the feet a fair chance and woo health from the sole up.

WHEN IT PAYS TO BE UGLY.

Value of Carmine and Rouge is Multiplied by Five Because of War.

"Heavens, Mabel, isn't it dreadful?"

"What?"

"Why, the high cost of beauty!"

The Chicago Retail Druggists' Association has just announced that carmine, used to make the lips of feminine more tempting, and rouge to make the sallow cheeks to bloom as the rose, has been advanced to five times the price for which it sold three years ago. This is "on account of the war."

WOMAN'S WIT WINS.

Clever Bachelor Girl Sells Goose Grease to Provide a Spread on Thanksgiving for Herself and Four Friends; has Twenty-three Cents Left.

Miss Lloyd Garrison, bachelor girl and artist, handed the high cost of living bugaboo a swat Thanksgiving Day and proved that even a girl can earn a good dinner when put to it.

Miss Garrison had four friends, who felt they could not afford a turkey at 40 cents a pound, but were willing to put in $1 each for the dinner. Miss Garrison could not afford even $1, she said, but would provide a bountiful meal. Here is how she cast up the account, purchasing the fowl through a restaurant man and getting the benefit of the wholesale price:

Four dinners	$4.00	10-lb. goose at 25c	$2.50
Goose grease	.90	Soup (canned)	.10
		Celery	[illegible]
		Sweet potatoes	.10
		Stuffing	[illegible]
		Cranberries	.10
		Salad	.10
		Cheese	[illegible]
		Plum pudding	[illegible]
		Mince pie	[illegible]
		Coffee, nuts, etc.	[illegible]
		Wine	[illegible]
Total	$4.90	Total	$4.77

Balance, 23 cents.

The goose grease was sold to the corner druggist for medicinal purposes. In addition to securing an excellent dinner for herself and 23 cents in cash, Miss Garrison had remaining sufficient food to make two luncheons.

BONDS IN DOUBT.

Contractor Refuses to Begin Work on Drainage System Until the Validity of Rominger-act Issue is Determined; Court Writ Sought.

After signing a $92,000 contract for the Signal Hill drainage system, in Los Angeles County Drainage District No. 1, Contractor Kennedy refused to go on with the contract until the validity of the bonds to cover the expenses of construction had been passed on by the courts.

The contract was let under the Rominger act. In order to ascertain if the bonds are salable, a Supreme Court decision will be necessary. Deputy County Counsel Haas will go to Sacramento this week to learn if a writ of mandate will lie. The Supreme Court has never passed on this question, and as there are three additional districts contemplating work under the act, it is important to determine the validity of the bonds.

Ordinance Proposed.

FOR HEALTH CONTROL OF PUBLIC EATING PLACES.

ALL public eating places are to be regulated by the Health Commissioner, if an ordinance he proposed to the Council yesterday is approved. The Health and Sanitation Committee will examine it before action is taken.

It is planned that permits shall be required for restaurants, hotels, cafés and boarding-houses and also cafeterias, lunch stands, delicatessen places, soda fountain establishments and all other places where food and drink are sold.

The proposed ordinance makes it a misdemeanor to offer for sale any unwholesome, impure, unclean, corrupted or adulterated food or drink, or to serve any "comebacks" or anything which has been returned from a table except unbroken slices of bread, unbroken rolls, muffins, crackers and portions of French bread, potatoes in unbroken skins and a few other things. No butter once returned can be used for any purpose other than cooking.

Every floor of every dining-room must be clean and tight and every eating place, including lunch stands, must have toilet facilities, if this ordinance goes through. All table linen, tableware and utensils are to be sterilized and no dog, live rabbit or any other animal will be permitted in any room or enclosure in which there is food. The provisions of the ordinance will not apply to saloons.

Distribution.

BUY A CHRISTMAS SEAL TO AID THE RED CROSS.

DISTRIBUTION of more than 1,300,000 Red Cross seals, this city's share of the 800,000,000 Christmas seals to be sold in the United States to aid the fight against the white plague, will start in Los Angeles this week. These little seals, which designate the insignia of one of the largest organizations in the world, an organization composed of citizens, will be placed on sale in almost every store in the city where they may be purchased for the price of 1 cent.

The purchaser of the stamp soon forgets the expenditure and, sticking it on a Christmas parcel or letter, thinks, perhaps, for an instant, of the meaning of the unneeded stamp and then forgets in the whirls of Yuletide. But the cent expended has just begun its long journey, acting in accord with other such tiny units in swelling the fund that is constantly in use in fighting the battle of the world against consumption.

Last year more than $3,000,000 was received from the sale of these stamps. An added sum of thousands of dollars was received by the officers of the American Red Cross Society from memberships in the organization. Yet even this great sum dwindled rapidly as it was thrown into the trenches in the effort to stop the onrush of the dread disease.

But it did its part, and this year the society reports a large and favorable development of the work, with the opening of new outdoor schools and the erection of sanatoriums.

Nearly 1500 anti-tuberculosis associations are now enrolled as allies of the American Red Cross Society in all sections of the country. The State of California, as well as Los Angeles county and city, have joined the local branch of the society in the fight here. Miss Sydney Maguire, secretary of the Los Angeles branch of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis is conducting the campaign for aid through the purchase of stamps here. With her at her offices at 111 Normal Hill Center, will be associated Miss Margaret Scott, local secretary of the American Red Cross Society.

Local Hotel Assistant Manager Loses Relatives at Front.

H. W. Wills, one of the assistant managers of the Alexandria, yesterday received a cablegram from England announcing the death last Wednesday of his brother, Ernest Jerrard Wills, son-in-law of Sir Robert Cadenhead of Kent.

Within the past two months Mr. Wills has received three cablegrams from England, each announcing the death of a member of his family. During the fighting along the Somme in the recent allied offensive Harold Lindley Wills, a nephew, was killed in the trenches. A few weeks later news was received that another nephew, Eric Fitzwalter Wills, had been horribly mangled and subsequently died, as the result of helping capture a mined trench.

The father of the two boys, according to the cablegram, weakened by grieving over the loss of his sons, failed to rally from a cold.

HANDIWORK ATTRACTS.

Craft Study Club's Annual Exhibit Wins Gratifying Success.

The second annual exhibit of handiwork by members of the Craft Study Club was held yesterday at the Clark and attracted considerable attention. Mrs. I. de la Monte, president of the club, superintended the exhibit.

Fifteen members of the club entered exhibits, making a display much larger than that of last year. Most of the exhibits consisted of art metal and leather work, hand-made textiles and jewelry. There were also several noticeable pottery exhibits.

MAKE MONEY OUT OF EGYPTIAN CORN.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TULARE, Dec. 2.—Tulare county's banner Egyptian corn crop is awaiting shipment from here under contract to brokers in San Francisco. Forty thousand sacks of the grain, representing the output of this section, by far the largest in the history of this district, will be sold at an average price of $49 per ton.

Kidney Disorder

(By Dr. L. C. Babcock.)

Simple methods are usually the most effective ones when treating any disorder of the human system. The mere drinking a cup of hot water each morning, plenty of pure water all day, and a little Anuric before every meal has been found the most effective means of overcoming kidney trouble. Death would occur if the kidneys did not work day and night in separating poisons and uric acid from the blood.

The danger signals are backache, depressions, aches, pains, heaviness, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, chilliness, rheumatic twinges, swollen joints, gout.

It is such a simple matter to step into your favorite drug store and obtain Anuric, which was first discovered by Dr. Pierce, of the Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. Every druggist dispenses it.

All people in America and especially those who are past middle age are prone to eat too much meat and in consequence deposit uric acid (uratic salts) in their tissues and joints. They often suffer from twinges of rheumatism or lumbago, sometimes from gout, swollen hands or feet. Such people are not always able to exercise sufficiently in the outdoor air in order to sweat freely and excrete impurities through the skin. Anuric will overcome such conditions as rheumatism, dropsical, swellings, cold extremities, scalding and burning urine and sleeplessness due to constant need of getting out of bed at night, by carrying off the uric acid poison.

To Keep Your Skin Free From Hairs

(Beauty Topics)

If you are willing to spend a few minutes time in your room using a delatone paste, you can easily banish any ugly, hairy growth without discomfort or injury. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This is then spread over the hairy surface and after about two minutes rubbed off and the skin washed. You will not be disappointed with this treatment, providing you get real delatone.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

TODAY'S BEAUTY TALK.

You can make a delightful shampoo with very little effort and for a very trifling cost, if you get from your druggist a package of canthrox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. Your shampoo is now ready. Just pour a little at a time on the scalp and rub briskly. This creates an abundance of thick, white lather that thoroughly dissolves and removes the dandruff, excess oil and dirt. After rinsing, the hair dries quickly, with a fluffiness that makes it seem heavier than it is, and takes on a rich luster and a softness that makes arranging it a pleasure.

J. L. Butler, Chief of Police,

Whose reorganization of the department has begun to bear fruit.

Far-reaching.

CHANGES CUTTING DEEP IN POLICE DEPARTMENT.

New Chief's "Business Administration" Replaces Art Objects with Filing Cases, Alters System of Handling Complaints, Enforces Courtesy, Establishes School for Officers and Reorganizes Departments.

WHEN Police Lieutenant J. L. Butler became a candidate for the position of Chief of Police a little over two months ago he wrote a thesis on "What I Would Do as Chief of Police," and submitted it to Mayor Woodman. His appointment followed. Chief Butler was told to put his theories into practice. The motto he set up was "A business administration." Now, after two months, one may begin to get an insight into the working out of these plans.

As head of the traffic bureau of the city, Chief Butler made a national reputation among police officials, working out and adapting plans to facilitate traffic, prevent accidents and avoid congestion in the downtown streets. He worked for the benefit of both pedestrians and motorists, and his detail work was as near perfect as has been reached in this field. This is one of the most crowded cities, from the point of view of the traffic bureau, in the United States, and as the season lasts twelve months in the year, the work of the traffic head was worthy of commendation.

When Chief Butler assumed his present office he applied the same rules that made his traffic work a success. He found the Chief's office more like the studio of an erratic artist than the business office of the Police Department of the largest city in the West. Japanese works of art, photographs, great silken flags, souvenirs of famous cases, vases for flowers, ornaments, etc., were much in evidence. One of the first orders of the new occupant of the office resulted in denuding the walls and tables of everything that was not needed. Filing cases took the place of art objects.

BUREAU OF COMPLAINTS.

Chief Butler found two conditions that needed immediate attention. One was a broader handling of complaints in the Chief's office and the other was a different mode of directing the work of the detective bureau. The first condition was met by establishing a bureau to hear all complaints regarding violations of city ordinances. This bureau is in charge of an officer, night and day, who has a good knowledge of the city ordinances and can, without delay, tell the complaining persons whether they should visit the City Prosecutor or remedy certain conditions under their own control. Heretofore, the visitors to the Police Station have had great difficulty in getting proper information from the police, or from anyone connected with Central Station. Under the new system they have their questions answered at once and in an intelligent manner.

The detective bureau presented more difficulties. But these were met by installing former Assistant Chief of Police George Home in the detective bureau to co-operate with Capt. Paul Flammer, in charge. Each detective was instructed to make out a daily report on every case assigned to him, thus permitting the head of the department to keep a close watch on each case and eliminate a possibility of graft and miscarriage of justice.

The greatest fault was at the counter, where lost persons, thefts, missing relatives, lost articles and other complaints are reported to the detectives. More trouble started over the counter of this department than in all the remainder of the police department combined. Persons who reported missing relatives, stolen automobiles, watches or other valuables, were frequently the recipients of gratuitous insults from "bone-headed" policemen. Chief Butler says he will remedy this condition, placing only men of good manners in charge of the desk, and will see that all complaints receive immediate attention, instead of being filed in books that never again see the light of day.

SCHOOL FOR POLICEMEN.

Police officers are chosen more for their physical ability than their astuteness and as a result many men have secured places on the force who can hardly read and write. Their knowledge of police work is limited, and, although they mean well, they have little knowledge of the laws they are supposed to enforce. Frequent tragedies and serious blunders have resulted from the inability of the officers to distinguish between their duty and the rights of the public that employs them. Brutality and stupidity went hand in hand and the public never received much consideration for its complaints. There was a growing sentiment that the police force of this city needed wholesale cleaning up. To meet this serious state of affairs and at the same time, not demoralize the force, Chief Butler has established a school for policemen and placed Lieut. Lee Heath in charge. Now the policemen are to be given a daily drill in their duties and the rights of others.

MUST BE COURTEOUS.

Brutality, violent language and ungentlemanly conduct among the officers receives the direct attention of the Chief. Almost the first week of Chief Butler's term saw him handing out discipline. A policeman had an argument with a detective and applied a number of ugly epithets. The men were called before the Chief, the officer entered no denial of the charge and was fined three days' pay with a promise of suspension for a second offense. This one item of discipline and punishment brought the entire force up standing, and there was a noticeable decline in loud and angry bickering in the stations.

The sore spots in every big city are the vice dens, gambling resorts and other evil places. Gamblers in this city for years have openly defied the law, retained expensive counsel and gone on with their games, fleecing the public at will. Sergt. Tom O'Brien was placed in charge of the Metropolitan Squad, greatly increased in strength, and told to get busy. He has the gamblers on the run. Nothing appears too hard for him to do to catch the "hard ones" and break up their places of vice. His squad is doing good work. In addition to the white gamblers, the Chinese lottery kings are feeling the sting of frequent raids. These sly gamblers declare they cannot be driven out of business, but Sergt. O'Brien says they can, and is showing them how it is done.

NO MORE "FIXING."

Memories of his traffic days hover over the Chief's office and one of his earliest acts was to stop the practice of "fixing" speed cases and other violations of the law. Men who knew certain city officials or had other influence would ignore the speed laws and when arrested escape paying the penalty by appealing to "influence." Chief Butler stopped this practice overnight. He is demanding bigger fines for those who imperil the lives of the pedestrians and is getting more action than was believed possible. If you are arrested you stand trial. Public Defender Pope and the Chief work together. The latter is always ready to assist in worthy cases and with the help of the Public Defender, is helping many men and women into better lives.

One of the things Chief Butler accomplished was the separation of the property clerk's office from that of the desk sergeant. This is looked on as a doubtful step by some of those in close touch with the situation. Property Clerk William Matuskiwiz has brought his office up to a high standard of efficiency. He handles a great fortune every year, the property of prisoners, stolen goods, found articles and bail. It runs into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Heretofore, the property clerk had charge of the desk sergeant's department, the place where all prisoners are received and booked. This combination saved the city a large sum of money each year, the salaries of several men.

Taken altogether, it is considered that the new Chief of Police has made a long forward stride in placing the police force on a semimilitary and strictly business basis. The change in the department is discernable to the casual visitor at the prison. The "business administration" appears to be meeting with results and those who are watching the new Chief predict he is on the high road to success and is making good on the job.

LANDMARKS CLUB FORCES REVIEW NOTABLE WORK.

Worthy Labors Now in Progress for Restoration of Mission San Fernando, La Purisima and San Juan Capistrano are Outlined by President Lummis and Others—Officers Retained.

ON THE two hundred and third anniversary of the birth of the great apostle of California, Junipero Serra, the annual meeting of the Landmarks' Club of California, Inc., was held at the home of Charles F. Lummis, founder and still president of the organization—the first in America to be incorporated to care for the heroic history and romance of the Southwest, and the only one whose actual work of preservation has saved so many historic monuments. Present were many representative men and women. The reports of past and present activities of the club, not in mere "resoluting" or "marking" historic landmarks, but in actually saving them, were greeted with applause.

In his annual address, President Lummis said, in part:

"Twenty-one years ago the Landmarks Club was incorporated under the laws of California. Its aim then, as now, was 'to save for our children and the world the historic landmarks of California.' It was the first organization in America for this purpose. For a long time it was lonely. Later, its ideals and its achievements led other States to undertake similar patriotic labors—partly as a result of the pioneer work of the Landmarks Club of California. Some of the founders of the Landmarks Club have been influential in securing the national action by Congress and other departments of the government in protecting our national parks, our forest reserves, our national monuments, etc. Today a large number of the States of the Union have similar organizations, many of which have appropriated the original 'landmarks' name; and there are few women's clubs in the Southwest without a 'landmarks' section.

PIONEER LABORS.

"The credit of the very first work in this line should be given to Miss Tessa L. Kelso, at that time librarian of the Los Angeles library, who in about 1892 enlisted a number of earnest women and raised some $200 to repair the missions. For various reasons, this association achieved nothing beyond the raising of money. This they turned over to the Landmarks Club upon its organization, and this corporation expended this sum according to the wishes of those who had raised it.

"The Landmarks Club has been a very quiet, but very efficient agency. It was not only first in the field of preserving the historic monuments; it has also been most effective. It has had nothing to do with politics or with public moneys, or much to do with publicity. Its revenues have been secured from individuals by correspondence, and have been strictly applied. It has paid no salaries or had any 'rake off.' None of its officials have ever feathered their nests by the growing interest in the missions.

"The Landmarks Club has counted its responsible trusteeship from the first as involving not only zeal but competency. It has felt that whatever repairs were to be made must be made with absolute regard to historical and architectural accuracy. It has stood invariably by this creed throughout its history; and neither artist nor architect nor historian has ever yet successfully criticised any work of restoration or repair done by the Landmarks Club."

FOR THE NEGLECTED.

"The missions still used as temples of worship by the Catholic Church are, of course, largely cared for by it. It is the deserted missions of Southern California to which the Landmarks Club has paid particular attention—San Diego, the mother mission; Pala, San Juan Capistrano and San Fernando. These, having no longer congregations, were falling rapidly to total ruin. Nothing would be left today of any of them if it had not been for the work of the Landmarks Club a generation ago. The Landmarks Club has also contributed largely to the rehabilitation of the Mission San Luis Rey and of the old Pio Pico mansion near Whittier. It saved the historic plaza of Los Angeles from being covered by a city market many years ago, and kept on the map a large number of street names of this city. But at the missions under its trusteeship it has done a very large work. As was said before, nothing would be left at San Diego, Pala, San Juan Capistrano or San Fernando but for the work of this club. This work has been financed by people all over the United States, mostly in dollar memberships, though many have paid the life membership fee.

"In this time the Landmarks Club has reroofed more than an acre and a half of mission buildings, saved more than half a mile of adobe walls and conducted many other activities, without much noise.

PRESENT WORK.

"It has just completed over $1000 worth of work at San Juan Capistrano (where it had already reroofed every building standing, at an expense of several thousand dollars.) It is now actively at work in making such repairs to the old church at San Fernando—the largest adobe church in the Southwest—that within forty-five days this great structure will be in condition to stand for many centuries. And except for the work of the Landmarks Club this great building would be mere mounds of adobe within five years—as it would have been now except for the club's work in 1897, which preserved it for the present complete restoration.

"An example of the methods of the Landmarks Club may be taken from this same Mission San Fernando. The urgent need of further repairs became evident and the club undertook the necessary safeguarding. Miss Lucretia del Valle, leading lady of the "Mission Play," was made executive chairman, and with her zeal, her faith and her genius for interesting others, she carried through what was probably the most extraordinary 'benefit' ever held in California. Nearly 7000 people were present August 6, 1916, the one hundred and forty-seventh anniversary of the discovery of the valley by Europeans. Catholics, Episcopalians, Baptists, Jews and people of all creeds were on the programme; and the interest and attention that marked the day were noted by those who have seen the most important functions of the various States of the Union.

"This was the sentimental side. From the business side we believe the record is very notable. 'Benefits' generally swallow up from 50 to 100 per cent. of the income. A recent colossal production of 'Julius Caesar' for the benefit of the Actors' Fund took in $24,000 and yielded the actors $2000—an expense of over 90 per cent.

"The total expenses of San Fernando 'Candle Day' under the administration of the Landmarks Club were less than 6 per cent. of the gross receipts. As net result of Miss Del Valle's 'Candle Day' campaign the Landmarks Club deposited in its treasury the sum of $3427.21. Further contributions, though delayed, will be accredited to the same cause.

UNIQUE PURPOSE.

"The Landmarks Club is not only the first, but the only organization which has ever done actual work in saving the historic monuments of Southern California. It is still the only corporation in the West devoted to such work. It is the only organization of any sort which undertakes such work even today (when its example has led many amateurs to imitation) which does its work in the strict light of history and architecture and engineering under the most competent authorities in each.

"When the Landmarks Club began, twenty-one years ago, its worst enemy was general indifference. Today that is its least handicap. Now, everybody is interested in the missions. What we have to face now is chiefly the self-seekers who wish to secure prominence by pretending to cater to something which appeals to universal sentiment; and next to that, the pious zeal of those who look upon its missions not as monuments but as buildings.

"With the most earnest respect, I am willing to be quoted anywhere as saying that the neighbors who have stolen the tiles and the adobes, and have helped to wreck the missions, have not committed any more serious vandalism than the God-fearing who have 'restored' some of these missions to such a point that Junipero Serra would throw up his hands if he could be brought back to see them. Such restorations as those at San Luis Obispo, San Buena Ventura and San Gabriel would give cold shivers to the real architects who built what were once noble pieces of architecture, but are now as much botched as modern materialism can botch them.

"The work at San Fernando will occupy the fullest activities of the club, and most of the sinews of war that it can string, for the next three or four months—for we shall have to pay for some of this work after it is done.

PURISIMA NEXT.

"But we are only beginning. The club has been given title to the beautiful Mission La Purisima, on condition that it expend $1500 in repairs before October 1, 1917. We have already made a reasonable beginning; but there is a large contract to fulfill on this extraordinarily beautiful landmark—and the time is not very long.

"The people of San Diego, in spite of their wonderful work on their exposition, are planning to restore in its entirety the first mission on the West Coast of the United States. Theirs is the first cloister to apply for a charter under the Landmarks Club, which expects to have local cloisters at each important center concerned in a mission.

"The Landmarks Club is also working in direct co-operation with the State Humane Society—feeling that the native birds are also part of the landmarks of California—and with every other body which recognizes our filial duty to this great State; the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West, the pioneer societies, the architects and engineers, through the local chapters of their national organizations, and so on."

REPORTS HEARD.

Samuel Storrow, engineer of the Landmarks Club, reported on the $5000 work of repair now in progress on the great adobe church at San Fernando Mission—the largest adobe church, and the largest mission, in all the Southwest.

The venerable Archbishop Gillow of Antiquera and Oaxaca spoke eloquently of the work he is doing on the huge monastery at San Fernando—by far the largest historic building in California.

Father St. John O'Sullivan, resident priest of the Mission San Juan Capistrano, told how he had been able to supplement the extensive work of the Landmarks Club, and of his dream to restore the original adobe church built by Junipero Serra there in the year of the American Independence—the oldest church still standing in California, and the oldest surviving building in which Serra said mass. While the Landmarks Club is overwhelmingly non-Catholic and totally non-sectarian, Father O'Sullivan's crusade to bring Serra's church back to its own was unanimously indorsed.

By unanimous vote, Samuel Storrow was elected a vice-president of the club, and the three directors whose terms had expired were re-elected—John Steven McGroarty, Charles Cassat Davis and Rev. St. John O'Sullivan.

The present officers are: President, Charles F. Lummis; vice-presidents, James D. Phelan, Frank A. Miller, R. F. del Valle, Samuel Storrow; treasurer, O. M. Souden, president United States Ntaional Bank; secretary, H. C. Peterson; assistant secretary, Gertrude Redit Lummis; directors, Arthur B. Benton, Sumner P. Hunt, H. C. Peterson, Rev. St. John O'Sullivan, R. F. del Valle, O. M. Souden, John S. McGroarty, Charles Cassat Davis and Charles F. Lummis; board of engineers and architects, Samuel Storrow, Sumner P. Hunt and Ernest A. Coxhead.

President Betkouski Declares Damages Allowed by Board of Public Works for Brooklyn Avenue Improvement Will be Reduced in Some Cases Ninety per cent.

Big reductions will be made by the City Council in awards for damages made by the Board of Public Works in connection with the improvement of Brooklyn avenue from Bridge street to the city limits, President Betkouski stated yesterday after the Council returned from a personal inspection.

Objections were made by other property-holders to the amounts awarded the Los Angeles Cemetery Association, the I. W. Hellman estate and others. President Betkouski said in some cases the awards will be trimmed 90 per cent. He says the Cemetery Association, will be much benefited by the improvement as the surface water on the land will be carried off by the storm drain.

Awards of $400 each to fifteen single lots also will be reduced. Under the present award, said President Betkouski, these lots will be given a fine street in front of them and also $153 net after paying their assessments. He does not consider that fair.

Holiday Inspirations In the New Gift Shop —2nd Floor

—If you're looking for something different—something unusual, something out of the ordinary in the way of gifts, then your thoughts should instantly turn to the Gift Shop that is such an important addition to the Art Section, Second Floor.

—It would take reams of copy and volumes of space to go into detail, but this one thing is certain, here are original things gathered from so many sources that you'll just revel in the assortment.

—FIRST THERE IS THE ROYCROFT SHOP—created by the late Elbert Hubbard, and which, by the way, is the only place in Los Angeles where the products of the Roycroft Shops of East Aurora are shown.

—Hand-craft things in art leather and copper.

—Rare editions de luxe. Things useful, all of them—for it is an unwritten law in the East Aurora shops to avoid the frivolities.

Then From Florence, Italy, Hand Carved Marble

—Copies of the most famous masterpieces in ancient and modern statuary. As exhibited in the Roumanelli Bros. collection at the San Francisco Fair.

"The Discus Thrower," "The Family Group" Venus de Milo and others.

And From Switzerland, Hand Carved Wood

—Our own importations—products of the peasantry of that country. "Soul Expressions" as it were, in wood in the natural color. And yet expressed in things practical. Such as nut crackers, trays, cigarette cases and such.

The Rust Craft and the Day Craft Novelties

—A thousand and one things inexpensive and attractively boxed, and every single article for a well defined purpose.

—Then there are French novelties. Mirrors, powder boxes, trays and hand painted china, the cretonne covered novelties.

Chinese Art

DON'T LET THE FLIES BREED

SINCLAIR'S
CHIEFTAIN
CHLORINATED LIME

Prevention
Is Better Than Cure

Flies and other insect pests are disease carriers. They breed in filth and are dirty even when not deadly. Keep your home sanitary.

Germs cannot live where Chieftain Chlorinated Lime is used as it should be. It's the best disinfectant and so cheap that you don't have to mind the cost.

Go over your cellar at frequent intervals with this famous germicide. Use it freely in the sewer connections, closets, outhouses—wherever animals are kept and flies can breed.

The U. S. Dispensatory says: "Chlorinated Lime (often called chloride of lime) is in all respects the best disinfectant known." It should be used wherever there is sickness. To prevent contagion wash all bedroom receptacles with a solution of Sinclair's Chieftain Brand.

It's the best bleach for laundry purposes—makes clothes snowy white and germ-free. Read the label for its many uses.

Sinclair's Chieftain Chlorinated Lime is the best to buy because it is the disinfectant that doesn't spoil. The patented package can be reclosed tightly. Identify it by its gold lacquered top and bottom.

TELL STORY OF BATTLE'S FURY.

Angeleno Brothers are Sole Survivors.

Bitterly Criticise Lack of Ammunition.

Bravery Wins Promotion at British Front.

Sole Survivors of a Trench Bombing.

Brothers of this city and all who remained alive out of a party of engineers at the English front at Neuve Chapelle.

Sam D. Price and his brother, George Price, Los Angeles young men, are the sole survivors of a party of engineers that were slaughtered recently in the trenches at Neuve Chapelle, according to word received here yesterday by Mrs. Carrie Loney of Graham station. She is the aunt of the young men. Both are sergeants in the corps and both were promoted early this year for signal bravery in action.

The letter of the young men tells one of the most thrilling tales of the war ever reaching this city from individual sources. In telling the tale of one engagement, Sam Price says he lay half-way across the Belgian border when the shells came his way. He says:

"I took a party down through Adde Chapelle, Neuve Chapelle and Rams Chapelle to Dixmude to do some work on a fort in the front trench, and when we reached a point some two miles from the German lines the firing started. Only the two of us got back. There was an average of twenty-five shells a minute passing over us at times that day and night, to say nothing of machine gun, mortar and rifle fire. The mortars throw a bomb containing about 300 pounds of explosive for a distance of over half a mile. In sapping out a trench under the enemy's position, we dug up bodies of men than had been killed recently, and other skeletons that had been dead for centuries, for it happened to be a cemetery. We lay in a tunnel with rats and decomposing corpses for several days, and with little food. During some of the bombardment at that time, like other times, legs, arms, heads and bodies flew right and left. Men wept and cursed and prayed, and none of us could tell whether it all lasted an hour or a week."

In common with many other British soldiers, the writer bitterly arraigns conditions under which the British handle the campaign. He says at times there is plenty of artillery and men, but they are powerless because there is no ammunition.

"What would you think," he says, "if you saw a bunch of men holding a piece of line with no artillery, very little ammunition for their rifles, and finally get shot to pieces and be able to see the confusion? Big men crying like babies because they were helpless without cartridges."

Sergt. Price declares he has seen men dying with curses against a country that would place them in a helpless position against an enemy supplied with unlimited field and heavy artillery, and "deprive them of the paltry bit of lead to defend themselves."

A Bad One.

[Pittsburgh Dispatch:] Mr. Grimes (with great indignation)—I've finished with that fellow Skinner, absolutely finished with him. He's a bad one. He has a lying tongue in his head.

Mrs. Grimes (sympathetically:) Dear me! And only yesterday his wife told me that he had false teeth.

Half-crown Gift of Briton Yield Large Sum.

"Intolerance" Benefit Top of Local Fund.

What is the value of a Briti half-crown donated by an Eng man in America to the fund for relief of starving children in "G many?

This question remains to be tied by the German Relief Com tee. The half-crown was discov yesterday by E. G. Judah whe was counting the contributions i Orpheum charity box. The a worth of the coin is about 60 in United States currency, but sentiment attached to the gift ably will raise its value to one h dred times that amount. Trea Judah is holding the coin for highest bid, and up to closing at headquarters last night W. Kerckhoff and P. Max Kuehr were bidding neck and neck for prize. The money derived from sale of the coin will go to the re fund.

Although most of the busines the Campaign Committee was ished yesterday, headquarters at 621 South Spring street will be to contributors until 5:30 o'clock morrow afternoon. Treasurer Ju will wire to Ambassador Gerard total amount collected since last F day morning, including the total ceipts from the "Intolerance" ben to be given tomorrow night. South California's total contribution pr ably will approximate $25,000. funds received since Friday, u yesterday noon, totaled more $4000, making a grand total of than $23,000, with many towns to be heard from. One of its best White Mountain summit, where Westgard Pass, California's great auto entrance, links the East and the Pacific west via the Midland Trail, Lincoln Highway and El Camino Sierra. The sturdy tree clings for life to titanic rocks and granite cliffs which only diamond drills, rather than roots, might be expected to penetrate, and there, on nearly a thousand acres, the primitive harvesters are busy. They are laying in their staple food supply by the same methods today as centuries ago. Hundreds of them are on the ground, for they flock at this time. Only the women are toiling. The bucks boss the job, sell the surplus, and pocket the returns. The squaws aren't afraid to work—they're afraid not to. Down in the valley, at Bishop, Independence, Big Pine and other places the laundry business is at an end for the present. This other task requires five weeks.

It is a task, too, involving long journeys to and from the habitat of the pinon on the rugged heights. Water is always scarce there but that in itself is not particularly a hardship to an Indian, since he uses it only for drinking purposes anyway. This nut and the "peaggie" are necessaries not to be neglected. The latter is a large, fat, greasy worm found by the thousands in the Mono Lake region. It is very juicy but seems to be relished more when dried and then cooked. It looks quite as toothsome to the white man as does the shrimp to the Indian. That isn't saying much in its behalf.

KNOCKED OFF TREES.

When the pinon burrs or cones begin to ripen and crack open and the nuts drop out like chestnuts the Piutes spread their blankets under the trees and knock them off with clubs and poles. Then they are ingeniously cleaned by the squaws in fan-shaped willow baskets, being tossed in the wind until all the refuse is blown away. The more adept the user, the larger the basket she handles. The older women are experts and clean a bushel or more a day with ease. Wuneeh, aged 85 years, is the champion of the tribe.

After the cleaning comes the necessary process of roasting. A pit is dug, a lot of rocks heated, often by burning cones, thrown in and the nuts spread over them and stirred until done. Only an Indian can do this well. They dry out quickly after roasting and should be eaten before many weeks. In the raw state they may be kept long in a dry, cool place. Many are sold unroasted and the consumer loses thereby, because the white man cannot bring out their best qualities in his modern oven.

Each family or group of families caches its own supply, to be drawn on as required, in cleverly-concealed places under leaves and rocks. They seldom steal from each other. Occasionally a white man stumbles upon a cache and despoils it. In the earlier days he was shot and scalped when caught at such thievery. At that time the Piutes were more thoroughly honest than now.

NO LONGER TRADED.

Last year one old Indian, Haabacha, gathered over nine tons of pine nuts with the generous help of his female relatives and netted $900. Already this season another Piute has taken sixty sacks to Bishop and sold them for $5 each. These are flour sacks holding about forty-five pounds. In this city the nuts retail at 25 to 30 cents a pound. Formerly it was an easy matter in the Owens Valley to trade a sack of flour for a sack of nuts, and a few biscuits would buy six or eight pounds, but the red man has become sophisticated. He learned all about supply and demand. He knows he has a corner on the market. His head is working though his lazy hands be idle.

The Indians consume surprising quantities. They grind the nuts into a meal and make palatable bread, and also a rich porridge, good enough for any hungry person. They go to extremes in eating and when they have to loosen their belts for comfort they are happy and give no thought to the days of possible emptiness ahead. Sometimes a dusky glutton will overload his stomach and seek relief from the consequent pain by external rubbing with liniment made of the same nut that caused it. The friction aids digestion and the liniment gets the credit. Perhaps that's why the directions with many patent medicines call for vigorous rubbing.

While highly nutritious and satisfying, the nut sometimes causes trouble through overindulgence, for which it is not to be blamed. In its raw state it may even add to the income of your favorite undertaker. It is history that Joaquin Jim, a supposed renegade from Fresno county and leader of the Long Valley Indians in the Inyo Piute war of the '60s, ate so many that death resulted. The whites had been unable to conquer him without the nuts as an ally. They terminated the war—the last in which the Piutes figured—by seeking out and destroying all their stores of pine nuts, tons upon tons, thus forcing starvation or surrender. It is more fun to hunt a food cache than a hostile Indian, and safer.

This nut contains a high percentage of fat, 61.9; carbohydrates, 17.3; protein, 14.6; water, 3.4, and ash, 2.8. It has the rather extraordinary fuel value per pound of 3364, and is credited with tonic properties beneficial to the entire system. Fugitives and men lost in the lofty California mountain wonderland, have sustained life with it for months and come out in good condition, with little suffering. It is the most interesting wild food that grows in the West.

Festival Queen.

SAYS SHE DID NOT PROMISE TO MARRY.

MISS DENA BALBOA DECLARES SHE REFUSED SUITOR.

Answers Wealthy Pennsylvania Swain Who Seeks to Recover Money and Jewels He Alleges Proved His Love, but Should be Returned After Rejection.

Miss Lena Balboa, who represented Arizona at the Portola festival, San Francisco, as that State's most beautiful woman, filed an interesting answer yesterday in the suit of Paul W. Albrecht to recover gifts made her when they were engaged to marry. She declares emphatically that she did not give her promise to wed him. On the contrary, when he proposed, she said she "would try to like him and might some time care enough to marry him."

According to Miss Balboa this was merely a tentative agreement, but on the strength of it Mr. Albrecht publicly announced their engagement. This publicity did not please Miss Balboa, and then she informed her suitor she could not and would not marry him. Since her eighteenth birthday, Miss Balboa avers, she has been consistent in refusing Mr. Albrecht's numerous offers of marriage.

Mr. Albrecht, the son of wealthy Pennsylvania parents, seeks to recover from Miss Balboa $4100 in money, diamond earrings valued at $500 and a diamond solitaire ring valued at $200, all of which he claims he gave her when she promised to marry him in Yuma in October, 1914.

Miss Balboa declares she returned the ring a week after she made her tentative agreement to like him, but he gave it to her again on her eighteenth birthday, without conditions, she says. The earrings, she says, were given to her as a Christmas gift in 1914. She denies receiving the money. Miss Balboa is with her mother in this city and the family expects to return to Yuma shortly.

AFRICA ENTERS TRADE RIVALRY

Naturalist, Here, Praises its Natural Products.

Is Recuperating from Study of the Tse-tse Fly.

Views the Spot Where Stanley Found Livingstone.

That the colonization of British East Africa is proceeding despite the war and that within a comparatively few years African cotton and coffee will be a serious factor in the markets of Europe, was affirmed here last night by W.W.W. ("Billy") Roberts of Brooklyn. Mr. Roberts is at the Stowell Hotel recuperating from the effects of his recent trip to Central Africa, where for more than a year, as naturalist and photographer of the Hemment scientific expedition, he studied the tse-tse fly in action and repose.

"Africa has wonderful commercial possibilities and will eventually become a rival of the United States in the European cotton market," he said last night. "It has been discovered that in the equatorial belt lies an immense tract of fertile land particularly adapted for cotton and coffee cultivation, and that two crops of the finest coffee can be realized each year.

"The war has hindered but not prevented the rapid colonization of the country and after peace is declared I look for large numbers of the soldiers to receive grants and settle down there. At present the Scottish people predominate among the settlers. The Uganda Railroad has opened up an immense territory which has proved to be a white man's country, and with liberal doses of quinine morning and night, the settlers manage to keep well."

Mr. Roberts says the interior is rich in copper and iron deposits although practically no gold deposits have been discovered. He believes the development of the next few years will open up the country to a remarkable extent.

During Mr. Robert's trip through the jungles he crossed the equator eleven times, visited Jinja, the source of the Nile, and photographed what is alleged to be the actual spot where Stanley found Livingstone. One of the natives of Stanley's expedition, "Old Richard," was a member of the party and guided them to the historic scene.

Mr. Roberts took motion pictures of the tse-tse fly and of victims in early stages of the sleeping sickness. With J. C. Hemment, leader of the party, he was bitten by the deadly fly and escaped the resultant poisoning only by cutting open his arm and draining the blood from the infected member much in the manner prescribed for snake bite. Mr. Hemment was not so fortunate and, according to Mr. Roberts, was dangerously ill for a long time and makes an occasional wager at present that he will ultimately die a victim of the fly.

In addition to collecting and mounting numerous tse-tse flies, Mr. Roberts brought back from Africa a valuable collection of rare skins and a large quantity of ivory. Photographs of the expedition have been made and are now being displayed in the motion picture theaters of the East.

Permanent.

RETIRED COLONEL WILL RESIDE HERE.

SAW EIGHTEEN YEARS' SERVICE IN PHILIPPINES.

Went to Islands at Outbreak of Spanish-American War as Major of Nebraska Volunteers and Later Commanded Constabulary Until Natives Became Proficient.

Col. Wallace A. Taylor, U.S.A., retired, who spent eighteen years in the Philippines, going there as major in the First Nebraska volunteers in 1898, at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War, has just arrived in Los Angeles, coming direct from the islands on the Japanese steamer Shinyo Maru, which docked at San Francisco Thursday morning. He is spending a few days with his brother-in-law, W. L. Fisher, at No. 1305 South Hoover street.

He is accompanied by his wife and baby and after a few weeks spent in visiting his many old friends in this city he will make his permanent home in Southern California, either at Upland or Pomona.

While in the Philippines he served in the First Nebraska, which formed part of the brigade commanded by Gen. Harrison Gray Otis—the Thirty-ninth United States Infantry—and later, until his retirement as colonel, in command of the Philippine Constabulary. His retirement is the result of the working of the recent law which provides that all Americans be retired from the service as rapidly as natives capable of filling the positions are found.

Speaking of the conditions that obtain in the islands Col. Taylor said: "Things are working out satisfactorily. The islands are thriving, education is steadily making progress and with the strong influence of American suzerainty settled an orderly government is being rapidly established throughout the group."

LIBRARY OPENING.

Dedication of Cahuenga Branch Occurs Tomorrow Night.

The Cahuenga Branch of the Los Angeles Public Library, located at Santa Monica boulevard and Madison avenue, will be formally opened to the public at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening. The public is invited to participate in this event.

The building is a gift from Andrew Carnegie. The site was furnished by the community, as provided for by the Carnegie Library Foundation, its cost being raised by an assessment district.

Miss Fannie B. Dorman, formerly librarian of the University Branch Library, has been appointed librarian, with Miss Carrie V. Ziegler and Miss Gladys Glenn as assistants.

MUST CARRY OUT ITS AGREEMENT.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION IS CALLED TO TIME.

Public Service Board Requests that it Adhere to Arrangement Made at Conference Regarding Employment in One Department of Men from Another.

An attempt by the Civil Service Commission to break the agreement with the Board of Public Works regarding the employment of men from another department, caused considerable criticism yesterday by members of the board.

When the agreement was made at a joint session the board understood that the Civil Service Commission would not certify to one department any employee laid off by another department. Disregarding this the commission certified to the City Engineer three old employees of the Park Department.

The board yesterday sent a letter to the commission asking it to adhere to the agreement made at the conference. Members of the board stated that the men from the Park Department will not be given employment by the City Engineer.

MORE LAND NEEDED. FOR CITY STORAGE YARD.

The lease for the street department yard at Fifteenth and San Julian streets expires next June and the yard is to be transferred to the site of the old incinerator at McPherson street where the department has eight lots. The City Engineer does not consider this adequate and yesterday asked the Board of Public Works to request the Council to purchase adjoining property. He has obtained options on two lots for $5000 and three lots for $9000.

Half the old incinerator site is necessary for the asphalt plant, he reports, and the balance of four lots is intended to be used as a street department corral and storage yard.

New Water Rates.

The Council yesterday adopted the ordinance approving the resolution of the Board of Public Service Commissioners reducing the water rates. The new schedule will become effective December 31.

Telephone Report.

The report of President Lane of the Public Utilities Board, together with a long statement by Chief Engineer Howell, on the proposed telephone merger and transfer of the Home company's franchise were referred by the Council yesterday to the Public Utilities Committee which will make its recommendations this week, it is expected.

City Hall Notes.

The Council yesterday instructed the City Attorney and the Board of Public Utilities to prepare an ordinance fixing the license fees on motor busses.

Ordinances were adopted for the improvement of Virgil avenue from Fourth street to Wilshire boulevard, for the paving of Arcadia street from North Main to Los Angeles street, and for the improvement of Vineyard avenue from Gollita street to the south boundary of the city.

BEATEN, SUES FOR HUNDRED THOUSAND

SIX ALLEGED YOUNG BANDITS ACCUSED BY ARCHITECT.

Endeavored to Protect Church Property and had His Teeth Knocked Out, Both Jaws Broken and Face Permanently Disfigured by Blows, He Declares.

Charged with beating Robert H. Walker, an architect, knocking out his teeth, fracturing his upper and lower jaws and cutting his lips so that he will be permanently disfigured, six youths who are alleged to have recently figured in a hold-up, were made defendants in a $100,000 damage suit yesterday. The francas occurred at the West Side Christian Church, on Forty-second street, during a prayer meeting.

Mr. Walker alleges that the youths, Lain Fitz, Warren Ordway, Ralph Summeril, Bernard Botiller, Myron English and Robert Cox, the sons of well-to-do parents, attempted to damage the church property October 31 last, and Mr. Walker endeavored to protect it.

The youths will appear again before Justice Summerfield tomorrow in the charge of robbing a Japanese. Mr. Walker is represented by Attorney McKelvey.

INS AND OUTS.

WANTS IT STOPPED. A suit for $5000 damages and an injunction to restrain the California Metal Enameling Company from turning waste water into a storm water ditch on the property of the Los Angeles Military Academy, was filed by the academy yesterday. It was alleged that the chemicals and other properties in the waste water are proving detrimental to the health of the pupils and injurious to the property.

ABOUT THE COURTS.

AWARDED DAMAGES. A jury in Judge Monroe's court yesterday awarded Mrs. Gussie Virginia Bryson $1000 damages against John Pagalino for injuries she received when, she alleged his automobile struck her. The accident occurred at First street and Boyle avenue when, as charged, Mr. Pagalino cut the corner.

FRIENDLY ACTION. Mrs. Augusta R. Jordan, administratrix of the estate of the late Robert C. Jordan, filed suit yesterday against the City of Los Angeles and the library board, for $6247.91, for work performed by Mr. Jordan in constructing the Boyle Heights branch library. The suit, a friendly action, is, according to Attorney Joseph Musgrove, to determine the legal effect of "stop notices" on mechanic liens when the estate of a deceased person and a municipal corporation are involved.

NAMES ADMINISTRATOR. Caroline B. Trask petitioned the Probate Court yesterday to appoint Albert Crutcher administrator of the estate of her mother, Blanche Trask, who died November 11 last in Colfax, this State. Mrs. Trask, who was a resident of this city, owned a half interest in real property valued in excess of $10,000. Her daughter owns the other half. Ill health compels the latter to seek rest in the mountains. The deceased left no will.

INCORPORTIONS. The Farmers' Grain and Milling Company, incorporators, Jules Kauftman, W. B. waterman and E. Kettler, capital stock $50,000; subscribed $300.

SECOND CEREMONY.

Couple are Twice Wed Within Twelve Days.

A second marriage ceremony within ten days was performed Friday evening for Gale Trowbridge and Bruno J. Becker of the Universal Film Company in order to repair an apparent legal defect through the alleged failure of the bride's final decree to be filed as a matter of record.

The second ceremony was performed by Rev. J. H. Henry at his home, No. 916 South Central avenue, Glendale, and was witnessed by members of the two families.

The bride secured her divorce from John Trowbridge on November 19, 1915, and the final decree was duly signed a year later, but was apparently not entered.

The couple rushed to the Courthouse shortly after 2 o'clock on Monday, November 20, and in half an hour afterwards had been married by a justice of the peace. Then they went back to work. They grew uneasy, however, fearful that the legality of their marriage might be questioned—so procured a second marriage license and were again married. The bride is 23 years old, while the bridegroom is 36.

Starr
PHONOGRAPHS
AND RECORDS
STYLE III $150.00

The STARR Phonograph

Is the Evolution of the Talking "Machine" to the Artistic MUSICAL Instrument.

APPLYING to the Starr Phonograph the principles of tone building used in the construction of violins and the sounding boards of fine pianos, one of the greatest designers of musical instruments in the world has fulfilled the dream of many years—he has finally perfected a reproducing machine that is absolutely true in tone and expression to either vocal or instrumental music, and that has all the purity, volume and soul of the original.

One of the secrets of the great superiority of the Starr Phonograph is its specially designed throat and horn of silver grain spruce, the material used in the finest violins and pianos. This and other exclusive features of the Starr absolutely eliminate every trace of the mechanical, producing an instrument in which the cultured musical ear may find rare delight.

A Christmas Gift Beyond Compare

Make the Starr Phonograph a Christmas gift to the whole family. It is a gift in which EVERY member of the family will take equal pleasure. It is an addition to the beauty and attraction of the home, and to musical culture, which no home should be without.

WORTHY POOR TOIL AND SWEAT TO PAY THE COUNTY ITS DUE.

Long Lines Creep Toward Windows at the Tax Collector's Office, where Petty Bills are Met at Huge Cost of Time—Larger Quarters Necessary.

PATHOS lurks in the first floor of the Hall of Records these days. Hundreds of tired-faced, often shabby, seldom prosperous actors in a wearisome drama are there, herded in lines and spending hours to advance yards toward the barred wickets of the Tax Collector's office.

They cannot help their plight, for the law requires that the few cents that usually represent their due to the county, shall be paid before a certain date. Savings accounts most of them have, but checking facilities at the bank are not often theirs. So they take their places in that creeping line, forced by the poor facilities of the county's buildings to sweat and suffer in giving up to the county driblets of their hard-earned money.

The business man, the ordinary citizen of any calling who keeps a checking account is lucky. He usually writes a check and a note, a few minutes of light effort, and the thing is done.

But up there at the Hall of Records they toil and toil. Sometimes the monotony of the tortoise gait becomes excitement, when some frail woman collapses and loses her hard-won place in line. Occasionally some unfortunate spend half a working day to reach a window, only to find nothing but checks are received there, while he has cash. He has to take off another half-day to work his way to another wicket.

And it is only the philosopher in those lines who can take comfort in the thought that the Supervisors and County Tax Collector are casting about for some plan whereby office facilities may be enlarged. The suffering citizen is quite as likely to remember that when the city and county tax departments are merged, after January 1, the congestion will probably be only the worse. This same consideration has made county officers declare larger quarters and more receiving windows for the Tax Collector's office are an imperative need.

CHANGES INADEQUATE.

Two years ago, the Supervisors moved the Tax Collector's office from the third to the first floor of the Hall of Records, hoping in that way to solve the problem of elevators, which were taxed to their limit by the thousands who crowded to the place during the last few days of the time allotted for payments.

When the change was made, two additional cashier's wickets were arranged. These, however, have fallen far short of relieving the congestion or ameliorating conditions, with the growth in the number of taxpayers.

A change for the worse was also made when the collector's department was divided into three rooms. This necessitates much additional effort in the act of paying taxes.

The plan afoot at this time calls for the erection of a large building at Temple and New High streets and the installation of the Tax Collector's office on the lower floor of this structure, in quarters that would much resemble those of a bank and possibly make access to the wickets easier.

The two floors above the Tax Collector's department would be given over to the Assessor's and the Surveyor's offices, respectively. These are necessary adjuncts of the tax department and the records needed by one of them are also used by the others.

The county owns the site and tentative plans have already been drawn for the proposed structure.

It would also house the charity department and several other important offices, and possibly the ever-growing library.

While no funds for the purpose have been set aside in the budget for the year, ways and means of securing such funds can be found if the demands of the taxpayers are strong for the elimination of the present evils.

"With the installation of new offices for our department in adequate surroundings, certain new systems of operation could be used and it would be possible to prevent any great congestion, even though the rush were as heavy as it has been for several years past," said County Tax Collector Welch yesterday.

"We have done everything possible to avoid a piling up of work on the last few days of the tax-collection period, but our facilities are too limited to allow of this.

"Someone has suggested the establishment of branch collection offices in various parts of the city.

"Such a plan would be unfeasible, inasmuch as it would be impossible to keep duplicate sets of records in the branch offices and the taxpayers who raised any question as to their taxes and wanted information about them, would have to come to the main office and suffer practically the same inconvenience as at present.

"We have tried conscientiously to solve the difficulties of our present system, but that can't be done during rush time and the only way out of it is the building of new and ample quarters to prevent the jamming and the crush we see here now."

Incidentally, Capt. Welch called attention to the convenience of paying taxes by check.

Civic Obligations Made a Hardship.

Grit prime need of taxpayers.

The county's strong box is being filled in part by driblets—the contributions of the poor. Scenes of trial and toil are in order nowadays, with clerks working hard and fast and hundreds of women with babes in arms, and old men and the crippled standing hour after hour in slow-moving lines before the tax-receiving windows. The five-column panel shows such a line as is seen daily at the Hall of Records. Most of these people have no checking accounts and cannot avail themselves of the business man's practice of avoiding the hardship by mailing his check. Such scenes are the concrete argument advanced by officials who want the tax department installed in new and much larger quarters.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAYHAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and luster, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and luster and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart color and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

WOMEN the world over love a bride—even club women with their public interests and public activities hold homemaking closest to their hearts—and to the world in general the most interesting feature concerning a bride is her wedding costume. This was proven at the Ebell Club Monday afternoon, when Mae Shumway Enderly gave a fascinating programme showing wedding ceremonials and customs of some of the European peasant countries, each being introduced by its national air.

Especially in these times of war is our attention centered on these people who are bearing the heaviest part of the burden. Since they have lived for centuries in their little districts, or dorfs, each has developed a wedding and style of dress peculiar to its neighbor, and Mrs. Enderly chose those most picturesque.

"If some seem amusing to us it is not that we smile with disrespect," said the artist. "Our excuse is simply the fact that no nation uses the custom and manners wholly of another nation with the same degree of seriousness it does its own. Generally speaking, the peasantry are hardy, honest and industrious, especially in the northern part, where they are sweet and clean in their home life."

The immigrant pictured by Mrs. Enderly would be no problem to us, but would add to our assets as a nation. The costumes worn were the handiwork of the peasant brides or purchased from them in the countries represented.

Said the speaker: "Everything and everybody in Russia is a blend of the Orient and Occident. Their weddings are full of beauty and of meaning, and the ceremony of the Greek church is always dramatic. All Russia marries, and most of it marries young. In Russia, as in Norway, there are no old maids—an unmarried girl much over 20 considers herself disgraced. So if she doesn't marry she pretends to. If a peasant girl, she goes and settles in some distant district as a widow. Later she returns home and tearfully describes the death of her imaginary husband. They are a very religious, superstitious people and love furs, dress and gorgeous colors. When a couple become engaged the girl cuts off a lock of her hair and gives to the groom. He in turn gives her salt and bread and a sweet cake, pledging by the first to supply the necessities of life and by the last luxuries if possible. He also gives a silver ring set with turquoise. The ceremony was described and the feast, where the bride's slippers are many times stolen and bought back by two wealthy men guards of the bride, who pay the money to the groom, which he reserves for future household expenses—a unique way of getting a start.

Italy gives no choice whatever in a girl's selection of a husband. The youth also is at the mercy of his parents. The old customs of Bible days prevail, and suitable marriages are arranged by the parents. The girls know nothing of the men, being educated and entirely separated from them—even their own brothers. When a suitable husband has been selected, the legal settlement made and her dowry arranged, the girl is sent for, and in the presence of friends and relatives introduced to her future husband. The wedding may take place a week hence. He is allowed to visit her, they exchange photographs and he may kiss her hand, but always in the presence of her mother. When she goes to the altar with him she knows little more of him than at first, still it is said Italian marriages are generally happy. The reason assigned for this is that the girl is adopted into her husband's family and cherished as their own daughter. It is true they are strict with her, but not more so than her own parents have been, and she finds but little change. The youth also is subject to this tyranny, and the young couple are often driven together for consolation and become fast friends and comrades. The bride's dowry contains chests of household linens and laces and embroideries, and is accumulated from her childhood and is called her trousseau.

Austria-Hungary is made up of many nations, and with dissensions. But owing to their regard for their beloved Francis Joseph, whose life was one of the greatest tragedies of history, these alien people forgot their hatred for one another and present to the world a powerful empire—United Austria. Hungary is the home of many strange people with quaint and picturesque customs. Very interesting are the Magyars, a people of joyous song and dance. The men are big and fine, and the women beautiful and lovable. They are a people of much sentiment, powerful race affections, and the courtship often lasts for years. The lover comes courting in the evening, raps at the house door, and rain or shine, he is allowed to continue rapping until anyone but a Magyar would become discouraged. When his patience and perseverance have been sufficiently tested the mother says to the daughter, "Your lover has rapped long enough; let him in." He is admitted to the family living-room, where everyone remains, and the lovemaking is long and artistic, for by nature they are changeful, evasive, unique—like their own music, now sparkling and gay, now sad, weird and wailing. Although the groom courts the girl with dramatic fervor, he cannot propose to her. This must be done by a go-between, a pompous person filled with importance, who proposes to her in stilted poetry, to which she responds with blushes and acceptance. Presents are exchanged, then the lovers take matters into their own hands again.

The eve before the nuptials, the groom and his friends go to call upon the bride—a business call, by the way, to inspect her dowry. So she proudly displays her half-dozen fat pillows, feather beds done in red silk and gay with Hungarian embroidery. These are packed in painted chests and borne on the shoulders of the groom's friends to his home in a triumphal march through the village—called the jubilant promenade of the trousseau. The next day the bride is led to church by two matrons and accompanied by six white-clad bridesmaids, each carrying a crown which may not be worn until she in turn becomes a bride. In the evening the bride dances off her crown to her girl friends and stands in a chair. The groom takes her in his arms and carries her over to the side of the room where the matrons are. The festivities last from three to five days. Each guest may kiss the bride and give her a coin.

In Norway the conditions are such that early marriages are almost impossible. The laws of Udall Tenure are such that a man cannot marry until he owns a house and the surrounding acres to support it. Thus the Norse youth knows if he would marry and become a householder, he must work through all the long years of his youth and often into middle life. When a wealthy girl is married the festivities last from five days to two weeks, and often months are spent in preparation.

As a rule many couples are married at the same time, expenses being defrayed by the parents of the well-to-do girl. For the ceremony they all kneel—with the bridesmaids forming a canopy of bright shawls and handkerchiefs over their heads—and they are married. Some wear crowns, some white linen whimples of the married woman with the maid's hood over it. Each wears her hair in two long braids, interwoven with ribbon; a string of coins, which represents a part of her dowry; both brides and grooms wear silver luck pieces in their garters, and to lose them would mean life-long misfortune. The festivities take place in the open air. The Norwegian being thrifty, does not give silver butter spreaders and salad forks but a stack of hay or a cow or ducks.

In quaint Holland costume, with wooden shoes, Mrs. Enderly told the distinctive features of a marriage of that picturesque country. The young couple meet and fall in love at the annual fairs, these events always being followed by a large crop of weddings.

The German peasant service was also described—the betrothal which makes the bride, and the wedding, which makes the wife. Of the two, the former is the more important, and more binding. A ceremony which took place in Little Dorf, between Saxony and Bavaria, was described in detail. To feed a lover sausages means in sentimental language: "Love is dead or never was," which causes him 'to fade away.'

On the eve of the wedding all the young friends of the bride and groom plant little pine trees, wreathed in tinsel and tissue paper flowers, in front of the bride's door. She takes one of them with her to her new home, and often keeps it until her first child is born. At the wedding, the bride's slippers are painfully tight, owing to the fact that the mother has stuffed the toes with bits of hair and feathers collected from her own barnyard, which, if the bride takes to the altar with her, insures her future barnyard increase.

For the first part of her programme, Mrs. Enderly gave a dramatic interpretation of Percy Mackaye's "The Immigrant," portraying, just as the dramatist intended, the incoming alien as a human being with emotions, sympathies and tragedies like our own—first in his native land as the prey of greedy representatives of international business interests and as one who comes to the land of freedom with the hope of better things, and later the foreigner here in the great cities and in the industrial maelstrom of mines, mills and sweat shops.

Menotti Frascona, the well known baritone, held his audience en rapport as he gave the aria from "La Traviata," by Verdi, and "Di Provenza il Mar, il Svol." Responding to insistent encores, he chose one of Nutile's compositions, which he sang in the Caruso original key. Miss Emily Cotine was at the piano. Mrs. Lucian West Wilder accompanied Mrs. Enderly.

Tomorrow Mrs. Gramville Ross Pike of North Yakima, Wash., who is national lecturer of the Audubon Society, will give an illustrated lecture on "Our Friends, the Birds."

Of special importance is the social service all day meeting, to be held on Thursday. The members are requested to come prepared to sew. Interesting reports will be given by Mrs. G. S. Long, on "Existing Social Agencies" and Norman R. Martin, superintendent of county charities, who will speak of his work. Miss Ethel Richardson, a member of the State Commission of Housing and Immigration, will also be a special guest at the luncheon.

Ebell has sent to the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association the following letter to stimulate interest in the Nativity Play:

"At the meeting of Monday, November 27, the following resolution was presented by the Executive Committee and unanimously adopted by the club:

"Resolved, that the Ebell Club is in hearty sympathy with the effort now being made by the Channel Club to secure the necessary appropriation from the Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles county for the repetition, during the Christmas holidays, of the "Nativity Play" given last year in Exposition Park, and pledges its support and co-operation in the movement.'

"We feel that the 'Nativity Play' as produced on last Christmas Eve by the efforts of the Channel Club and under the direction of Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith was an artistic success and was enjoyed by many hundreds of tourists as well as by our own towns-people, and that such a distinctive production enhances the reputation of our city as a center of culture and of civic enterprise.

"We therefore respectfully urge that your organization actively cooperate with the Channel Club and other organizations in an immediate effort to secure the necessary appropriation—a moderate one—from the Board of Supervisors that this pageant may be produced again this year.

"Many eastern cities commemorate Christmastide with a municipal tree, but our city was unique in offering also this wonderful Christmas pageant at Exposition Park, and we urge that it shall be made an annual festival."

Ruskin Art Club.

Mrs. N. P. Conrey will have charge of the programme for the Ruskin Art Club on Wednesday. Miss Pansy Whitaker will speak on Pierre Loti in Brahman India. Mrs. Conrey will speak on Andre Chevrillon and his India, and Dr. Anna Leffler will talk on India of Kipling, after which a general discussion of Kipling's India will be open to the club.

Coming Board Meeting.

The monthly meeting of Los Angeles district board, G.F.W.C., will be held on Thursday, December 14. As usual, the afternoon session will be open to all club women, and luncheon will be served to all who make reservations before that date through Mrs. Charles S. Bateman of San Pedro.

An Attraction.

Councilwoman Lindsey will speak before the Twenty-fourth-street Parent-Teacher Association at 3 o'clock on Tuesday on "Woman's Work in the City Government."

Woman's City Club.

"Governmental Interest in Employment" will be the subject of tomorrow's programme at the City Club, when Mrs. Martha Nelson McCan will be the speaker.

There will be no meetings of the City Club on December 25 and January 1, but on December 18 motion pictures will hold the floor, when the Balboa company will present "Little Mary Sunshine" and give a demonstration of how moving pictures are made. "Better Films for Children" will also be the subject of a discourse by Mrs. E. H. Noe.

Is It Tolerated?

At the Wednesday Morning Club's books and conversation section on Wednesday, Mrs. M. E. Johnson, the president, will talk on "Intolerance." All will be given an opportunity to join in the discussion—and there is always some discussion at this wide-awake organization.

Club Woman Back.

Mrs. Katherine Cunningham, who has been visiting relatives in Texas, has returned to the Balboa. As a delegate of the John H. Reagan Chapter of Los Angeles, she attended the convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at Dallas, and reports a week replete with lively sessions and hospitable entertainment.

Friday Morning Club.

There will be another book committee luncheon on Tuesday, when three war novels, by H. G. Wells, Paul Bourget, and Hugh Walpole, respectively, will be discussed. Mrs. Wells Smith, the chairman, will preside.

On Friday the usual programme will be replaced with the presentation of Reginald Arkell's play, "Colombine," and "A Christmas Masque" by Margaret Merington. The drama students of the Lincoln High School will form the cast.

Million Club.

Mrs. H. J. Zahn, chief probation officer, will talk on Juvenile Court work before the Million Club next Wednesday at 2 p.m.

Hollywood Woman's Club.

Carrie Jacobs Bond was responsible for a capacity house at Hollywood last Wednesday, when she presented "The Good Fairy" to such good purpose that she charmed her audience to tears and laughter in a breath.

After an important business meeting next Wednesday, Mary E. Lent will speak on municipal nursing. The parliamentary law class directed by Mrs. Osgood will meet prior to the business meeting at 1 p.m.

The altruistic section of the music department will give a Christmas programme at the Macy-street school, on December 27. The children will bring toys, later to be distributed to the orphans of the Colegrove institution, who will be the guests of the club on December 28, when the programme will be repeated.

France and Belgium.

Mme. Jules Clerfayt, curator of valuable tapestries at the San Francisco and San Diego expositions, is about to take up further work on behalf of Belgium and France. She is to give a course of lectures on the art of those countries, which are to stand on their merits, notwithstanding the proceeds will go to relief funds. Her first lecture, "The Women of France," was given on Saturday at the home of Madame J. A. Donato, where her personality won instant approval. Mme. Clerfayt recently lost her husband in the great war. He was a personal friend of King Albert of Belgium, and son of the famous Belgian general of that name.

Council of Jewish Women.

The next meeting of the Council of Jewish Women will hold a good programme, in which Flora Kassowitz will sing the aria from "La Traviata," and dramatic plaints and complaints will be heard in which Samuel Pepys, Bernard Shaw and William Winter will be quoted. Mrs. George A. Dobinson will also be responsible for a reading of "Toadstools," by Florence Haynes Reid.

Reciprocity Day.

Reciprocity Day at the Glendale Tuesday Morning Club found a programme of numerous celebrated artists prepared for it. Clubs all over the Los Angeles district were represented, Mrs. H. E. Bartlett presiding.

F. W. Blanchard first spoke on symphony concerts, making an appeal for support. Constance Balfour, soprano, gave French and German vocal selections, as also compositions of a Glendale artist, Julius Kranz, and of J. Carl Briel, who wrote the music for "Intolerance." Both composers were present. Following the programme, Mrs. Lloyd Harmon spoke some gracious words on the value of these reciprocity days.

Frieda Peycke.

This talented entertainer is booked for programmes at the Whittier High School, the Whittier Elks' Club, the Santa Ana Ebell Club, the Long Beach Kindergarten Association and for the Christmas programme at the Pomona Ebell.

Chautauqua Circle.

Col. John Sobieski will speak before the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle on Wednesday afternoon, when the story of Poland will be his subject. The meeting is open to the public.

Congress of Mothers.

The Congress of Mothers is living up to its title. It has established a loan fund for the assistance of unfortunate boys and girls in connection with the Juvenile Court. Mrs. Harvey Trowbridge is to be its chairman.

Civic Outlook Club.

Drs. Richter and Wilde furnished both instruction and entertainment at the Civic Outlook Club last Friday, when the working basis for child welfare was explained, and the method of physical and pyschological examinations demonstrated. A day is shortly to be set by the club when beach mothers may bring their children up for examination.

Mrs. W. A. Galentine, chairman of civics of the club federation, has just returned from a long trip to the northern district, when she visited Ventura county and Santa Barbara county and gave addresses in numerous cities.

Woman's Medical Fraternity.

The Kappa Chapter of the Alpha Epsilon Iota was entertained by Drs. Nannie Dunsmoor and J. Margaret Roberts at the home of the latter yesterday. After an animated business session, in which holiday greetings were planned for Los Angeles members now in China—Dr. Lulu T. Ellis, Woman's Medical College of Peking, and Dr. Alice Johnson Hayes of Wuchow—a buffeteria supper was served. The social hour was interspersed with music and the presentation of the fraternity spoon to Dr. Caroline McQuiston-Leete of Pasadena, a recent bride. Present were Dr. Veturia Armstrong, the president, and Drs. Charlotte M. Brown, Eleanor Seymour, Mona E. Bettin, Belle Wood-Comstock, Isabel Crowell, Etta Gray, Fredericka A. Keys, Ethel L. Leonard, Louise M. Richter, Gertrude Seabolt, Cynthia Skinner, Augusta Zuber, Frances Frank, Agnes Scholl and Caroline McQuiston-Leete.

Ivy Club.

A Christmas card party has been arranged by the Ivy Club, at which the president, Mrs. F. H. Chase, will be hostess. It will be the third of the tournament series. It will take place at Brackett Hall on Tuesday and the hostess will be ably assisted by a strong committee.

Travel Club.

The literary section of the Travel Club met on Friday afternoon, when Mrs. W. A. Macomber gave an interesting discourse on ancient and modern Mexico.

Audubon Society.

Next Thursday will be a field day for the Audubons, when they will enjoy a visit to the private grounds of Arthur Letts and to Vermont Canyon. Mrs. G. H. Snyder will be the leader. Anyone interested in bird life will be welcomed to the party. The meeting place is the entrance to the Letts grounds, on the Hollywood car line, end of Kenmore avenue, and the time is 9 o'clock.

At Sierra Madre.

The modern schools of art, their distinctions and ambitions, were discussed by Mrs. L. N. Lengendre at the Sierra Madre Woman's Club on Monday last. Her sketches, illustrating the styles, were particularly clever, for Mrs. Lengendre is an artist of no mean merit. Mrs. Mabel Lewis Care provided a musical programme, aided by her talented pupil, Miss Ethel Brocklinger. Mrs. Care specializes in compositions for children, which ingeniously call for particular technicalities.

College Woman's Club.

A Christmas programme for the little folk, in which juvenile players under the direction of Miriam Woodward Meredith will take part, is the seasonable programme of the College Women's Club at the Brack-Shop auditorium next Saturday at 2:30 o'clock.

William C. de Mille's "The Christmas Spirit" is to be given. The idea of presenting Christmas plays acted entirely by children is a specialty with Miss Meredith, who has met happy success in this department of her work.

Badger Club.

Mrs. J. Bert Stearns will be responsible for the next programme of the Badger Club on Wednesday, which is peculiarly timely in that her subject will be "The Food Situation and What the Government is Trying to Do to Relieve It." Miss G. E. Darlow will also speak on Russian literature, and Mrs. H. A. Cable will talk on the work of the women's legislative council.

Philotos Club.

Mrs. George Muells entertained the members of the Philotos Club at No. 1826 South Roosevelt avenue on Thursday last. Mrs. Austin spoke on the "Lure of Fact and Fable" in a well-considered speech.

Matinee Musical Club.

Mrs. Soley Morle, who, it is understood, was persona grata with the Queen of England, will give a lecture on Tagore before the Matinee Musical Club on December 14. Mrs. Morle, it is understood, can add much new information to our knowledge of the Indian poet.

Women's Lyric Club.

The Lyric Club will give the first concert of the season at Trinity Auditorium December 14. This club claims to have organized the finest women's chorus in the world, which fact may be questioned by rival claimants, but offers excellent inspiration for maintaining the evidence.

Miss Priscilla Butterfield, lyric soprano, and Mrs. O. L. Anderson will provide incidental solos, and those assisting will be Sigmund Beel, violinist, and S. R. Valenza, harpist, who will present "Fantasie," by Saint-Saens, and "The Prize Song," from "The Maestersinger," by Wagner.

Woman's Press Club.

The Woman's Press Club held its first banquet of the season at Christopher's last Tuesday evening, when Harry Carr, war correspondent, recently returned from Europe, was the principal guest of honor. He illustrated his relation of his experiences in Europe by lantern slides. Clarence McGehee spoke on Japanese poetry, and Mrs. E. S. Marshall and Dr. Hughes gave some interesting personal reminiscences of Jack London.

Woman's Dental Society.

The women dentists were entertained at an Annandale Country Club luncheon last Saturday, when Miss Edna L. Hatcher was hostess. This was the regular monthly meeting of the club.

Rosecrans Club.

This club will hold a board meeting at 2 p.m. The roll call will be responded to with current events, and a parliamentary drill will follow. The Rosecrans meet at Trinity Auditorium.

The P.-T.A.

The Vermont-avenue school will hold its Parent-Teacher meeting next Tuesday at 3 p.m., when Dr. Albert Shiels will speak on the schools. A musical programme will also be given.

The Malabar Street P.-T.A. will meet on Thursday next, when the third grade will give the programme. The Entertainment Committee has fixed December 15 for the production of the play, "The Doll's Christmas," which is to be performed by the children.

The Grand Avenue P.-T.A. will meet next Thursday for a children's programme, to include music and recitations. A baby shower will also be held.

Postoffice Clerks.

The ladies' auxiliary of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks held a meeting at the home of Mrs. George Hallet, No. 1469 Regina lane, on November 28, and eight new members were enrolled. The December meeting will be held on the third Tuesday of the month, instead of the fourth, at the home of Mrs. J. Wright, No. 3911 South Wall street.

The D.A.R.

Los Angeles chapter of the D.A.R. will meet next Wednesday at 2:30 p.m. at the residence of Mrs. Frank Hartigan, No. 2520 Trinity street, when Mrs. F. Morgan will be assistant hostess.

Eschscholtzia chapter will meet next Tuesday at the Ebell clubhouse, when Mrs. William H. Dudley, a member, will read a paper on "A Colonial Pilgrimage from Portsmouth to Old Concord." The fact that as many members as possible will appear in colonial dress should make the occasion picturesque and interesting.

A colonial play, "The Spirit of '76," is being rehearsed for presentation in the cause of charity in January, under the direction of Mrs. Satterlee.

Cabrillo chapter will entertain members of the Los Angeles chapter with a Christmas party at the home of Dr. Frederica Keep on December 16. The Children of the Revolution will bring toys for distribution to needy children of the settlements.

Daughters of 1812.

California chapter of the U.S.D. of 1812 met at the home of Mrs. Harriet Marsh last week. After a business meeting the granddaughter of the hostess played some violin numbers.

South Side Ebell.

The South Side Ebell will hold a meeting tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the branch library, Forty-fifth street and Central avenue. Mrs. Hoefling Steisner has arranged a programme which includes a discourse by Dr. Albert Shiels on "Education in the Home;" another by Mrs. E. H. Brooks on "Educating the Homemaker," and some musical interludes. The meeting will be open to the public.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

Discolored or Spotty Skin Easily Peeled Off

The discoloring or roughening to which many skins are subject at this season, may readily be gotten rid of. Mercolized wax, spread lightly over the face before retiring and removed in the morning with soap and water, completely peels off the disfigured skin. Get an ounce of the wax at any druggist's. There's no more effective way of banishing chaps, blotches, pimples, freckles or other cutaneous defects. Little skin particles come off each day, so the process itself doesn't even temporarily mar the complexion, and one soon acquires a brand new, spotless, girlishly beautiful face.

Wrinkles caused by weather, worry or illness, are best treated by a simple solution of powdered saxolite, one ounce, dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in this produces a truly marvelous transformation.

PIMPLES ON FACE ITCHED TERRIBLY

Large, Red and Sore. In Blotches. Disfigured and Skin Burned. In One Month Completely

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"Pimples broke out on the sides of my face, and later became more serious and itched terribly. The pimples were large, red, and sore, and they came to a white head. They came in blotches all over my face and one side of my neck. I was disfigured for the time being, and itched and burned.

"I tried all sorts of remedies but could get no results. Then I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They afforded results in a few days, and after about one month I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. L. Shaop, 2338 King St., Denver, Colo., Jan. 30, 1916.

King of Fertilizers.

RIVERSIDE TEST PROVES BARNYARD MANURE BEST.

After Eight Years' Experimentation Agriculturists Show Best Plant Food for Crops of Southern California Where Soil is Very Deficient of Organic Matter Necessary to Vegetable Life.

EIGHT years of careful, scientific, practical, day-by-day experimentation with the use of fertilizers on plots at the Riverside experiment station have resulted in a statement last week that, of all fertilizers applied, the ordinary barnyard fertilizer has shown the best, the most definite and satisfactory results.

This conclusion is the most important result reached at this station because it substantiates the observations of the practical rancher and demonstrates a record of actual performance, with but the element of guesswork. Professors, laboratory workers and general staff alike of the experiment station agree this conclusion is correct.

Dr. W. P. Kelly, professor of agricultural chemistry at the station, during the sessions of the citrus institute at Riverside last week, was the spokesman for the university on this particular question, and his statements were plain enough to be satisfactory to all of the many ranchers who attended the sessions of that important convention. He was corroborated in his statements by Prof. R. S. Vaile, Dr. H. J. Webber, the latter being dean of the citrus experiment station, and the findings from the treatment of these experimental plots are very generally accepted by all the members of the station staff.

Investigations have been in progress at the small citrus station at Riverside for eight years. Since its authorization by the State there have been a number of newer experiments started, several at Arlington, now two and one-half years old, and many and various ones on the Chase orchards, the Limoneira orchards, and on the lands of other individual ranchers, but the experiment in fertilization at the Rubidoux tract in Riverside is practically the only one from which a conclusion can be drawn, and it is at this point it has been demonstrated the rancher must pay most vital attention to the question of keeping a liberal amount of organic matter in the soil.

As one speaker said last week, the necessity for keeping organic matter in the soil in liberal quantities has been known for thousands of years. It is one of the oldest facts known to husbandry, and therefore one of the oldest facts in the human mind. But hundreds of conflicting, ramifying and digressing near-facts about fertilization have been accumulating, especially in the last seventy-five years, and in California during the last two decades, and this has tended to confuse and render more costly and oftentimes less profitable the business of growing crops for a market.

TREES MUST BE VIGOROUS.

The hundreds of ranchers who looked over the Rubidoux experiments last week noticed that the plots consistently treated with dried blood for eight years were in splendid condition, but they noticed that the plots treated with barn-yard fertilizer were in still better condition. They also noticed one plot which had been treated with other kinds of fertilizer, had set, and was ripening a very good crop, but the trees were in poor condition, and the deterioration of the plant in many ways was evident. Dr. Kelly warned the ranchers against placing any particular emphasis on the amount of fruit which a tree might have at any one or particular time, reminding them that a gopher-mined tree, about to die, will ofentimes bear an astonishing crop as a last effort before giving up the ghost. It seems to be an established fact of vegetable nature, that just before the parent dies, it produces offspring, supposedly a deliberate act to perpetuate the species.

Therefore, the most successful experiment shown was when a steadily-increasing condition of physical good had been shown in the tree itself. The healthy condition of the tree is a brighter harbinger for the future than can be any one or spasmodic crop. It is on this basis, now, more than hypothesis, that the station directors are concentrating attention on barn-yard manure, nitrogenous-bearing cover crops and all sources of real and available organic plant food.

Dr. Kelly makes the statement "we have seen little or no results in ten years of experience with the use of potash or phosphoric acid." He is borne out in this statement by Prof. Vaile.

There is a small qualification made by Dr. Kelly in speaking of the Rubidoux experiments. He says they are not "ideal experiments;" they necessarily have been conducted on the soil peculiar to that locality, but he believes the general results are broad enough to apply to most soils in Southern California.

VISUAL RESULTS.

Some plots at Rubidoux were carried on with trees treated with potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen, applied in various ways. Other plots were treated with stable manure. Still other plots with stable manure plus a cover crop, and many other methods of enriching the soil. The most outstanding fact, according to Dr. Kelly, is where stable manure, phosphate and cover crops were used, the trees showed a consistent, year-after-year improvement, and the soil was maintained to better satisfaction.

There are growers who believe that coarse, organic fertilizers make coarse fruit, the speaker said. Shall we condemn stable manure on this basis? The soils of Southern California are extremely deficient in organic matter. The reason there is any organic matter at all even in the so-called virgin soils of California, is because its process of bleaching out and of decomposition was not so rapid in the days before cultivation, owing to the sealing over of the surface during the dry months, allowing the soil to lie practically dormant, and because plant-life did not call upon the soil for subsistence in such large quantities, and only for a period of about six months in the year.

That the expenditure of organic matter is multiplied many times by the keeping of a constant growth on the soil, especially a gross feeder like the citrus tree, and decomposition very rapid, is the reason the soil is easily and rapidly depleted of organic substance. Therefore, Southern California soils are at all times deficient in organic matter unless it is constantly applied. It does not, in the opinion of Dr. Kelly, produce a coarse fruit when liberal amounts of organic matter are used.

He bases his statement on the years of steady experiment at Rubidoux showing the fruit taken from the plots where stable manure and cover crops were consistently used, has been "much better fruit in quality and in yield," and groves in Southern California, coming under his investigation, which have been consistently and liberally fed with stable manure and cover crops, are the groves in the best condition, and which have produced the best returns, year after year. The important lesson, of the Rubidoux experiments, is the necessity for a steady upkeep of organic materials in the soils of Southern California.

THE BACTERIA QUESTION.

Dr. Kelly declares the question of beneficial bacteria in the soil, about which much has been heard in the last five years, is a correlated subject—that bacteria only thrives in a soil where there is plenty of organic matter and moisture. His observations have shown him the activity of bacteria is invariably much more evident where stable manure is used, and where this is coupled with a moist condition at all times.

Dr. Kelly places emphasis on the use of stable manure because this was the method of obtaining organic matter for these particular plots, but whether the same result shall be obtained from the use of bean-straw, various cover-crops, dry alfalfa, or all combined is not particularly material in his estimation—it all depending on the question of what kind can be obtained the easiest and cheapest, and at the same time give satisfaction.

THE NITROGEN QUESTION.

The second point in importance to be derived from the Rubidoux experiment is the question of nitrogen.

Dr. Kelly says the amount of nitrogen taken out of Southern California soils by leaching is much larger than the amount taken out by the crop. He quoted Dr. Hopkins of Illinois as saying the greatest problem in soil management is the retention of nitrogen and the close study of the growing of legumes for this purpose is one that the rancher must concentrate upon. Oranges use more nitrogen than corn or wheat, and with this fact is the emphasizing one that Southern California soil does not contain as much nitrogen as eastern soils—it is a limited element in all this region in general. Legumes, such as cow-peas, alfalfa, vetch, and the clovers are the supplying agencies to the California farmer, extracting the nitrogen from the air, storing it in nodules on the roots of the plant, and by the process of decay, distributing it to the soil and thence to other plants. Green cover crops plowed under will become available in nitrogen very rapidly, in fact as rapidly as the prepared, commercial nitrogen, the speaker declared.

Dr. Kelly spoke of the experimental plots treated consistently with nitrogen as purchased—steamed bone, dried blood and nitrate of soda. He made the positive statement; plots treated with dried blood showed better results in every way than those treated with any of the other combinations.

DANGEROUS SODIUM NITRATE.

Dr. Kelley then said nitrate of soda in any form or in any kind of combination is injurious to the soil, and that certain harm will follow its use.

"It is not the nitrate that does the injury," said Dr. Kelley, "but it is its undesirable partner, the sodium, which makes nitrate of soda a thing to be shunned by all farmers." This statement, as well as all others, was based on the results obtained in the Rubidoux tract, where the nitrate of soda trees showed such a ravaged appearance. Science teaches us where nitrate of soda is used for long periods troubles invariably arise. For one thing, when the sodium enters the lime goes out—this is a demonstrated chemical action. Nitrate of soda is a good thing to leave alone. The second point of importance is the necessity for the use of organic nitrogen, which is found in organic matter, such as stable and kindred manures, and organic nitrogen, such as is procured from dried blood, tankage, etc.

The potash content in Southern California soils is very high. It does not disappear scarcely at all by leaching. It is somewhat different in the case of phosphoric acid. The total amount of this soil ingredient in California soils is not high, but what there is is highly available. This does not mean crops can be grown forever in this State without replenishing the soil with phosphoric acid. Corn growers of the Middle West grew heavy crops of corn for many years without the application of this ingredient and were finally forced to use it in fertilizer.

Where there can only be a general analysis because manures vary more than almost any other commodity, the speaker laid down a general and workable analysis of their nitrogenous qualities as follows:

Nitrogen Contained.
Stable manure, 10 tons, 100 lbs.
Bean straw, 4 tons, 90 lbs.
Alfalfa, 2½ tons, 90 to 100 lbs.

WHERE TO OBTAIN IT.

Dr. Webber, dean of the citrus experiment station, rose to supplement Dr. Kelley's remarks by calling attention to the fact not all ranchers in California could use stable manure at the same time. Stable manure is a scarce commodity the world over, he said. Why advocate it, when it cannot be obtained for all, he asked. And he answered this by saying the best plant food that can be obtained should be used when the other is not obtainable.

He said if alfalfa continued to show the promise it has in the past as an organic fertilizer it may well be within the bounds of reason to predict alfalfa will be grown particularly for the purpose of supplying manure for orange groves, and this can be done by the growers themselves on cheap lands, either rented or purchased for that purpose. It was his theory in the event the experiment station could bring to a conclusion its beliefs concerning alfalfa a great increase in this industry will be seen in the State. Dr. Webber declared in conclusion it was now a question of where the organic matter is to come from, for it must be had. A commodity is worth what one must pay for it if it is absolutely necessary.

BUYS STOCK TRACT.

Entering Cattle-raising Industry with a Fifty Thousand Dollar Land Purchase, W. F. Holt Will Become Factor in Progress.

W. F. Holt of this city, who from the very beginning of the development of activities in Imperial Valley was an important factor in many lines of its progress, recently has turned his attention to the stock-raising industry. Not long ago he acquired large land holdings in the San Fernando Valley, where he expects eventually to erect a magnificent home and raise fine thoroughbred stock. Within the past few days he has closed a deal that also gives him possession of a large tract of land in Ventura county, which will also be devoted to stock raising.

This purchase was made from W. H. Stephens of this city. The land, 5000 acres, is located about six miles southeast of Fillmore, and a railroad station is located within one mile of the land. It is fenced and cross-fenced. The purchase price was $50,000.

Mr. Holt plans to stock the place with Hereford cattle, and will put from 15,000 to 20,000 head of stock on the ranch within a short time. He is much interested in the plans for establishing a national stock show in Los Angeles, and declares that he firmly believes such a show will prove a great benefit to Los Angeles and Southern California.

Y.M.C.A.

MANY ARE TAKING BUSINESS COURSES.

CITY IS WIDELY HERALDED AS EDUCATIONAL CENTER.

Stores, Banks, Business Houses and Corporations Offering Inducements for Men Trained in Association Courses Where Executives are Schooled.

Los Angeles as a business educational center is being heralded far and wide, according to a report of the Y.M.C.A. school of commerce and finance, 1000 of whose graduates during the past eight years have not only threaded almost every branch of business and industry in this city, but have gone north, east and south to carry the name of Los Angeles with them. Students of the Y.M.C.A. schools are even making a success in foreign countries.

In many Los Angeles department stores, banks and business houses auditors, cashiers, managers and various executives have received their early training or the instruction that put them in their present capacities in the day or night schools of the Young Men's Christian Association, the report says. The auditor for the San Francisco Panama-Pacific Exposition was a graduate of the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. school of commerce and finance. cern. Winters recited a number

In addition to sending its students to all parts of this and foreign countries, the schools are now said to be drawing young men from all parts of the west into Los Angeles for their commercial or technical training. One day this week enrollments in commercial, automobile and accountancy courses were received from young men just arrived from Bisbee, Ariz., Spokane, Wash., Enterprise, Or., and Felt, Idaho, to say nothing of registrations from surrounding towns in Southern California and other cities farther north in the State.

William Winters, a seaman, who became an automobile expert in the Y.M.C.A. auto school, has just returned from South Africa, where he was sent by a large automobile concern. Winters recited a number of narrow escapes in the riots of Cape Town and in service under Gen. Botha in Egypt and Mesopotamia. At one time his helper was shot while seated beside him on an armored car. He returned to the United States by way of India.

"I had to risk my neck a good many times," said Winters, "but still there was a lot of fun in it—and I got good pay for it, too."

Another student of the auto school is operating one of the first caterpillar traction motors used in California. Still another graduate, Rev. Cyrus A. Clark, a missionary in Japan, uses the knowledge he gained in the Los Angeles school, in touring that country preaching to the populace from the roadside. His automobile is known as the "Gospel Auto."

TYPEWRITER DEVICE.

Former Los Angeles Schoolboy Invents Bars Which Carry Small Words in Common Usage and Brings Typing Up to Fullest Speed.

According to word just received from the patent office, Clyde M. Smith, a Los Angeles youth employed at room 718 Knickerbocker Building, has secured protective rights upon a device which may prove an important innovation in the typewriter field. His device provides for ready-made words of common usage, and these will be placed upon a row of bars with other characters on the keyboard.

The improvement provides for common words like "and," "the," "of," "that," "what" and other similar words adjusted upon the keyboard, all ready to place upon paper with one tap of the key, instead of spelling out the whole word. It is claimed by the youthful inventor his idea will bring the modern typewriter to the latest point of perfection and make it possible to be used at full dictational speed.

Young Smith is 19 years old and attended the public schools here. He is now a typewriter repairer. He claims his plan is perfectly practicable, and machines carrying his device will be no more cumbersome than those carrying tabulators.

OPENS VISITING SEASON.

FIRST OF STRING OF ROAD SHOWS THIS WEEK.

Opening of the Mason Operahouse for the season, with an almost unbroken line of bookings, until late spring, will occur tomorrow night.

"Hobson's Choice" is the vehicle which will unlock the doors. While the Mason is opening the Burbank is in its last week, unless arrangements are made for a change in the plan for closing, as has lately been intimated.

The Morosco Theater is to present a new play this week.

Vaudeville will have several notable offerings. "The Forest Fire" is said to be the biggest spectacle act ever produced. A quaint production will be "Childhood Memories," while a musical tabloid of quality is "A Nut Sundae."

Mason.

"Hobson's Choice," the offering at the Mason to open tomorrow night, is a hilarious farce comedy which has been pleasing London, New York, Boston and Chicago for more than a year. The original English company will appear in the play, the cast including Viola Roach, Galway Herbert, Marshall Vincent, Lionel Bevans, Rhoda Beresford, Esther Mendel, Venie Atherton, Phyllis Birkett, Noel Tearle, James C. Malaidy, Thomas J. Donnely, Warren F. Hill and others.

The story, by Harold Brighouse, deals with Maggie Hobson, clerk and manager of her father's shoe shop and household, who has two marriageable sisters and a very self-assertive, domineering father. Tired of being "ordered about" under the parental roof, she starts a domestic rebellion.

Being a typical leap-year heroine, she proposes to one of her father's shoe hands, Willie Mossop. Maggie discovers in Willie a cobbling genius, and sees in him a future. But Willie does not want to marry Maggie. He is engaged to another girl, but Maggie fixes that by tearing him away from his fiancee's arms, taking him to church to be wed, and then setting him up in business in opposition to her tyrannical father. Maggie's methods in winning a husband for herself and one for each of her sisters provide continual hilarious surprises.

Miss Roach will be seen as Maggie.

Burbank.

This promises to be good-by week at the Burbank Theater. Beginning tomorrow night, the players will offer an elaborate production of the famous drama, "The Rosary." This is the first time this play has been seen in stock or in the West. Next Sunday, it is announced, the Burbank will close its doors as a stock house, and the policy for the future has not as yet been announced.

The cast which will present "The Rosary" will include Joseph Galbraith, Inez Plummer, Frank Darien, Warner Baxter, Dora Mae Howe, A. Burt Wesner, Nolan Leary and many other Burbank favorites.

Morosco.

The romantic farce by George M. Cohan, "Hawthorne of the U.S.A.," will be the attraction at the Morosco, commencing this afternoon. Richard Dix will have the role which Charles Ruggles made famous.

"Hawthorne of the U.S.A." is described as one of the liveliest and surest-fire laugh getters to be seen here this season. The story centers around the adventures of a young American in the Balkans. It lends itself to beautiful stage settings, and Stage Director Fred J. Butler has collaborated with Scenic Artist John Collette to give the Morosco patrons a beautiful production.

Dix will have his first real opportunity to display his dramatic abilities in this play. Supporting him will be Ruth Robinson, as the princess whom everybody is trying to marry; Lola May, Lillian Elliott, James Corrigan, Charles Buck, Herbert Farjeon, Wallace Howe, Lawrence Jackson, Frederick Bertram, Joseph Eggenton, Harry Duffield, Harry Schumm, William G. Quinn, Edward J. Peil and others.

Little Theater.

"Papa," by Zoe Akins, will enter its third week at the Little Theater Tuesday evening. This brilliant comedy of manners is being well received by the public. With "Papa" Miss Akins has established herself firmly as a writer of bright satire.

The play is being ably interpreted by the members of the Players Producing Company, which includes Percival Vivian, Violette Wilson, Kirah Markham, Irving Pichel, Clarissa Selwynne, Frayne Williams, Adolphe Milar and Corinne Johnson.

Richard Ordynski's production has received thousands of compliments.

Hippodrome.

Three headliners are promised on the Hippodrome bill opening tomorrow. The Florence Troupe of acrobats are among the cleverest of their kind, and offer a very spectacular act. "Childhood Memories," presented by Claire Hanson and company, is said to be a delight both to children and grown-ups. Ralph Whitehead and company will stage a routine of musical comedy items.

Others on the bill will be Leever and Le Roy, blackface funsters; Frank Rodgers, billed as the world's greatest colored ventriloquist; the DeBars, in a unique water juggling feature, and Marlotte's Manikins in a novelty act.

Orpheum.

The biggest act scenically ever sent out in vaudeville is scheduled in "The Forest Fire," Langdon McCormick's spectacle, which will headline the Orpheum bill opening tomorrow afternoon. Two railroad cars are required to transport the scenery and properties, and much of the set has to be erected at the opening of its engagement here. Thirty persons take part, and a thrilling series of stage pictures culminates in the flight of a full-sized locomotive across the stage through a forest apparently in flames. There is no real fire used in the act, but so vivid and realistic is the effect that a foot-note is used on the programme assuring timid folk of the fact. Sylvia Bidwell plays the leading role.

Others on the bill will be Josie Heather, the charming English comedienne, accompanied by Bobbie Heather and William Casey, Jr.; Ruth Budd, in a thrilling aerial act; Johnny Cantwell and Rita Walker, in "Get the Fly Stuff; the Brightons in a novelty "art" act, in which varicolored rags are made into pictures, and the holdovers, including "The Bride Shop," Ernest R. Ball and Maud Lambert.

Pantages.

A great musical "girl act," carrying a large company; one of the cleverest Japanese acrobatic acts in vaudeville and a trio of remarkably clever boys, promise to make the Pantages bill opening tomorrow one of the best of late. The Mori Brothers, sons of Nippon, do barrel manipulating as only orientals can, with novel contortion stunts.

"A Nut Sundae" is a tabloid, carrying a cast of twelve, including the nuts, who incidentally are very good looking embellishments. The act is described as of mirth, melody and the dance.

Sherman, Van and Hyman, three lively boys, dance, sing and play. Clifford and Mack, a man and a very pretty girl, have a routine of songs and chatter that is best described as neat and classy. Their "Let Me Know the Day Before," "Hypnotizer" and "Microbe" numbers are hits.

Valentine Vox, the ventriloquist, presents a novelty in his act, in that he does not approach the dummy, which is worked from behind the scenes. He puts over a double-voiced song at the close of his act. Elsie White, a comedienne, has several character ditties that go well.

"The Lass of the Lumberlands" with Helen Holmes, complete a bill that should prove a good standard of variety.

Andrew Carnegie was 81 years old on November 25, and spent the day at his home in New York with his family and a few friends. He is in remarkably good health.

MUSICAL

Favorite.

POPULAR DIVA'S RETURN

SCHUMANN-HEINK IN RECITAL. LOCAL ARTISTS' WORK.

The pendulum of musical attractions has been swinging toward the popular artist the early part of this season. Again this week will appear a favorite with the public whose great joyously human personality always proves a delight to her great host of admirers. Mme. Schumann-Heink is to sing twice at Trinity Auditorium, instead of once as originally scheduled. Her first recital will be Tuesday evening, and she will give the matinee programme incorporated in the afternoon Philharmonic course Saturday. This will be the famous singer's first appearance here since the saengerfest in the summer of 1915.

The programme for Tuesday evening is an unusual one. It contains four selections from the Wagner operas, the performances of which in this country and abroad have often been made notable by Mme. Schumann-Heink's interpretation of leading roles. A distinct source of enjoyment also will be her presentation of the Schumann song cycle, "Frauenliebe und Leben." This is a charming drama in miniature and something of a novelty locally. A mixed group will close the offering.

The programme for Saturday is in the popular vain and contains the list of songs that has made Schumann-Heink the great favorite she is with the concert-going public.

Following are the various selections in detail for the two recitals:

Tuesday evening: Erda scene from "Das Rheingold," Waltraute scene from "Die Gotterdammerung," Brangaene's Ruf from "Tristan und Isolde" and "Hirten Knabe Liedchen" from "Tannhauser" (Richard Wagner;) song cycle, "Frauenliebe und Leben" (Robert Schumann,) including "His Image," "He, of All the Best, the Noblest," "Heavenly Dream," "Thou Ring Upon My Finger," "Bridal Day," "Tears of Happiness," "Love's Delight" and "The Forsaken;" "War" (James H. Rogers;) "Before the Crucifix" (Frank La Forge;) "Danny Boy" (Fred E. Weatherly;) "Kerry Dance" (J. L. Malloy,) and "Bolero" (Arditi.)

Saturday matinee: "My Heart Ever Faithful" (J. S. Bach;) "Ich liebe dich" (Beethoven;) aria, "Ah, Mon Fils," from opera "Le Prophete" (Meyerbeer;) "Du bist die Ruh," "Die Forelle" and "Der Erlkonig" (Frank Schubert;) "Traum durch die Dammerung" (R. Strauss;) "Heimweh" (Hugo Wolf;) "Mutter an der Wiege" (Carl Lowe;) "Spinnerliedchen" (H. Reimann collection, seventeenth century;) "Dawn in the Desert" (Gertrude Ross;) "Cry of Rachel" (M. T. Salter;) "Down in the Forest" (Landon Ronald;) "The Rosary" (Ethelbert Nevin,) and "Good-morning, Sue" (Leo Delibes.)

Woman's Orchestra.

A bright and entertaining programme is to be presented by the Woman's Orchestra, under the baton of Henry Schoenefeld, Wednesday morning at 10:15 o'clock at Blanchard Hall. This is the first of three morning musicales to be given by this interesting local organization this year. The forces of the orchestra have been enlarged by a considerable number of professional players, and a marked advance over past work is anticipated.

Soloist for the concert will be Mrs. Henley Bussing, soprano, who has proved her thoroughly delightful vocal attributes on more than one occasion heretofore in this city and elsewhere. She is to sing several refreshing open-air numbers that will prove especially popular.

Following is the programme: Overture, "Preciosa" (Weber) and two lyric pieces (Mason,) String Orchestra; "Ah lo so" (Mozart) and "Gentle Lark" (Bishop,) Mrs. Bussing; flute obligato, Minnie V. Percival; "March Leonore" (Raff) and Symphony in E flat, Menuetto, Finale (Haydn,) Woman's Orchestra; "Whyte Lillie" (Old English,) "The Robin Sings" (MacDowell) and "Liebesfeier" (Schoenefeld,) Mrs. Bussing; "Ballet Russe" (Luigini,) Woman's Orchestra.

Timmner-Lott Trio.

Having with one appearance attained a position of no small preeminence in the local musical world, the Timmner-Lott trio organization will give its second recital Thursday evening at the Woman's Club House. A unique feature of the programme will be the String Quintette in G minor (by Mozart) for two violins, two violas and violoncello. Besides the regular members of the trio, Mr. and Mrs. Christiaan Timmner, G. T. Benkert, violinist, and Richard Schliewin and O. Hundhammer, viola players, will assist in this number. The Mozart Quintette has never before been heard in the city. Mr. Timmner has studied the work of Mozart very thoroughly and understands the interpretation of his compositions as few persons do at the present time. Besides the quintette Mrs. Timmner and Mrs. Clifford Lott will play the Sonata in C minor for 'cello and piano, by Saint-Saens. The Piano Quartette in E-flat major, by Schumann, one of the loveliest of chamber music numbers, also will be given.

Cadman's Recent Success.

Charles Wakefield Cadman, who is now a member of Los Angeles' family of composers, in so far as a composer can be said to belong to any particular city, has added several cubits to his already large fame in his recital appearances in New York this season. He was accorded an exceedingly flattering reception when he appeared in a programme of Indian novelties, assisted by Princess Tsianina. They are coming West later in the season, and are to give a recital here on the Philharmonic course.

Cadman has attained an enviable place as an organizer of crude native melodies of the red man into interesting compositions. Speaking of his recital, the New York Evening Post said regarding this phase: "Edward MacDowell found the music of the American Indians a source of inspiration, and so did, on a much larger scale, Harvey W. Loomis and many others. Mr. Loomis has been particularly successful in preserving the wild-plum and grape flavor of red music. Mr. Cadman mixes it with more of the

The Impressionist.

Could I but make the twilight stars to sing
Upon my canvas, kindle May reborn
To sweep along the valley, call the morn
To flash across the world its crimson wing,
Unleash the chains of the bright brooks of spring
That weary hearts might hear them, they, the worn
With life's long sickness, those who laugh to scorn
Plain joys of earth — to set them wondering!
Ah, could one picture veritably show
The soul of fact, the commonplace's might,
It would interpret, quicken some man's sight—
As when at sunset dusty toilers go
Languidly homeward through a street below,
Procession-like, bathed in a heavenly light.

Efforts and Effects.

Only the other day an artist—a musician—reproached me with being a classicist. He had just played for me something from Debussy, and then something from Beethoven, and I had decidedly preferred the latter. Debussy had interested me greatly, but he had also excited and bewildered me, while Bethoven's melody, his perfect form, had given me nothing but pleasure. Even the musician, a modern of the modern in his tastes—and especially in his opinions, a very different matter—had to admit that the Bethoven number was beautiful.

Exactly what is a classicist? And is he always, of necessity, a reactionary? I think not. It seems to me that the man of classic spirit is he who looks for "clearness, compactness, measure and balance" in art—in short, for that perfection of form, which is art's one universal language, and without which the artist may be understood, but is quite as likely not to be. The classicist does not deny the value of the poetic and the spontaneous, the importance of the idea. He does not believe that substance should be sacrificed to form, but that the two should be beautifully balanced — a difficult but quite possible performance even for the man of temperament, even for the painter who is more poet than artist.

You cannot get away from the fact that each of the arts has its own conventions, which are made "classical" by time, and which may not be rejected without producing chaos. Color, emotion, feeling—these are all the more effective when they are expressed with form, or at least their charm is made more enduring.

If to be a classicist is to be enamored of form and regardless of any artistic content—as my musical friend perhaps thinks—then, decidedly, I am not a classicist, for I hold that if a work of plastic art expresses no idea (a sufficiently elastic word, by the way,) it is null and void and might better have been left unuttered. "Words, words, words," said Hamlet, and "More matter with less art," said his impatient mother—or rather, Shakespeare, being a consummate artist, here seized an opportunity to give vent to some of his own opinions on the subject.

In his day Shakespeare was as modern as, say, almost any member of the Los Angeles Modern Art Society, and he chose one of the most difficulty of all methods of art expression, that of playwriting. His imagination was perhaps more active than that of any other human being that ever lived. He had a great many things to say about his fellowmen, and he was a wonderful poet besides—yet he kept within the form of the five-act play, and "Lear" is as compelling today as it ever was. Shakespeare's form is not that of Moliere. He broke many of the traditions, but he held fast to those most needful. His urn was of Attic shape, though almost overweighted with ornamentation, with brede of men and maidens, "with forest branches and the trodden weed." He became a classic in spite of himself, for his artistry was equal to his poetry.

Which swings me back again to the Los Angeles Modern Art Society, whose members, to the number of thirteen, are holding their first annual exhibition of some sixty or seventy pictures and sketches at the Brack-Shop of West Seventh street, where it will remain to December 16. Don't miss it, for it is one of the most interesting exhibitions of the year, vidid and stimulating. It impelled me to speak about the classic in art, and in the same way it may induce you to give expression to other things—even vituperation, if you cherish dense bigotries in matters of art. If you are an eclectic—as I hope—you will have the time of your life, for you may pick and choose to your heart's content, assured that you are reveling in the very latest things in paint.

The L.A.M.A.S. are not, of course, anti-classical in their ideals, but they are dead set against form that has become merely formal, against picture making that has become mechanical, and they uphold, with keen eyes and vigorous brushes, their search for sincerity of expression, for directness in its truth-telling, and for that broad vision which would encompass the world. In fact, the L.A.M.A.S. have raised a standard befitting their name, one bearing a legend of battle and ultimate conquest. Of battle, assuredly. The word "modern" is enough—it makes many good and well-meaning people see red.

But there may be, and there often is, a new way of looking at familiar things, and in the case of painting and its subjects the "moderns" think they have found it. They have thrown aside, so to speak, the blinkers put upon them by masters of the rule-of-thumb, and have found, as I have said, what they believe to be the wider view. But they are discoverers even more than they are iconoclasts, builders rather than wreckers. In fine, they maintain that the painter should at all times be unhampered in his expression. He should be free, not bound hand and foot by formulas. Let us not forget this attitude, the essential modern spirit in life as well as in art. "Tout comprendre, c'est tout justifier."

The modern tendency in criticism has been more and more toward impressionism, toward the quick survey, the sympathetic understanding. If, comprehending everything, the crime does not justify quite everything, he at least condemns as mercifully as he can, and he gives much regard to "extenuating circumstances." The painter, he holds, may be less black than he paints, or he may be less modern than he advertises.

At all events, there are all sorts and conditions of modernity in the works of the thirteen painters now found at the Brack Shops. Robert Henri is modern, if you like, in his vivid and colorful portrait entitled "Edna," but is Victor Higgins in his equally beautiful, but very different, "Indian Still Life"? When I say "different" I refer, of course, to technique, not subject. Henri's brush work is brilliant and bold, the exquisite handling of Higgins bears hardly a sign of the brush. Yet both pictures are unusually attractive. The flesh in Henri's young girl is all glowing and melting loveliness, the black olla in Higgins's study is poised as delicately as if it were about to float in air, or as if it were about to liberate a genii of a thousand magics. Few still-lives have so much distinction as this one. Grace Ravlin's "The Studio Supper" is rich and full in color, wonderful in arrangement, but it has not the exquisite envelope of air, the transfiguring play of light, that we find in "Indian Still Life."

The moderns, in love with actuality, do not disdain still life; in fact, they paint it very often, though here they are blazing no new trail, for most of the great masters of painting have delighted in it. In the present exhibition Bert C. Cressey has two of much tonal and color charm, textures being rendered with subtlety as well as truth. These are "The Loaf" and "Studio Stove." Cressey's "Rue Froidveaux" is also completely realized. Meta L. Cressey's still life, "Japanese Doll," is a sketch full of vitality, white poppies in a vase, the doll herself being but a very small accessory to the fact.

Mrs. Cressey has two outdoor studies that are as vivid as the still life and much more significant. In "Turkeys" she has struck a color note of rich and vibrant quality, and in "Fisherman's Camp" we find a breadth of vision, a bigness of effect, that are indeed stimulating. From Richard Miller comes "The Garden," a sparkling little canvas recently painted in Pasadena, and of course done in this brilliant technician's able manner. Miller is past-master with the brush. Walter Ufer contributes "Desert and Mountain," painted with simplicity and distinction, a rocky slope rising toword a sky of somber blue.

"Peace," by Rex Slinkard, would be as darkly lovely in color by any other name, and indeed you might call it "War" without harm to your sense of enjoyment. A picture means exactly what you find in it. At any rate, there is beautiful harmony of hues in this canvas called "Peace." Jack Gage Stark's "Calli on the Mountain" may mean a hundred things. Its deep note of blue, on which is imposed the rich green of a broad-leaved tree, its serrated peaks whose edges are enameled with rainbow hues, give you an impression of exaltation and mystery. "The Mountain," also by Stark, renders a certain mood with great felicity.

I have already had occasion to speak of the temperamental animation of the work of Karl Yens. This painter has some salient faults, but he is always and above everything else, supremely artistic. All the objects and aspects of nature offer him pictorial possibilities that he is always eager to take. His alertness of eye is coupled with facility of hand, and I suspect that he never works without enthusiasm. This happy energy, this quick seizure of the picture, are found in "Have a Chapote," in "Her Silent Guest" and in the two other large canvases from his brush, as well as in the smaller ones that he contributes.

Diverse opinions were expressed to me, the other day, concerning the work of Henrietta M. Shore. A literary man was looking at the pictures with me. He did not care for them at all. On the other hand, another man, a painter of note, found them naif and delightful. It gave him positive joy to look at them. I myself am still on the fence, so to speak. I admit their naivete, but I do not concur to their color, which strikes me as being sometimes forced beyond the breaking point, and I could wish that Miss Shore would strive for more quality and get away from the feeling of paint. There is fine force, if not actual characterization, in the large canvas entitled "Negro Woman and Children," and "Among the Hills," a smaller canvas, is lovely and poetic, one of the most engaging pictures in the gallery. When Miss Shore paints like that I am with her every time. Her small pastels, exhibited without titles, are also very attractive.

The ten talents given Edgar Keller seem to be always active. Painting is only one of his many artistic forms of expression, and here he is alert and experimental. Consider the diversity of the four big pictures he is showing, then look at the smaller unnamed ones. "One Day" brings us to Venice in summer, a line of gay umbrellas, aglow in the sunlight, leading us to the deep blue of sea and sky. "The Thaw" brings us up to snowy mountain gorges by subtle rhythms of line and color. "The Park" is a poster decoration of many perpendicular lines, its scheme of color being dark, simple and effective. "Eskimo Belle" is a figure study of arresting energy.

Helena Dunlap's "Hunting Buffalo" is not, despite its title, a canvas of many figures of men and animals, but the portrait of a young Indian. It is a superb bit of painting, strong in character, beautiful in its scheme of light and color, broad and free in its handling. I have seen nothing from Miss Dunlap's brush that I liked better, though her smaller study of a young Russian girl with an orange-colored kerchief tied round her head, follows as a close second. This, too, is absolutely convincing in character. "Teresita" I do not like so well; it has not the quality of the other two. "Mexican Graveyard at Taos" renders a scene and a mood with somber fidelity, and in the same strong brushwork that we always expect from this fine painter and true artist.

On the whole, the L. A. M.A.S. are offering a first exhibition of absorbing interest. More and more may be expected from them, for they are painters who are alive—in short, modern.

News and Notes.

An exhibition of miniatures by Ella Shepard Bush will be held at the artist's studio in Sierra Madre from 2 to 4:30 p.m. on November 26, 27 and 28. Miss Bush's studio is at the corner of Laurel and Adams streets.

Joseph Greenbaum is at present in San Francisco, where he is executing some portrait commissions. On his return, in a few days, he will hold an exhibition of his recent work at the Friday Morning Club. The canvases will probably be in place on the morning of December 8.

Marco Zim, formerly of Los Angeles, but now having a permanent studio in Santa Barbara, is about to hold an exhibition of paintings and sculptures at the Battey gallery, No. 294 East Colorado street, Pasadena. The exhibition opens December 1, to continue for two weeks.

The landscapes that William Lees Judson has been showing at the Daniell gallery, No. 640 South Hill street, will remain on view to the end of the present week.

M. B. Bemis is showing a score of water colors and pastels in the public library at Hermosa Beach. The most of them are shore studies sympathetically rendered.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

William C. Muschenheim, proprietor of the Hotel Astor, New York, played Santa Claus to 1400 of his employees last week, when he called them together and handed each one a life insurance policy. Every one who has been employed at the hotel for a year or more received a policy and the total amount of the insurance was more than $250,000.

The lowest policy was for $500, which was issued to all workers in the hotel who had been on the staff for a year. For every additional year of service another $100 was added. The largest policy was given to Tom Horton, who has been employed by Mr. Muschenheim for thirty years. His policy called for $3400.

Next came Peter, well known to patrons as head waiter of the Louis XVI room, who, with a record of twenty-six years, received a policy for $3000. The third largest went to Miss Mary Herson, employed as housekeeper for twenty-five years.

Twenty employees with records of from fifteen to twenty years got policies ranging from $1900 to $2400. Fifty more averaged between $1400 and $1900.

The Rt. Rev. Edwin S. Lines, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Newark, has announced a contribution of $50,000 from James Barber, a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Englewood, to the cathedral fund.

Some time ago a cathedral chapter was organized in the diocese, its object being to raise funds to erect a million dollar cathedral. Subsequently a site in East Orange was offered to the chapter, the price being $50,000. Mr. Barber offered the contribution for the purchase of the proffered site.

The annual $1000 gift to the life saving service from two New York women, whose names always have been surrounded with secrecy, arrived on November 18. The two sisters, who for twenty years have been paying a debt of gratitude to the service, now have given $20,000. Since the last contribution was made, one of the sisters has died, but the survivor sent $500 for her.

While the United States easily holds the lead in "large giving" by private citizens for public beneficence, Japan, ever eager in the race for civic betterment, is showing great generosity among its wealthy toward projects for the public good. An endowment fund for a department of medicine for Keio University was sought this summer. It was originally planned to raise 1,000,000 yen, and during September 700,000 yen was realized. Responses to the appeal continued in such a generous stream that by October 15 the sum had increased to 1,037,000 yen. The largest donors are the Mitsui family, with 100,000 yen, and the Morimura, Homeikwai, Baron Iwasaki and Mr. Fujita, with 50,000 yen each. Encouraged by the gifts to date, the university has decided to include the purchase price of the site in the fund, and has raised the mark to 1,500,000 yen. The unexpected generosity of the donations marks a new stage in the development of Japan. The Keio subscription fund was preceded a short time ago by 2,000,000 yen donations by individuals in Osaka. One was a gift of 1,000,000 yen to the Osaka municipality, to be expended for the general betterment of the city's inhabitants. Another donation of the same amount was made to the Osaka Medical College for a department of research.

Mrs. William Scott Ferguson, No. 8 Scott street, Cambridge, Mass., will receive and forward property bags for use in the allied hospitals, as she did last winter. This is the work of which Miss Frances Fowler had charge during the summer. In all 13,527 bags have been shipped to date. "It may be of interest to those who have worked so hard," wrote Lady Smith-Dorrien, recently, "to hear that 1,020,000 bags have now been supplied through my fund; even now I have no reserve, and have had to refuse the request of the Red Cross headquarters for 25,000 bags."

Superintendent of Parks Theodore Wirth of Minneapolis has distributed 50,000 chrysanthemum blossoms, taken from the park board's flower show, among the patients in the city's hospitals.

The Soldiers' Home shared with the hospitals a large portion of the 400 varieties of chrysanthemums exhibited at the show.

Thousands of socks stuffed with Christmas gifts are to be presented to the American troops at the border and in Mexico through the Red Cross. Miss Mabel Boardman, head of the organization at Washington, announced that chapters throughout the country would be asked to begin collection of gifts immediately, such articles as candy, stationery, pipes, tobacco and handkerchiefs being preferred. For purchase of the socks themselves money will be solicited.

Lord Darnley, claimant to the Scottish Dukedom of Lennox, having been rejected by the military authorities on the score of age—he is in the neighborhood of 60—and feeling the urgent necessity of expending his superabundant and exuberant energy in behalf of his native land, has, according to cable dispatches from Europe, secured employment as a laborer on a farm, hoeing turnips, in order to set an example of war time industry and economy and at the same time to "do his bit" for his country. He is one of the tallest members of the House of Lords, in which he sits as one of the representative peers of Ireland, standing six feet four in his stockings, while his eldest son and heir, Lord Clifton, a commander of the royal navy, has attained the extraordinary height of six feet seven inches.

Fingering Finery.

AMONG THE STORES AND AMID THE SHOPPERS.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

Now is the time to buy:

The coat, suit or hat which you have so long deferred purchasing in the hope that prices would take a tumble. That is what they are doing this coming week at that popular store where seven—yes, there!

The Christmas gift unusual. The usual ones may be found up to the eleventh hour and fifty-fifth minute, but the Un— ones will all be gone long before that hour strikes.

The doll which you mean to dress. Dolls are far from plentiful this season, when we are bereft of all importations. To buy in time means to secure the doll you wish. To delay long is to take whatever is offered.

At last, the mystery was about to be solved! For weeks we had been hearing about a new Spanish place soon to be ready for patronage and we had waited with bated breath—but not baited with chile, as yet. The thought of a Spanish dinner had always meant to me a lot of mixtures so permeated with pepper that one had not courage to learn the composition. The difference between what was served to us at that new place and the usual dishes placed before one under the titles, was somewhat like the difference between poetry and doggerel; between viands and "grub;" between music and jingle; between sign painting and the masterpiece. No dish was over-seasoned and yet all were enticingly piquant. Each course was a surprise, for even though a native Spanish dish which we had before met, it was so different as to be like a friend in new clothing. Then there were dishes and condiments entrancingly novel. For example, that strange, native cheese, cut in gelaine-like cubes; the candied fresh apple, transparent as glass; the cheese-stuffed long green pepper wrapped in a delicious paper-thin omelette; the beans—well, in all my Boston-bean-eating life I have never tasted such good beans! Even though the names might have been "Greek" to us, save for the translation of the Spanish people whose guests we were, we realized most truly that good cookery, like good music, needs no interpretation. That chicken a la Moreno we assimilated by means of the universal sign language, without a dictionary, and the sign was that we "licked the platter clean." You see, the dear little Spanish woman who has established the place is a refugee from Mexico and she knows high-class Spanish cookery. Out of the ordinary, if a trifle out of the way, the location of the place is interesting, an old home on Grand avenue, where tables are scattered throughout the high-ceilinged rooms. Everything is immaculately clean and the place is foreign in atmosphere. No, they have no license, but they have glasses and a corkscrew, so you may take your own. If it happen to be that liquid amber distillation such as high-class Castilians love, you are to be envied; for thus will the final drop of honey be added to the sweetness of that ambrosian feast.

Suppose, just for a change, we all go about our Christmas affairs systematically; think what an amount of hustle, brain fag and nervous strain we would save ourselves and others! First, let us make out complete lists of those to whom we shall give. Next, let us determine approximately the amount to be devoted to each gift. Then let us go through the newspapers (The Times first, of course,) and learn where the articles planned to fill our lists may best be obtained. A little study here will save us many dollars; for there is something on special sale at one place or another from time to time, and by knowing where, we may cut down our expenditures or at least materially readjust them. Next, let us start early. Early in the month, early in the week, early in the day. It does truly seem as though when we start early there actually exists a "fourth dimension" of time! So much more can be accomplished then than later. Doubtless it is because we are fresh in brain and unfatigued in body, and the same is true of the salespeople. Late in the day, the week, the month they are wearied almost beyond thinking and it is certain that they are unable to assist us as they can when feeling trim. The holiday rush grows hourly, and at last becomes a crush, all around. Gifts seem actually to carry a better spirit when they are selected at leisure and with ample thought.

Telling Christmas Beads.

Somehow, I never feel as though holiday time had arrived until those candy beads are hanging in long lines at the sweetery booths, do you? They set one's thoughts to tingling with that wonderment as to what Santa will bring down the chimney, on the merry morning, as to what will grow upon one's own particular Christmas tree—whatsoever kind of tree it happens to be.

Cheaper Than Eggs.

While gift hunting, recently, I was attracted by a table upon which were shown egg-shell china cups and saucers at a price so low that the thought came to me: "Egg-shell china is actually cheaper than are real eggs!" So, let us join the egg boycott and breakfast off egg-shell china!

Character Dolls.

Imported dolls have had to remain at home this Christmas, and we are enteraining, instead, dolls of American origin and they are almost without exception, character dolls. Possibly they are not quite as pretty as were the dolls from across the water; but they seem to have more real worth. I mean they seem less like toys and more like real children. I noticed them at that big store on lower Broadway which is nowadays a favorite rendezvous for kiddies!

Jersies.

It was there, also, that I found those funny jersey dolls. They were "all-over" of that jersey cloth which seems to have found a habitat in every department of our lives. Of dark gray, these queer and likable jersey folk looked like some new sort of brownies, in a different color than brown.

Saturday Give Aways.

By the way, did you know that they give away toys of one kind or another, at that big store on Saturdays? Last week it was a laughable little dog which was all head and bark and ears. I took one home to our fox terrier and he greeted it like a lost brother, had a great romp with it and then greedily ate its ears off.

Glad Rags and Bags.

You were wrong and so was I. There is no diminution of the craze for sport clothes, nor will there be as long as such things are brought out as those seen in that popular store, which is not and never has been seventh on Broadway when it comes to women's clothes. Those new suits, of Khaki Kool, are—well—simply amazing, as to colors. "You could sell those all to one woman," I remarked to the saleswoman, "for once she set eyes on them, they would go to her head and she would be at your mercy." Not only are the colors audible, but they are in immense checkerboards, and in dots which are to the old-time "polka" dot as is the "walkin' the dog" to the minuet of ye stately dames of yore. "I'd call that coat a double sport coat," I remarked, "and charge double for it. It is a golf coat of course, but while the wearer golfed her friends could be playing checkers on her coat-tails." So, if you have purchased one of those coats at the first asked price, you are ahead of the game and should go back and pay more for the garment, else you're cheating the store. But oh, some of the suits are ravishing! Especially the royal purple ones with bags to match. Several have bags instead of pockets. All are colorful. Elsewhere you will find hats to match them both in material and in color. How the fields will bloom when those clothes go sporting!

Familiar Ties.

The newest scarfs for men look exactly as though cut from the skirts of flowered silk kimonos! The same great gorgeous flowers! The same weaves of silk! It looks suspicious. Perhaps you recall the time when men were habitually robbed of necktie ends for patchworking. The mills of the gods grind slow, but they grind exceeding small—and even when it comes to neck scarfs, they grind. At least it looks so.

Old Trays With New Paints.

Those Japanese nut bowls which we have liked for so long, have been reincarnated this season. They have elongated to a tray or platter shape, and they have taken unto themselves paint. The "Long life and happiness" signs carved in their centers are now painted as well in the brilliant coloring popular with the Orient. I think they are far prettier thus.

"Give Furniture."

It is not long since the Christmas advice, "Give Furniture" would have sounded ponderous. "Give furniture" would have meant big articles such as tables, chairs, bedroom suites—and the idea would not have seemed apropos. Now, it is different, for there are scores, almost hundreds of articles under the family name of furniture which are just right for gifts. The revival of lacquer has done much to promote the range of such articles. There are book racks, magazine stands, flower boxes, whole suites for the breakfast room intime and one of the best gifts of all, those nests of tables—all in lacquer. Then, in mahogany there are innumerable pieces, all giftie.

Spelled by Dame Fashion.

Tiny ruffles give a charming effect to collar and cuff sets for wear with semidress gowns.

A straight figure line and high choker collar are among the correct coat suit styles for fall.

Plaid or checked silks may be used for children's guimpes, to be worn with dark dresses.

Metal ornaments, wings and narrow ribbon are about all the millinery decoration we shall see this fall.

ap of white art, but the resulting compound makes an agreeable tidbit.

"At an 'Indian music talk' and recital in Aeolian Hall last night Mr. Cadman presented specimens of his doubly-American music before a large audience, which enjoyed it very much, and warmly applauded, also, his well-written and interesting trio in D major, Op. 56, which was played with Arkady Bourstin and Paolo Gruppe. In the vocal groups he had the assistance of Princess Tsianina of the Creek Indian tribe, who has an agreeable and well-trained voice, and knows how to render the music of her own people and other tribes with fervor and poetic charm."

Olga Steeb Wins Approval.

Olga Steeb, the fascinating California pianiste, presented a programme before the Spinet Club recently at Redlands which proved the source of great enjoyment to the members. The local dailies were enthusiastic in praise of her work. "One could ask for nothing more beautiful than her interpretation of Liszt's 'Sposalizio' and 'Claire de Lune,' by Debussy," said one reviewer. Another: "The programme was not only a delight to the ear, but an intellectual feast as well."

Hope-Staples Recital.

Any composition by Richard Strauss is always certain to attract special attention when included on a programme. Consequently the recital of Mrs. May MacDonald-Hope, pianist, and Robert Martin Staples, violinist, will be of particular interest, next Saturday evening at Blanchard Hall. They are to present the Sonata for violin and piano, Opus 18, of the composer of "Salome" and famous tone poems. This sonata belongs to a period in the composer's career which had nothing in common with the creation of "Salome." It more nearly resembles in its melodious richness such works as "Death and the Transfiguration."

Mrs. Hope has attained striking success in the presentation of difficult programmes at her previous recitals in this city and elsewhere. At the coming recital she will give a series of very exacting solos, including Symphonie Etudes by Schumann, rarely heard Ballade in F minor by Chopin and a prelude by Fannie Dillon, local composer.

Mr. Staples is a prominent member of the Symphony Orchestra and a musician of exceedingly broad knowledge. He will include among his solo features a Brahms Hungarian dance, "The Zephyr" by Hubay and a Nocturne in E minor (posthumous) by Auer-Chopin.

Following is the programme: Sonata for violin and piano, Opus 18 (Richard Strauss,) Allegro ma non troppo, Improvisation Andante Cantabile, Finale, Allegro; piano solos, Nocturne, Op. 27, No. 2, D flat, Etudes Nos. 3, 8, 11, Opus 25, and Ballade in F minor (Chopin;) Etudes Symphonique, Op. 13 (Schumann;) violin solos, Hungarian Dance (Brahms,) Nocturne in E minor (Auer-Chopin) and "The Zephyr" (Hubay;) piano solos, Prelude No. 4 (Fannie Dillon) and Rhapsody No. 11 (Liszt.)

Donahue to be Soloist.

An announcement that will bring pleasure to many local admirers of the young artist is the engagement of Lester Donahue as soloist for the next symphony concert, the 15th and 16th inst. Mr. Donahue will play the Liszt Concerto, No. 1, in E flat major, with the orchestra. This will mark his return to Los Angeles after unusual success that has attended his appearances in the East during the past two seasons.

Unheralded and unknown, Mr. Donahue last year gave his first recital in New York City and Boston. The critics at that time accorded him much praise. This season, however, his concert work in the East brought the young artist into the limelight of fame to a remarkable degree.

—o—

Harmonia Club.

Saint-Saens's music will be the subject of an interesting programme by the Harmonia Club Thursday, to be given under the leadership of Mrs. Ella B. McWhorter. She will give a sketch of the characteristics of the composer. The following musical numbers will be presented: Piano solo, "Valse Carnivale," Mrs. Adric Johnson; vocal solo, "Claire de Lune," Miss Anne McNab; vocal solo, "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice," from "Samson and Delilah," Mrs. George J. Ramsey; piano solo, "Romance Sans Paroles," Mrs. George H. Doane; vocal solo, "Amour Vieus Aider," from "Samson and Delilah," Mrs. John David Beall; violin solo, "Prelude to the Deluge," Miss Viola L. Foley.

Schubert Organ Programme.

Under the auspices of the Schubert Club a recital will be given by Edith Rounds Smith, member of the American Guild of Organists, Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral. She will be assisted by C. Franklin Parker and Roy Kendall.

—o—

Gamut Club.

The Gamut Club has arranged an attractive programme for the regular monthly dinner to take place Wednesday evening. Among the musical offerings will be selections from Eduardo Lebegott's operas, "Rose Rosse," "Semele" and the "Love Flower," directed by the composer himself. The soloists will be Misses Dorothy Beach and Helen Newcomb, Mrs. Joseph Zuckerman, Roland Paul and C. Audrey Burns.

—o—

Concert at Trinity.

A programme of diversified quality will be presented this afternoon at Trinity by a group of capable musicians, including Frederick A. Herrmann, organist; Mrs. J. T. Anderson, pianist; Margaret Stockwell, soprano; Bernardine Whalen, violinist, and Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Sprague, who will give interpretations of Persian music and poetry. The last-named offering will be especially interesting, as Mr. Sprague lived for many years in the Orient and was at one time head master in the Oriental School of Music and Poetry in Cairo, Egypt. He married the Princess Farahanguize Khanoum, the first titled woman of Persia to throw aside the veil and marry an American. The combined work of the two is unique.

The following programme will be given: Organ, Offertory in D minor (Batiste,) and "Noel" and "Laus Deo" (Dubois,) Mr. Herrmann; soprano solo, "Valley of Laughter" (Sanderson) and "If You Would Love Me" (MacDermid,) Margaret Stockwell, with Mrs. Anderson at the piano; violin, "Liebesfreud" (Kreisler,) "Minuet in C" (Beethoven) and "Irish Folk Song," Miss Whalen, with Mrs. Anderson at the piano; interpretation of Persian music and poetry, Mr. and Mrs. Sprague.

Pupils' Recital.

Mrs. Henry G. Sanger, Ruth Deardorff-Shaw and Madge Patton Sullivan will present their pupils on a programme of modern and classical music Friday evening at the Synthetic School of Music, No. 1006 South Westlake avenue. Those taking part will include Misses Golda Cogswell, Marietta Lum, Clara Mae Wilson, Majel Rudolph and Max Holtz.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Frieda Peycke, who recently opened her season with a recital before the Covina Amphion Club, will make the following appearances before Christmas: At Santa Ana Ebell, Whittier High School, Whittier Elks' Club, Imperial Valley Club, Long Beach Kindergarten Teachers' Association at Hotel Virginia, and Pomona Ebell, a Christmas programme. Her new numbers are being exceedingly well received.

Archibald Sessions will give a recital under the auspices of the Southern California chapter of the American Guild of Organists, tomorrow evening at All Saints Episcopal Church in Pasadena. Following is the programme: Concert Variations (Bonnet,) Nocturne (Karganoff,) Improvisations (choral) by Karg-Elert; "By the Waters of Babylon" and "Devoutly do I Love Thee, O Lord;" recitative and finale from Sonata in C minor (Baldwin.)

At the fifth of his series of recitals this evening at St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral, Ernest Douglas will present organ compositions selected from the works of Handel, including overture, chorus "But the Water," from "Israel in Egypt" (transcribed by Mr. Douglas;) Concerto No. 5 in F, prelude, allegro, siliciano and gigue.

Caruso, John McCormick, Geraldine Farrar, Alma Gluck, Fritz Kreisler, Efrem Zimbalist, Marcel Journet and other popular artists render attractive selections on the Victor record programme this month.

A pleasing programme will be given Saturday evening at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Garrett, No. 2251 West Twentieth street, by Mrs. Jessie B. Small of the Fillmore School of Music, and the following pupils of that institution: Misses Ruby Hill, Minnie L. Baxter, Doris Porter, Helen Robinson and Mmes. E. F. Soule and E. H. Garrett. They will be assisted by Miss Alice Soule, soprano, pupil of Miss Beatrice Sountag; Miss Bernice Thompson, pupil of Axel Simonsen, and Carl Tetzloff, pupil of J. Robert Saunders. The programme will include violin, vocal, piano and 'cello numbers selected from the works of Haydn, Verdi, Grieg, Saint-Saens, Bach, Rachmaninoff, Schubert, Liszt, Brahms Raff and Massenet. Mrs. Garrett will present several readings with music.

"The American programme" presented by Katherine Fiske, violiniste, and Bertha Fiske, reader, at their studio in Blanchard Hall Saturday afternoon touched an interesting note in the musical and literary appreciation of the national composers and writers. Cecil Burleigh's "Indian airs," which included "Laughing Waters," "The Wigwam" and "The Legend," were played with a fine understanding. Katherine Fiske also gave "Sunrise," by George Edwards of San Diego, a brilliant young American composer, and Horatio Parker's "Intermezzo" from "Fairyland," and Chadwick's "Allah" and Friml's "Nipnon" effectively. Bertha Fiske, in her introductory comments on "American Contemporary Music and Journalism" paid a sincere tribute to the genius of newspaper men and women, and gave the highest praise to much that is being produced today.

With more thn 100 persons registered for training, it is announced that the opera school, conducted by S. M. Pasquale, will probably open some time this week. When the applicants gather for the first time in Choral Hall, Auditorium Building, Senor Pasquale believes he will have more than 150 to begin work with. To correct a misunderstanding on the part of some, Senor Pasquale has issued a statement that it is not the purpose of the school to give private singing lessons, but that it will offer ensemble work—a general training in opera. Out of the school, it is stated, the organization of a popular-priced company to present opera will be effected.

A LOVELY ANNIVERSARY.

Dainty Fine Arts Star Celebrates Beginning of Her Second Year as Film Actress by Starting Work in New Film Production.

Bessie Love celebrated her first anniversary as a film actress when she began rehearsals for her new vehicle, "The Heiress at Coffee Dan's," in which she will make her next appearance as a Triangle-Fine Arts star.

Bessie's first feature part was that of a Swedish servant girl in "The Flying Torpedo," with John Emerson. Previous to that she was an unknown "extra," working after school hours for pocket money. One day while Director Emerson was looking for "types," at the Fine Arts Studio, prior to the filming of "The Flying Torpedo," he was struck by the bright appearance of a little girl waiting among the crowd of supernumeraries.

Calling her over, Emerson proceeded to engage her for the part of the Swedish girl in the story. She made a tremendous hit in the part. She proved herself a new screen personality.

In rapid succession she was featured with W. S. Hart in "The Aryan," with Douglas Fairbanks in "The Good Bad-Man," and with Wilfred Lucas in "Hell-to-Pay Austin." Last month she registered a decided success when making her debut in stardom as "A Sister of Six."

OVER THE SEA.

Charles Francis Joseph, new ruler of Austria-Hungary, will be proclaimed "Kaiser und Koenig Karl the First."

Admiral Coundouriotis, commander-in-chief of the Greek fleet, who recently went over to the Venizelos faction, has been devoted to service, not to politics, and his name has the glamour and carries the weight of that of a naval hero in Great Britain, or that of a Dewey after the battle of Manila with the American public. For Coundouriotis with the Greek navy played a most distinguished part in the war with Turkey, and he remains one of the popular heroes today. At the earnest request of the King, he was made Minister of Marine in the Skouloudis Cabinet, but took little part in its councils and professed open contempt for its policy.

Gen. Alexieff, the Czar's Chief of Staff, is a hard worker. He rises about 7 a.m., breakfasts American fashion and goes at once to his office in the staff headquarters building, next door to the Emperor's quarters. He remains at his desk until the Czar arrives around 10 a.m., when he makes his report, gets his instructions and sends his dispatches. By this time it is lunch hour. After lunch more office work. At 6 p.m. there may, or may not, be a military council of himself and visiting generals from the various sectors of the firing line. But at 7:30 he has his dinner, again at the mess. After dinner he continues to work out the details of maneuvering an army in the field. He gets to bed late and manages with about seven hours' sleep. The general's hair is white around the temples, sparse on top of his head, and gray. He is a typical Russian type, nose somewhat turned up, gray eyes and steely in their glitter. He wears silver spectacles which loop over the ears. His white mustaches are rather long and outstanding, with a tendency to turn up at the ends. On the tunic of his khaki uniform he wears only two decorations, one being the white cross of St. George, awarded for conspicuous bravery in action, the other the red cross of Vladimir.

The Rt. Hon. Earl Cromer, O. M., is one of the most distinguished of British public servants, and, if he had not come to the front as an administrator of Egypt, would have achieved distinction in some other field. Frequently spoken of as the maker of modern Egypt, where he proved himself a great administrator and diplomatist, he originally chose the army as his career, and was educated with that end in view, so that he did not have the public school and university education which is sometimes considered a sine qua non for such work as he eventually took up. Entering the Royal Artillery at 17, he became a captain in 1870, and a major in 1876. His opportunity came in 1877, when he was appointed Commissioner Egyptian Public Debt, which he held till 1879. The Controller-Generalship of Egypt occupied him during 1879, and in 1880 he was back in India as financial member of the Council of the Governor-General. From 1883 to 1907 he was agent and Consul-General in Egypt. After the conquest of the Soudan, Lord Kitchener described Sir Evelyn Baring as "the master of us all," a great tribute, considering the source from which it came. Lord Cromer's work in Egypt was duly recognized with a baronetcy in 1892, a viscounty in 1898, and an earldom in 1901, in addition to many other honors. He was made a member of the Order of Merit in 1906, and was awarded a parliamentary grant of £50,000 on retiring in 1907, the vote passing the House of Lords unanimously and the House of Commons by 254 votes to 107.

L. S. Black and S. L. White went to the Houlton (Me.) fair together, and on the ground they were joined by J. A. Browne and Benjamin Green.

THE RELIGIOUS RAMBLER.

Horrors of War Do Not Daunt American Pioneers of Gospel—Ve erans Return to Their Devastated Fields in Eastern Theater Strife—How One Woman Got Through—Fresh Horrors Armenian Massacres Reported From Asiatic Turkey.

AMERICAN missionaries are not "quitters." Not only have most of those in the Asiatic war zone remained at their places, but, when driven out by the fortunes of battle, they return as soon as possible.

Most of the American missi in Asia Minor belong to the Ame board, which now announces following the advent of the Ru armies, its work in the devast regions is being resumed. It will recalled that after the terrible of Van, during which thousan natives found shelter under American flag, the entire Ame property was razed to the gr and two American missionaries, Raynolds and Mrs. Ussher peri of disease.

Now the aged Dr. Raynolds h turned to the field, traveling by of Scandinavia and Russia. Yarrow has been there for months, distributing Armenian Dr. Clarence D. Ussher expect go back in the spring, though now laid up in the Presbyterian pital, New York, with several b bones.

Mr. and Mrs. Stapleton were only Americans in Erzerum, its siege by the Russians. Aft six months' furlough, Rev. Stapleton is returning to tak work for the Turks, the Arme population having been practi exterminated. Five of the sta of the American board in Turkey now under the Russian flag.

BACK TO FIRST PRINCIPL

The general report from the sionaries is that at least 80 per of the peasant Turks are frie and deeply regret the Arme atrocities, which are entirely by der of the government. The be of this fact upon the future of board's work in Turkey is highly nificant. If the war should in the board's taking up work f Moslems, from whom it has shut out all these years, it will return to the original purpose missionaries when they went Turkey in 1819. The doors of portunity are now swinging in direction. Mr. Stapleton will in at once upon the study of R and Turkish, his former lang having been Armenian. His cipal work for a time will be ministering relief.

Nobody can foretell the ulti effects of the war upon religious ditions in Turkey. Certainly the American board has paid a ter price, in loss of property and the death of a dozen workers.

The case of Monastir, Serbia, cently fallen, is illustrative of sort of experiences the board re sentatives are having in Tur Within the last five years the ow ship of Monastir has changed sev times; from that of Turkey to garia; from Bulgaria to Serbia; Serbia back to Bulgaria and he lies and now the Entente allie in possession. In all prev changes, as probably in this one, work of the Americans has steadily on. The schools have closed; sick and wounded of w ever nationality have been cared the missionaries have gone in out among the people of all cl and the houses of the Ameri have been centers of friendliness helpfulness.

A WOMAN'S ADVENTURE

Until last summer another A ican, Miss Elpha Davis of Iowa, also in Monastir, connected with girls' school. It seemed bes Miss Davis to come to the U States. Her difficulties in out of the country were man She had to have an emergency port, a document so seldom that the United States official examined and cancelled it in York said he had never seen one fore. Whenever she crossed a tier, she had to deposit not only photograph, but also her print; before she could leave a or country she had to show a stating that she had had perm to live in it. At one stage of ceedings her birth certificate wa manded, and after that had secured from Washington, the said pleasantly, "Oh, yes, but I see your original paper."

That was going back rather but after some discussion Miss D found that he wanted to see nat ization papers. "But," she sai never had any. I was born in A ica and so were my father and er, and my grandfather and mother, way back more tha years. I'm an American."

The official looked her and doubtfully in the eye. At he said severely, "I have never or known of such a case before!"

A HORROR FROM ARME

Despite all the horrible atr stories that have come out of menia, the worst single story mains to be told. It has not yet peared anywhere in print. Th the first telling of the tale, and I obliged to surround it with exp tions and conditions, simply be the thing is so incredible.

A few weeks ago there ca this country, through trustw American channels, the story 300,000 Armenians, who had be ported to the Arabian desert concentrated at Dier er Zor, a on the Euphrates, had been v ly slain in a wholesale ma The news was so staggering that men familiar with Turkey who ceived it simply refused to make public. There must be some mista they reasoned, and the figures those giving the total of who had perished by means" at Dier er Zor since ginning of the deportation. are not sufficient Turks at this to perform the Herculean task of killing 300,000 person though these be mostly women and children. To cut 30 throats would task the resour ness of the Chicago stock with all their machinery; and to bullets into vital spots in 30 bodies would be work for an "It simply can't be true," the of Armenia reassured one anoth

Now later word has come, parently with consular confir reiterating the first report. In madness of fury, the Turkish ernment has put to a violent en masse, the immense conce tion of Armenians off in Dier Whether the actual figures are 000 or 200,000 or 100,000 mat tle, so far as civilization's hension of the tragedy goes.

Most of the American missionaries in Asia Minor belong to the American board, which now announces that, following the advent of the Russian armies, its work in the devastated regions is being resumed. It will be recalled that after the terrible siege of Van, during which thousands of natives found shelter under the American flag, the entire American property was razed to the ground, and two American missionaries, Mrs. Raynolds and Mrs. Ussher perished of disease.

Now the aged Dr. Raynolds has returned to the field, traveling by way of Scandinavia and Russia. Mr. Yarrow has been there for many months, distributing Armenian relief. Dr. Clarence D. Ussher expects to go back in the spring, though he is now laid up in the Presbyterian Hospital, New York, with several broken bones.

Mr. and Mrs. Stapleton were the only Americans in Erzerum, during its siege by the Russians. After a six months' furlough, Rev. Robert Stapleton is returning to take up work for the Turks, the Armenian population having been practically exterminated. Five of the stations of the American board in Turkey are now under the Russian flag.

BACK TO FIRST PRINCIPLES.

The general report from the missionaries is that at least 80 per cent of the peasant Turks are friendly, and deeply regret the Armenian atrocities, which are entirely by order of the government. The bearing of this fact upon the future of the board's work in Turkey is highly significant. If the war should result in the board's taking up work for the Moslems, from whom it has been shut out all these years, it will be a return to the original purpose of the missionaries when they went out to Turkey in 1819. The doors of opportunity are now swinging in that direction. Mr. Stapleton will start in at once upon the study of Russian and Turkish, his former language having been Armenian. His principal work for a time will be administering relief.

Nobody can foretell the ultimate effects of the war upon religious conditions in Turkey. Certainly the old American board has paid a terrific price, in loss of property and in the death of a dozen workers.

The case of Monastir, Serbia, recently fallen, is illustrative of the sort of experiences the board representatives are having in Turkey. Within the last five years the ownership of Monastir has changed several times; from that of Turkey to Bulgaria; from Bulgaria to Serbia; from Serbia back to Bulgaria and her allies and now the Entente allies are in possession. In all previous changes, as probably in this one, the work of the Americans has gone steadily on. The schools have not closed; sick and wounded of whatever nationality have been cared for; the missionaries have gone in and out among the people of all classes, and the houses of the Americans have been centers of friendliness and helpfulness.

A WOMAN'S ADVENTURES.

Until last summer another American, Miss Elpha Davis of Iowa, was also in Monastir, connected with the girls' school. It seemed best for Miss Davis to come to the United States. Her difficulties in getting out of the country were manifold. She had to have an emergency passport, a document so seldom issued that the United States official who examined and cancelled it in New York said he had never seen one before. Whenever she crossed a frontier, she had to deposit not only her photograph, but also her thumb print; before she could leave a city or country she had to show a paper stating that she had had permission to live in it. At one stage of proceedings her birth certificate was demanded, and after that had been secured from Washington, the official said pleasantly, "Oh, yes, but I must see your original paper."

That was going back rather far, but after some discussion Miss Davis found that he wanted to see naturalization papers. "But," she said, "I never had any. I was born in America and so were my father and mother, and my grandfather and grandmother, way back more than 300 years. I'm an American."

The official looked her steadily and doubtfully in the eye. At length he said severely, "I have never seen or known of such a case before!"

A HORROR FROM ARMENIA.

Despite all the horrible atrocity stories that have come out of Armenia, the worst single story remains to be told. It has not yet appeared anywhere in print. This is the first telling of the tale, and I am obliged to surround it with explanations and conditions, simply because the thing is so incredible.

A few weeks ago there came to this country, through trustworthy American channels, the story that 300,000 Armenians, who had been deported to the Arabian desert and concentrated at Dier er Zor, a town on the Euphrates, had been violently slain in a wholesale massacre. The news was so staggering that the men familiar with Turkey who received it simply refused to make it public. There must be some mistake, they reasoned, and the figures are those giving the total of emigres who had perished by "natural means" at Dier er Zor since the beginning of the deportation. There are not sufficient Turks at this point to perform the Herculean physical task of killing 300,000 persons, even though these be mostly emaciated women and children. To cut 300,000 throats would task the resourcefulness of the Chicago stock yards, with all their machinery; and to put bullets into vital spots in 300,000 bodies would be work for an army. "It simply can't be true," the friends of Armenia reassured one another.

Now later word has come, apparently with consular confirmation, reiterating the first report. In some madness of fury, the Turkish government has put to a violent death, en masse, the immense concentration of Armenians off in Dier er Zor. Whether the actual figures are 300,000 or 200,000 or 100,000 matters little, so far as civilization's comprehension of the tragedy goes.

Even such a spectacular, Neronic holocaust of horror will not penetrate the war-calloused consciousness of most Americans.

O. D. Bleakley of Franklin, Pa., Congressman-elect, journeyed to Washington in an aeroplane last week. Bleakley was merely a passenger, Sergt. William C. Ocker, United States Army aviator, operating the aeroplane. The airship is owned by Bleakley, however, and it is said he may use it in going to and returning from Washington.

'A group of buds around whom holiday festivities will center.

Miss Eleanor Workman, one of our most popular debutantes, who is coming in for innumerable courtesies that are making her first season a tremendous success. Miss Mildred Wellborn, who will not be presented before next winter, though the charming young girl, now enrolled for special study at the U.S.C., is to figure prominently in the coming affairs planned for the debutante and college set. Miss Cecile McLaughlin is expected home from New York, where she attends a fashionable school for girls, in time to participate in a deluge of delightful gayeties.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1. Evelyn dear: What a sumptuous time you must have had on that long and gay eastern trip! When Molly Adelia Brown goes to New York she is invited to the Friday Morning Club to tell us all about it. What could you not tell us, cherie? From all accounts it must have been one long array of social eclat. Fancy our little Evelyn, the quiet little flapper of such very recent memory, patronized so deliciously by elder sister Mary, budding forth as a guest of honor in numerous cities!

You will make an adorable maid of honor at Margaret's wedding on January 2. It is a good thing Margaret can stand competition, isn't it? We are looking forward to the advent of the bridegroom's relatives, who have all the earmarks of popular interest. I expect that wedding is going to be a charming affair, and everybody loves Margaret. She is one of the few girls who manage to keep adamantly feminine in spite of a very intellectual little head. I can remember when she used to get up at 5 a.m. to study in the fond belief that destiny required her to be something careerish. Remember how her matrimonial inclinations veered towards "diplomat"? But maybe Austin [illegible] will be an ambassador to Europe yet.

The inviolable secrecy about the bridesmaids' dresses is exciting. The frocks are so piquant now that it will be easy to make you all look like beauties, notwithstanding a certain journalist person is asserting that American girls are not beautiful, rarely even pretty, and mostly vapid. What a jaundiced eye the poor thing has to be sure! I hear Charlie Adams was responsible for a gay little tea party at the Alexandria on Tuesday. Those little-talky tea parties are so jolly, aren't they? Nice boy, Charlie. His company was so well chosen, too, all nice boys, including Frank and [illegible] Bering, Willoughby Rodman, young Harris and himself.

The Forve dancing party at the California Club on the 26th, the [illegible] party at the Country Club on December 27, and the Dockweiler party at the California Club next week, are but a few of the joyous affairs arranged for the debutantes and college folk; oh, yes, and Dorothy Lindley's party on the 6th, too—aren't we in for a social whirl? Your own dancing party for Margaret and her fiance's sister, Judith [illegible], on the 29th, is going to have a hard job co-opting the date.

Being president of a woman's club is no sinecure. Mrs. Rollin B. Lane, for instance, was elected president of the big Hollywood club while you were away, at which time there were serious doubts as to whether she was old enough, dressed sedately enough, and was profound and dignified enough, for the onerous position. But it seems she is, and she has won over all the doubters. She always dresses in white, you know; they call her the "white president." But, oh, my dear, there is ample scope for variety in pure unsullied white; you never saw such a piquant collection of charming frocks, mostly in fine silks and georgettes. And white hats to arouse covetousness and envy. She has a delightful home at Hollywood, a room in pale pink and white, mostly Louis Quinzy, with gilt furniture and a carpet it is a crime to walk on, pink silk curtains that would make a stunning negligee for some languishing beauty, and vases with proud single blooms in them occupying the exclusive center of the ormulu tables. It is a room one should never intrude in in anything more substantial than chiffon or tulle. It would make a lovely scene in an Ordinski play.

Mrs. Johnson, president of the Wednesday Morning Club, also suffered from serious doubts as to her ability to be sternly dignified. She is recklessly wittty and humorous, you know, and cannot resist a good joke. She tells the best ones on herself, and it speaks well for women's sense of humor that she becomes more popular every day. One she tells of how she purchased a new hat and had her old one put in a bag to take home. They packed somebody else's hat in the bag and it rained in fury the next day. She wasnt going to spoil her new hat, so wore the other client's old one, and was disconcerted to hear it praised on all sides as the most becoming and suitable hat she had ever appeared Thanksgiving Day is a stern feat of endurance to our reducing brigade. It is so funny to hear all the plump ladies bemoaning their misery. Thanksgiving dinners there must be, tradition demands it, but on the other hand, reduction diets are meager and lack glamor. So many a tortured mamma sat at the head of her generous board practicing cruel self-denial. Their chief thanksgiving was for their ability to resist temptation and consider their figures first. Some wicked French specialist once pronounced that standing up half an hour after every meal was a good way to preserve the figure. My dear, it is pathetic to see many of our mondaines nonchalantly disregarding chairs, scanning the pictures on the walls with fearful interest, flitting round the room inspecting the knick-knacks—it is probable that this decree has done more to encourage interest in objects d'art than anything else could have done.

Mrs. Raymond of the Bryson has an interesting baroness in tow. She is to entertain for her on Monday, and while titles may have lost some of their glamor in late years, a baroness is a baroness for all that. There won't be many defaults on the invitations.

The Brentwood Country Club had a grand opening day last Saturday, beginning with a stylish tea in the afternoon and concluding with a dinner dance. They have a jolly set out there. Mrs. Lewis R. Works, who is also the president of the Woman's City Club, looks ripping in riding attire, but her platform should leave no loophole for an accusation regarding lack of seriousness. May Sutton Bundy, who positively grows better looking as her maternal responsibilities increase, and who is appearing in a highly becoming salmon pink confection these days, certainly does her champion husband infinite credit. She and Mr. Bundy were hosts at one of the jolliest dinner parties at that grand opening.

The reorganized Annandale Country Club is going to be one of the smartest we have. The new president, W. J. Macdonald, is a Chicago man, and he has secured the patronal influence and support of no less than twenty-one millionaries, including the director of that frightfully important bank that has just made a big loan to China. Henry Huntington is also a special member, so is Robert Hunter of national golf fame, and A. H. [illegible], who is declared to be the richest man in wealthy Pasadena. And, cherie, they intend according special consideration to the ladies. You should hear that dear Mr. Macdonald insisting upon our charms and good sportsmanship, and the wicked absurdity of discriminating against women golfers. "Macdonald on Women" is one of the most encouraging discourses I have harkened to for some time.

Our attractive bachelor friend, Arden Day, is to become a benedict on December 27. Ruth Powell has annexed his affections against a field of competitors. Thank goodness, a new bachelor is born every minute—oh, wouldn't society be dismal without any nice bachelors? I see a cynical female writer has declared that, in the "game of love," whenever a man "wins" a woman, he has lost; whenever he has "lost" her she has won. Now if some passe old bachelor had said that we might excuse him, but woman's inhumanity to woman makes countless thousands mourn. Anyway, I consider our friend Arden has distinctly won—you ought to hear all the nice things people say about Ruth.

Heard about Queen Mary's wig? They say she has two gray hairs knitted into it every year. That is what I call art for art's sake, don't you?

Love from BETTY.

Yuletide Next.

With Thanksgiving gone, the usual Christmas frenzy of shopping is consuming the hours—twenty-four are none too many when one must somehow cover the gay, joyous whirl of a winter season in addition to early-morning visits to the alluring shops.

Thanksgiving, no different this year than in former times, savored of well-flavored viands, the first sight of holly berry, the usual stimulating football games and no end of dinners. All the town and country clubs opened their doors for turkey shoots, teas and dinner dances. But it was in the homes that most of the festivities were enjoyed, for Thanksgiving is essentially a day of family feasts which seems to bind one's kinsfolk together more strongly than any other day in all the year, and if not kinsfolk, then one's best friends, to share in the informality and merriment such an occasion inspires.

In the Richard Bishop party at a home dinner Thursday, were Mr. and Mrs. William T. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. King, Miss Bessie Hill, Mr. and Mrs. William Howard Thomas, Mrs. Levy, Virginia Bishop and John Bell Bishop, while Mr. and Mrs. Burton E. Green entertained a family group, including Richard Green, Luther Green and Effie and Robert, Calvin Green and Miss Ida Allen of Minneapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Avery-McCarthy were among those who enjoyed the day at Midwick, together with their houseguest, Miss Natilie Campbell. They were in the party entertained by Mrs. A. J. Howard, who also had Mr. and Mrs. Volney E. Howard and small son. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Mellus and Miss Katherine Mellus were also there, as were members of the Charles C. Carpenter family, including Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Carpenter and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh K. Walker, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. William May Garland went to their pretty country home at Crags Country Club for the holiday—a rendezvous that held attractions for many of the fashionables. Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonald Taylor were at the club and had with them Mrs. A. C. Hardenbergh and Donald McGilvray, while Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Flint and their family, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Cheney, Mr. and Mrs. Allan C. Balch, and all the mighty atoms were there to revel in a genuine old-fashioned observance.

Mrs. Horace B. Wing of Elden avenue and Elbert Wing, Jr., are rejoicing in the return of Mrs. Wing's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Healey, from their Wyoming ranch, and theirs was a delightful en famille affair. Mrs. Healey was formerly Margaret Wing, and her many friends are during the coming months to enjoy in turn numerous welcoming courtesies to be extended by her mother, the first of which will take the form of a dancing party just before the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Albee were at the Virginia, in Long Beach, over Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. George McDonald Wallace chose Thanksgiving—an undeniably true expression of their happiness—for the christening at St. John's Church of their fine young son, George Sartori Wallace, now six months of age, those in attendance including the beaming grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Francis Sartori, and members of the family, and the godparents of the babe, James Calhoun Drake, Michael J. Connell and Mrs. Kate Vosburg, who are to stand sponsors.

Later the Sartori family dined.

Mr. and Mrs. George Dickinson entertained at their Andrews-boulevard home, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Boal of San Diego, Herbert Boal, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dickinson, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Tufts and Mrs. A. H. Wood, while at the B. S. Phelps home on Hollywood boulevard were twenty-three guests—Miss Laura Phelps, Byron, Jr., and Fred Phelps, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Forbes and family of Redondo, Mrs. Sarah E. Forbes of Redondo, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Brown, Mrs. Julian Phelps and son J. A. Stafford, Miss Hunt and Mr. and Mrs. Phelps.

At their home, No. 351 Hobart boulevard, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Newell dispensed hospitality to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas N. Newell, Mrs. Mary Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Baum, yellow and brown chrysanthemums adorning the board.

A hundred of their young friends made merry at a Thanksgiving dancing party which Miss Anabel Ralphs and her brother, Albert George Ralphs, assisted by their mother, Mrs. George A. Ralphs, gave at their Hollywood-boulevard home Thursday night. Holly branches, poinsettias and greenery were used decoratively.

More Debutantes.

Among the auspicious social happenings on milady's calendar for the coming week is the tea which Mrs. Isidore Bernard Dockweiler of West Adams street is to give at the California Club Saturday afternoon, between the hours of 4 and 7 o'clock, to introduce her two young daughters, Miss Dockweiler and Miss Rosario Dockweiler, to more than 1000 friends.

Miss Eleanor MacGowan, Misses Gertrude and Marion Kerckhoff, Miss Eleanor Workman and Miss Marion Wigmore—all buds of this season—are to assist in welcoming the newest acquisitions to their ranks and in turn, to receive their share of the homage of full-fledged society folk. Among others who are to greet the Misses Dockweiler are:

Miss Eleanor Banning, Miss Helen Duque, Miss Louise Hunt, Miss Helen Jones, Miss Rosemary Sartori, Miss Dorothy Lindley, Miss Gertrude Grant, Miss Katherine Stearns, Miss Beatrice Finlayson, Miss Margaret Johnson, Miss Mary Forve, Miss Viola Vanderleck, Miss Chonita Vanderleck, Miss Marie Rose Mullen, Mrs. Sayre Macneil (Daphne Drake,) Mrs. Marcus Marshall (Delight Shaffer,) Mrs. Thomas Weeks Banks (Martha Woolwine,) and Mrs. Edwin Lockesley Stanton, Mrs. Hancock Banning, Mrs. Walter Jarvis Barlow, Mrs. Lucien N. Brunswig, Mrs. Ernest A. Bryant, Mrs. Michael J. Connell, Mrs. Joseph E. Cook, Mrs. James Calhoun Drake, Mrs. George J. Denis, Mrs. William E. Dunn, Mrs. William May Garland, Mrs. Lewis A. Grant, Mrs. Frank S. Hicks, Mrs. G. Allan Hancock, Mrs. Mary Wilcox Longstreet, Mrs. Walter R. Leeds, Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, Mrs. Dean Mason, Mrs. John G. Mott, Mrs. Daniel Murphy, Mrs. John G. Mossin, Mrs. Granville MacGowan, Mrs. Eugene O. McLaughlin, Mrs. Henry W. O'Melveny, Mrs. Joseph Francis Sartori, Mrs. Louis C. Scheller, Mrs. I. N. Van Nuys and Mrs. Kate S. Vosburg.

It was thought that with the formal presentation of the Misses Dockweiler, the list of buds to make their official bows this winter would be complete, but it is not so. Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Emory of Pasadena have decided to introduce their daughter, Katharine, who is an intimate school friend of the Misses Gertrude and Marion Kerckhoff, and are soon to issue invitations for her coming-out tea.

It is, in fact, for these three young ladies that Mrs. James H. Adams, assisted by Mrs. Morgan O. Adams, will entertain the evening of the 20th inst., at the Los Angeles Country Club dinner dance—this particular party being almost wholly for the younger set.

Young people returning from school and college will be completely engrossed with social happenings from the moment of their arrival in town until the very end of their holiday vacation, sharing in many of the debutante parties.

Miss Dorothy Lindley's dance for the girls now launched socially, like the first flowers of spring, is to be an event of Wednesday night at the Los Angeles Country Club—the fortnightly dinner-dance, which is to be given under the direct supervision of Mrs. Frank Griffith, Mrs. Walter Leeds and Miss Louise G. Burke.

The Misses Kerckhoff are also to furnish the inspiration for Miss Eshman's luncheon at the California Club, Friday, and will be honorees at the Henry W. O'Melveny dinner dance on the 18th.

Then the dancing party which Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Weeks Banks are to give the evening of the 22nd inst., the Forve dancing party for the large party to be given to about 700 guests at the Los Angeles Country Club the evening of the 27th for the debutante set; the Guasti party for the 28th, and a score of other affairs now more or less embryonic, but which are to be given for either the buds or college set, will keep the social pendulum swinging steadily until the first of the year.

Montanans Wed.

Louis F. Lorenz and Miss Helen M. Copenharve surprised their friends of Butte, Mont., and defeated many plans for pre-nuptial entertainments for the bride-elect, by taking advantage of their presence in Southern California to be married at San Diego Thanksgiving Day. They came back to Los Angeles Friday and will return to Butte before Christmas.

Mr. Lorenz is assistant city attorney of Butte and his bride is the daughter and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Copenharve. Mr. Copenharve is a newspaper man in that city.

The bride, who is prominent in musical circles, came to California about a month ago on a pleasure tour with her parents and the party was joined in Los Angeles by Mr. Lorenz, the day before the wedding. They motored to San Diego, where the marriage ceremony was performed at noon Thursday in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, with Rev. Charles L. Barnes, officiant. A pleasant supplement to the nuptials was the reading of a message and blessing from A. K. Mozumdar, a Hindoo author and teacher, founder of a new religious society and a new system of philosophy.

After the wedding ceremony the party breakfasted at the U. S. Grant Hotel, and later in the day united a wedding and Thanksgiving dinner at the Stratford Inn, Del Mar, before returning to this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Copenharve will leave for Butte Monday.

Club Members Enjoy Skit.

—Among the week's social affairs at the Los Angeles Athletic Club was a luncheon given there Wednesday by the Misses Anna Louise and Catherine Albright in honor of Miss Mildred Strong, a bride-to-be. The luncheon, in the ladies' annex, was followed by a matinee party to the Orpheum. Present with the Misses Albright were Mrs. Pearl Strong, Mrs. Gwendolyn Mulholland, Mrs. Edward Shelton Dulin, Mrs. Lawrence Todd Baker, Mrs. George Pelton, Mrs. Harrison Albright, Miss Mildred Strong, Miss Edna Miles, Miss Helen Fenner, Miss Ana May Price, Miss Dorothy Arzner, Miss Mildred Dawson, Miss Vernita McCollough, Miss Louiez Johnson, Miss Grace Wilson and Miss Dorothy Heron.

The week proved especially active for the club entertainers, prominence being given to several unusually large and brilliant affairs. Tuesday evening the Uplifters, an organization of merry-makers inside the club, entertained with their annual ladies' night dinner, 250 members and guests being present. In connection with the affair were given a clever black-face comedy skit, written for the occasion by L. Frank Baum, and presented by a cast of club members, a minstrel show and a programme of music and songs.

Entertaining with an elaborate dinner the same evening was Seymour Swartz, whose guests numbered 130. The list of entertainers Thanksgiving evening included J. H. Lashbrook, who was a dinner host to eight friends; Frank Ryan, whose party included six, and Mrs. Joseph Merrill, who entertained for eight. Garretson Dulin was a dinner host Wednesday evening in compliment to five friends. Dr. Albert Soiland entertained with a luncheon Monday in the Sheritan room; Mrs. R. E. Lyons gave a luncheon Tuesday, and yesterday Mrs. Paul Shoup complimented seven guests with a luncheon in the ladies' annex.

Large Dancing Party.

Chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Mead and Mrs. F. G. McCoy, Miss Ruby Lucile Mead and Miss Irene Louise McCoy entertained 100 high school pupils at an enjoyable dancing party Wednesday evening at the Huntley apartments.

The lobby and assembly-room had been converted into forest loveliness with the sagey green of mistletoe and holly. Strains of soft music came from a hidden orchestra. Punch was served throughout the evening.

Friday evening the formal opening ball of the Huntley was given, and at that time Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Mead included forty of their friends to the affair, serving supper in their apartments following the dance.

Mrs. Mead, with a committee of women, has been instrumental in dressing 3500 dolls for the Shriners, who anticipate making many a poor little child happy this year. Included in the committee were: Mrs. C. H. Barnes, Mrs. Allison Barlow, Mrs. E. J. Boyle, Mrs. R. B. Bowles, Mrs. F. A. Bowles, Mrs. George Brock, Mrs. Frank Bryson, Mrs. W. E. Bush, Mrs. James Coleman, Mrs. C. C. Collier, Mrs. Harry Chamberlain, Mrs. A. H. Cheney, Mrs. C. J. Cresmer, Mrs. Mayme Goodrich, Mrs. Herman Hauser, Mrs. R. A. Haffner, Mrs. Charles Logan, Mrs. M. L. McCray, Mrs. J. F. Mullin, Mrs. Frank Munsey, Mrs. Frank Parker, Mrs. H. Montague Porter, Mrs. C. W. Pierce, Mrs. Fred Pierce, Mrs. William R. Ruess, Mrs. Elmer Riggle, Mrs. William Snyder, Mrs. Mae Spaulding, Mrs. Fred Stone, Mrs. A. T. Power, Mrs. Burt Roberts, Mrs. Perry Whiting, Mrs. Robert Wankowski, Mrs. Harry Ward and Mrs. W. P. Jefferies.

Church Wedding.

In West Adams Presbyterian Church Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock will be solemnized the marriage of Miss Marion Moore, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. William Edward Moore of South Figueroa street, and Edgar Kapp Brown, young attorney of the city and son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Brown of Abbot place.

The bride-elect will be attended by Miss Delta Kapp, with little Marjorie Tribbit flower girl, while Howard Guinn will stand with the groom. Messrs. William B. Paris, Ford Prior, Grant Kuhns and Everett Ball are to usher, and Mr. Moore will give his daughter in marriage. Following the service, supper will be served at the home of the bride's parents.

Home from Berkeley.

Miss Bernice Karr, student at the University of California, is here from Berkeley to spend the Thanksgiving holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Karr, of Westmoreland place.

Coming Festivity.

With Mrs. James P. Burns, Mrs. Robert H. Edwards, Mrs. Simpson Wilson, Mrs. W. G. Hutchison and Mrs. Sumner Brown assuming the duties of hostesses, a congenial crowd will dine and dance at the Los Angeles Country Club Tuesday evening—one of a series of like features that are bringing the club members much pleasure this winter.

Soon to be at Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Mauck, formerly of No. 1716 West Adams street, are taking possession of their new home at No. 1738 West Forty-first drive, where they will be at home after the 7th inst.

Out of the City.

With the intention of spending Thanksgiving and the week-end, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest D. Snow have gone to Beaumont to visit Mrs. Snow's sister, Mrs. Albert Brower.

Wilcox-Richmond.

Mrs. H. J. Wilcox of No. 2108 Crenshaw boulevard announces the marriage of her daughter, Mary Retta, to William Tilton Richmond, an event solemnized Friday morning in St. Agnes Church, the service having been read by Father O'Toole in the presence of the immediate family. After a wedding breakfast the young couple left on a motor trip through Southern California before departing for Albia, Iowa, their future home, where the groom is a member of the law firm of Richmond & Richmond.

Newcomers.

The Misses Lois and Jean English, with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. English, have come to Los Angeles from their Oceanside home and have taken the home of Congressman Benedict at No. 1739 South Kingsley drive for the winter. The family has frequently visited in this city and the young ladies attended school here, so they are being extended a warm welcome by many friends.

Moving to the State.

Mrs. M. Clarence Mattinson, who is better known here as Miss Ruth Anderson, is to return today from Chicago, where she has made her home since her marriage several years ago. With Mrs. Mattinson is her baby girl, now almost a year old.

Mrs. Mattinson will spend the winter with her mother, Mrs. M. J. Anderson, at the Beverly Hills Hotel, and she will after that make her home in California, for Mr. Mattinson has recently purchased the controlling interest in a bank at Porterville and will soon establish himself there, to be joined later by his family. Mr. Mattinson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Mattinson of Gibson City, Ill., have been at Beverly Hills for some months and are planning to remain throughout the winter.

Returns to Native State.

Richard Brockway of St. Louis and a native son of Los Angeles is making his first visit in the State since leaving here thirty years ago, and is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Winfred C. Deister, No. 1715 New England avenue. A Thanksgiving dinner was given by them Thursday, other guests being Mrs. George P. Bullard and Dr. Charles E. Zerfing, who are sister and brother of Mrs. Deister.

Mr. Brockway's family home was at old Hangtown, Eldorado county, where gold was first discovered. He is astonished by the improvements and growth of the State since early days.

Wed on Thanksgiving.

Miss Helen Hoffman and Ralph Sayles were married Thursday at the home of the officiating clergyman, Rev. J. M. Schaefle, No. 1206 El Molino street. At the conclusion of a wedding trip the bridal couple will reside at No. 5618 Raleigh street, Highland Park.

Back in Town.

Dr. and Mrs. Frank T. Howenstein have come from their home at Venice and taken an apartment at the Kensington, where Mrs. Howenstein will give a series of parties in the near future.

Betrothed.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Cohn of No. 914 West Eighteenth street announce the engagement of their daughter Helen to Lucien Haas. They will be at home to friends Thursday evening between 8 and 10 o'clock.

Here from Washington.

Mrs. Carolyn Baker Hatfield, formerly of Washington, D. C., is in the city and stopping at No. 862 Heliotrope drive. The visitor is the granddaughter of Col. E. D. Baker, who came to California in the early '50s and was known as a brilliant orator. He went to the United States Senate from Oregon, but resigned his seat and answered his country's call to arms, and was killed at the massacre of Ball's Bluff, or the "Folorn Hope" as it was better known, when he was colonel of the First California Regiment. Mrs. Hatfield is also a descendent of Admiral Dickinson, who commanded a fleet at Trafalgar. She contemplates making her home in Los Angeles.

In Yuletide Motif.

Choosing for her decorations many pretty suggestions of the Christmas tide, Miss Florence Danforth presided Friday over a bridge luncheon of sixteen covers at the Sierra Madre Club, places being marked for Mmes. George McFarland, E. Sherwood, Frank B. Ranger, Walter Overall, Earl Rogers, Frederick A. Jungquist, Charles Brown, H. Van Dusen, M. Finehout and E. Jungquist, and the Misses Willie McClelland, Juanita Lane, Siegmund, Cora Boettcher and Gertrude Brands and the hostess.

Enjoyed.

Quite sans ceremonie was the little tea Mrs. Walter M. Brunswig gave to a limited number of intimates Friday afternoon at her home.

For Five Buds.

The Misses Gertrude and Marion Kerckhoff, Miss Eleanor MacGowan, Miss Marion Wigmore and Miss Eleanor Workman constitute a bevy of honorees who on Tuesday are to receive a debutante courtesy when Miss Beatrice Finlayson entertains at a luncheon of eighteen covers at the Alexandria, followed by a theater party at the Orpheum.

Amateur Players.

With Mrs. James Adams of St.

SOCIETY.

James Park hostess, the Amateur Players will hold one of their literary afternoons on Tuesday, when Mrs. Horace B. Wing will read Galsworthy's "The Little Man," Mrs. J. Wells Smith will interpret Walter Stevens's "Three Men Watch the Sunrise," the prize one-act drama which has come in for much unfavorable discussion, and Mrs. Eugene Pettigrew will read "The Modern Prodigal," by Horace Holley. Ruth Comfort Mitchell Young had a one-act drama in the contest won by Mr. Stevens. It is called "The Sweetmeat Game" and Angelenos especially are interested in a comparison of the two modern creations.

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY.

Pasadena.

THANKSGIVING was the motif for a large number of interesting social events in which the thankfulness of the heart was expressed through the medium of dancing feet. The larger parties were the dinner and ball at the Maryland, polo tea at the Midwick Country Club, and dinner dances at the Annandale and Altadena country clubs.

The ball at the Maryland was preceded by a number of large and small dinner parties. Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Treadison entertained at one of them, their guests including Mr. and Mrs. Waldo C. Galdwin, Mr. and Mrs. Z. F. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Steinway, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Stovall, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Lindway and Mr. and Mrs. E. Smith. As usual there were a number of dinner parties made up of out-of-town guests. Los Angeles, San Diego, Long Beach, Riverside and Santa Barbara and many of the smaller cities of the Southland contributed to the happy throng. It is quite the popular thing nowadays to have a motor car ride precede the Thanksgiving dinner, and the run to Pasadena from other points gives the proper tone to the appetite. A special feature of the evening's entertainment at the hotel was the exhibition dancing of Miss Violet Romer, daughter of Mrs. Ada Romer, portrait painter who is now engaged in painting three life-size portraits of Mrs. Anita Baldwin.

Among the interesting out-of-town visitors who were entertained at family dinner parties were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dean of Corona and their two young children, who were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Quans of No. 244 South Hudson street. Mrs. Dean, who was Miss Janet Williams, daughter of Col. R. P. Williams, former State Treasurer of Missouri, is a writer of distinctive charm and in the orange belt finds inspiration for pleasing verses. Mrs. Dean was the eldest of several attractive daughters and when her father was in office she was a leader in the social life of the Missouri capital.

By far the liveliest event of the past week was the dance given Friday evening at the Annandale Country Club in honor of the football players who participated in the Pasadena High School-Long Beach High School match of the previous day. More than 200 of the younger set were present and there were visiting parties from Occidental, University of Southern California and other near-by educational institutions. A special guest of the evening was "Tuffy" Conn, former Pasadena High School football hero and now with the Oregon Agricultural team. The arrangements were in charge of J. Lowell McAdam and W. Parker Lyon, Jr. The chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. Parker Lyon, Sr., and Mrs. Mahan, with many other of the elders in attendance.

Thanksgiving morning at 9 o'clock, Ambrose Begley and Miss Agnes Marquard were married at St. Andrews Catholic Church with Rev. Father Paul Datin officiating at solemn high mass. Miss Marie C. Polack was maid of honor and Miss Marian Begley, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. The brother of the bride, Fred Marquard, was best man, with another brother, William Marquard, groomsman, and little Beatrice Hamilton, ringbearer. After the ceremony, witnessed by a number of relatives and friends, breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents on Lincoln avenue, and later the bridal party motored to Los Angeles for Thanksgiving dinner at the home of relatives.

Judge and Mrs. M. S. Bailey of Denver, and the latter's sister, Mrs. Janes, are the house guests of Dr. and Mrs. R. K. Janes of No. 201 North El Molino avenue. Judge Bailey is one of Colorado's most distinguished legal authorities, and recently was re-elected to his third term as a member of the Colorado Supreme Court, having already held this important place for ten years. He and Mrs. Bailey are making their first visit to California. With their hosts they are devoting much time to sightseeing. The visitors are charmed with Southern California and enthusiastic in their appreciation of the many points of beauty noted on automobile tours.

South Pasadena.

PROBABLY the biggest of all Thanksgiving reunion dinners was that given by Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Cass of Fair Oaks avenue and Oak street, honoring the immediate members of their unusualy numerous family. Between thirty and thirty-five sons and aughters and grandsons and daughters, not to mention an uncle and aunt or so gathered around the Cass dinner table on turkey day.

Friday the Beati Hora Club was entertained with a luncheon by Mrs. James E. Pierce and Mrs. Florence Reber. The affair took place at the home of the former.

Mrs. John W. Monahan of Rollins street entertained Thursday with a Kensington tea in honor of Mrs. Mossom G. Ritchie and her mother, Mrs. Palmer of Detroit.

Those present at the large informal dance given Saturday evening by Miss Ruth Salisbury of No. 1610 Marengo avenue were the Misses Dorothy Thompson, Sara Cramer, Mary Doerr, Iyuna Hansen, Rebecca Patterson, Josephine Robbins, Marguerite Perry, Ida Burns, Adelaide Dow, Josephine Supple, Helen Bradbury, Ethel Wall, Orilla Daggett, Lucille Council, Emily Miller, Catherine Patterson; Messrs. Harland Beardslee, Ralph Wood, Lynn Spencer, Robert Hine, William Perry, Lyle Donavan, Charles Dodge, Bruce Spencer, Robert Cravens, Cornelius Supple, Ernest Supple, Ford Tussing, Homer de Witt, Tom Sanson, Earle Davis, Dana Dunton, Hugh Mason, Carleton Clark, Louis Fey, Robert Daggett, Carson Helsing, Paul Kinney and Louis Filley.

Miss Louise Scott of No. 1701 Electric avenue entertained Monday for the Monday Evening Musical Club. A paper on the subject of song writers by Mr. Arthur Babcock, with accompanying selections in interpretations, was a particular feature.

Among South Pasadena Occidental alumnae present Friday noon at a luncheon meeting of the Occidental Women's Club, held at Christopher's, were Mildred Keith, Dora Raab, Lillian Wendling, Elizabeth Gardner and Alva Gardner. Mrs. Myron Hunt of Pasadena gave an account of her experiences in attempting to raise funds for a woman's dormitory at Occidental College.

Next Thursday Mrs. Lionel Redpath of Fletcher avenue will entertain with a large luncheon party.

December 10 Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Gortner of La France avenue will leave for an extended six weeks' tour of the East. They will first attend a family reunion at Goshen, Ind., and then proceed to New York for New Year's. The return trip will be made via New Orleans.

The Oneonta Dancing Club held another of their delightful monthly dinner dances on Friday evening at the Woman's Club House. Mrs. A. L. Shellhorn was in charge of the arrangements for the affair. About forty couple were present.

As the start of an over-Thanksgiving tennis tournament under the auspices of the Live Oaks Tennis Club, Milan and Marengo avenues, a tennis tea was held on the courts Saturday afternoon at 4:30. Mrs. W. E. Cooper and Mrs. Stevens of Bushnell avenue were in chargeof the affair. On Thanksgiving Day the matches were played through to the final round, which will be played off on a future Saturday. Those still surviving are: Men's singles, William Weldon, Doerr and Clarence Barker; mixed doubles, Doerr and Irene Salisbury vs. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Barker. Several matches still remain in the men's doubles.

Saturday evening Catherine and Rebecca Paterson of No. 1707 Oak street entertained with an informal dance for the younger high school and college set.

Santa Barbara.

WITH the coming of cold weather in the East the annual pilgrimage of winter residents to Santa Barbara has begun and many Montecito and Santa Barbara homes, closed for a time during the summer and fall, will be opened again soon. The large hotels are receiving reservations which point to a stay of length here of many eastern society people whose visit will undoubtedly find hearty welcome on the part of Santa Barbarans.

Today, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Bourne of New York are expected in their private car Advance. They will stay at El Mirasol during their visit in Santa Barbara.

Irving T. Snyder is here from Denver, having joined Mrs. Snyder at a cottage they have taken in Montecito.

The Misses Elizabeth and Nancy Park are in San Francisco, where they went to meet Mrs. Ernest Bates and her sister, Miss Helen Akers, who are returning from New Zealand. Mrs. Bates will be at the home of her mother, Mrs. W. H. Akers of Montecito, for a few weeks before leaving for England so that she may be near her husband, who is at the front.

There were many Thanksgiving parties in Santa Barbara, most of them family affairs, in keeping with the sentiment of the day, but one of the larger parties was a "no-host" dinner party at the La Cumbre Club preceding the Thanksgiving dance there. Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. Rexwall Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Park, Mr. and Mrs. Wolff, the Misses Nina Jones, Miriam Vail, Mary Gallaher, Mary McLaughlin, Margaret Waterman, Mary Trowbridge, Pearl Chase, Gladys Keeney, and the Messrs. Harold Chase, Harlow Frink, James Canby, Richards Ilker, Ashby Keeney, Archie Edwards, Prince Hopkins and Stacy Harding.

Mrs. Francis H. Greene entertained at bridge at her home on Upper Santa Barbara street Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Milo M. Potter entertained at dinner at the Potter Hotel Thanksgiving evening.

Mrs. Franklin Price Knott has returned to her Santa Barbara home after a visit in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. Grosvenor Porter Orton have returned from a week's stay in Los Angeles. They are now in their new home in Montecito.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Driver are in San Francisco, where they spent Thanksgiving with their daughter Edwina, who is attending school there.

Dr. and Mrs. David A. Conrad entertained ten guests at their home on Valley road, Montecito, Tuesday evening on the occasion of their sixteenth wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Dabney will leave tomorrow for Lone Pine, near Owens Lake. They will be gone about a week.

Dr. Phillip S. Chancellor and his son Phillip, Jr., were the Thanksgiving guests of Dr. and Mrs. Harold Sidebotham at their ranch, the other side of the mountain.

Mrs. J. J. Egan of Chicago and Miss Dore of Chicago are at San Ysidro for the winter. Mrs. S. McConnell and her two children of New York are there for an indefinite stay.

Ventura.

MRS. W. D. BLAIR entertained at an informal luncheon at her home at the Mound on Wednesday. Quantities of nasturtiums were used for the decorations which were also used as a centerpiece on the prettily appointed table where a delicious menu was served. The guests were Mrs. Joe Argabrite, Mrs. Will Daly, Mrs. Wren Cannon, Mrs. Webb Moore, Mrs. J. F. Tefferteller, Mrs. Guthorie Clarke, Mrs. Russell Walker. Miss Eugenia Blair, the young daughter of the hostess, assisted in entertaining Elisabeth Moore, Shirley Clarke and Master Joseph Argabrite. After the luncheon Mrs. Blair enjoyed with her guests the afternoon in conversation and with needlework.

Mrs. Edgar Carne extended hospitality to a number of friends on Friday afternoon at her pretty home on Poli street. The time was pleasantly spent in playing five hundred. Holly berries and autumn leaves were effectively used in decorations. The first prize was captured by Mrs. Earl Moss and Mrs. Frank Dennis won the second prize. The invited guests were Mrs. John Arneill, Mrs. W. B. Aplin, Mrs. James S. Blackstock, Mrs. Neill Baker, Mrs. A. Bryant, Mrs. Don Bowker, Mrs. George C. Clark, Mrs. R. M. Colburn Furs

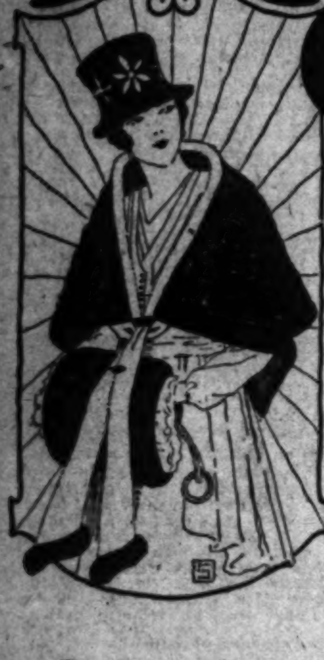
—the gift incomparable

What gift can compare in beauty, comfort and utility with a smart, modish set of furs? Furs are long-lived gifts—particularly if they are Colburn Furs. They can be remodeled season after season and will lose little of their original beauty and usefulness.

Beware of inferior furs—cheap garments that will "go to pieces" in one season. Give furs that bear the Colburn label and the recipient will appreciate your thoughtfulness and judgment. Come and choose from our magnificent Christmas stocks. Every garment carefully selected for its intrinsic worth and beauty.

There must be good and substantial reasons why this establishment does the largest exclusive fur business in Los Angeles. Ask any woman who wears Colburn furs.



The illustration shows a beautiful blanket cape of Scotch mole trimmed with tailles ermine, with a new semi-round muff. This garment is one of the handsomest cape designs of the year.

The demand for Kolinsky furs is growing by leaps and bounds. Kolinsky was never in greater demand than this season.

We have a few odd skins in Silver, Natural Blue and Cross Foxes—at special low prices. They are excellent subjects for Christmas gifts.

The prettiest of large dancing parties for the younger set and the most elaborate event of the season was given at the Athene Clubhouse Friday evening by four young popular ladies of the high school, the Misses Cecelia Periano, Doris McDonell, Dorothy Sudden and Kathryn Fowler. Guests came from Santa Paula, Oxnard, Saticoy and Camarillo; 160 invitations were issued. Those who received with the hostesses and acting as chaperones were Mrs. C. B. McDonell, Mrs. Nick Periano, Mrs. L. D. Fowler and Miss Ruth Sudden. The decorations were quite elaborate for the occasion, the color scheme was carried out in greens and red, with the assistance of holly berries, African grape vine and bamboo and gray moss. The affair will long be remembered by those who were present.

Mrs. John Lynch of Berkeley and Mrs. Charles Cottle of Los Angeles, State officers of the Daughters of the American Revolution, were the guests of honor at a handsomely appointed luncheon given at the Pierpont Inn on Friday. Members of the Santa Paula and Ventura chapter were hostesses of the day and who arranged the affair.

Mrs. John Ashdown entertained Thursday at a prettily appointed, but quite informal luncheon, complimentary to her daughter, Mrs. Leo Le Berthen and Mrs. O. H. Wycoff of Los Angeles. Those invited to meet the guests were Mrs. Knox, Mrs. J. P. Rasmussen, Mrs. H. A. Giddings, Misses Eva and Marie Rasmussen and Miss Anna Giddings.

The Misses Marie, Anna and Jeanette Silva entertained with a weekend party at their country home Saturday night. Five hundred and dancing were enjoyed. The house was decorated with quantities of pink carnations and ferns which were beautifully arranged. Sunday motor trips and a dinner were given. Those who enjoyed the delightful hospitality of their friends were Miss Lillian Mollen of Santa Barbara, Miss Margy Mangan of Oxnard, Miss Rosemary Hurd of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Case of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Curtis, John Medley, Dr. P. A. Sparks, Joe Silva, Mr. Tieberg and D. Fritz, Ventura.

Mrs. W. A. Hobson, accompanied by Mrs. William Arneill and Misses Ave and Isabella Camarillo of Camarillo, is leaving for the Hawaiian Islands, taking passage on the Great Northern, which is making its second winter trans-Pacific trip. They will be joined by a party of tourists at San Pedro. The return trip will be made in about three weeks.

Mrs. G. W. Ormsby entertained Wednesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. M. Cannon. The guests were Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Ed Barlow, Mrs. Willis, Mrs. Russell Walker, Mrs. George Cassidy, Miss Elliott, Miss Willis. A pleasant social afternoon was enjoyed and dainty refreshments were served.

Mr. Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port of New York, who is touring the State with a party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mestro, Miss Doris Stevens and Dr. Millicent Cosgrove of San Francisco, are guests at the Pierpont Inn for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis R. Kohl and family left Saturday for New York City, to remain for an indefinite period. Mr. Kohl has been called to attend to matters of business.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fuller of Boston spent a few days in the city. They are placing their two sons, who accompany them, in the Thatcher School, in the Ojai Valley.

Pomona.

MR. AND MRS. I. L. NOGGLE of No. 390 East Piedmont street entertained a company of friends with a Thanksgiving dinner and an auto ride Thursday. Among the guests were Miss Julia Noggle, who is attending Los Angeles Normal School, and her sister, Miss Bess Noggle, who is a teacher at San Fernando. Mrs. Emily Kerr of Long Beach, who is Mrs. Noggle's mother, was also present. The other guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gapp, Miss Hazel and Eben Gapp and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Schmidt from Los Angeles.

One of the pleasant Thanksgiving parties of the week was given by Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Bartlett at their residence on the Foothill boulevard Thursday. The color scheme throughout the house was yellow, brown and green, marigolds being used effectively in decorating for the occasion. In the family party were Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Kimmel, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Yetter and sons, Robert and Keith; Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Schroeder, Mrs. J. H. Sypult and Mrs. Edith Skaer, the latter from Los Angeles.

Monday afternoon Mrs. A. E. Pelton delightfully entertained the Our Times Club at her residence on West Fifth street. She had at that time as special guests her daughter, Mrs. R. A. Sampson, and her children, Edna and Arthur, and Mrs. Rosie Wilmot of Santa Monica. During the course of the afternoon Mrs. Pelton and Mrs. Wilmot played two piano duets and Mrs. James Steele read a paper entitled "The Courtship of Miles Standish." Among the club members in attendance were Mmes. C. W. Priestly, Emma Heath, C. H. Chain, C. F. Sawyer, G. F. Ayres, James Steele, B. F. Feather, B. F. Ransford, J. G. Boake, J. B. Irwin, Edward Pendleton, Guy Paine, A. C. Slykhouse, B. H. Irwin and Susie Dewey.

One of the enjoyable events of the week was a quail dinner which Theodore B. Modra gave in his art studio on East Holt avenue. A party of Los Angeles friends were present, and they were given an opportunity to see Mr. Modra's latest paintings.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Brehaut of No. 597 West Holt avenue entertained their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Brehaut of Claremont, at Thanksgiving dinner. Other guests were the Misses Gladys and Helen Brehaut, J. W. Norton and Harold Brehaut.

Thursday afternoon Dr. and Mrs. George Forester opened their beautiful home at No. 625 North Park avenue to a party of friends, and were assisted in entertaining by their daughter, Miss Hazel Forester. The latter gathered mistletoe and other holiday greenery in the hills north of here and used it for decorations in the house. The guests at a big turkey dinner were Rev. and Mrs. Frank Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Dwaine Tuppening, Mrs. W. P. Williamson, Mrs. Mary Lewis, Mrs. Minnie Mason and Mrs. Elsie Scott.

Keeping pace with a custom established several years ago, Mr. and Mrs. E. Alva Lawrence gathered the various members of their family about them and set them down to a magnificent turkey dinner on Thursday. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. E. Alva Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Snow, Mrs. Nellie Jewett, Albert Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Williams and daughter, Miss Susie Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Baker gave one of the largest Thanksgiving parties in the city on Thursday. They entertained a company of relatives from Long Beach and eastern points. Mrs. Baker decorated the house prettily with smilax and chrysanthemums, carrying out a yellow, white and green color scheme. An elaborate turkey dinner was served at noon, covers being laid for Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Baker and daughter, Miss Tillie Baker of Long Beach; Paul Baker from Des Moines, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Baker and son, Harold, and daughters, Florence, Esther, Dorothy, Hazel and Lillian; Misses Agnes and Vera Baker and Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Tadlock of this city.

A Thanksgiving dinner party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stillinger at their home on South Palomares street Thursday noon. After serving a big turkey dinner the hostess and host entertained their guests with music and games. Those who attended the party were Mr. and Mrs. Marion Maple, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Fox, Miss Iva Maple, Mr. and Mrs. Fayne Hill, Mrs. J. F. Stewart and the Misses Vera, Geneva and Effie Stewart.

Mr. and Mrs. Arlo Rickett gave a family dinner at their residence on San Francisco street Thursday. The members of the party were Mr. and Mrs. Rickett and their son, Arlo E. Rickett, Jr., and Wilbur Rickett, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Baynham and sons, Robnette and James; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baynham of Claremont and George Russ of Menlo, Iowa.

Manhattan Beach.

MRS. ERNEST B. PENTZ of No. 124 Twentieth street charmingly entertained the members of the Manhattan Bridge Club at her home on Thursday afternoon. The meeting was the last one before the Christmas holidays, and Mrs. Pentz had the house beautifully decorated in holiday colors. A new member, Mrs. John Webster, was initiated into the club. During the afternoon bridge was enjoyed and Mrs. Pentz served a delicious collation before the guests departed. Among those present were Mrs. Ray Raymer, Mrs. J. Harry Withers, Mrs. Will Simpkins, Mrs. Lewis Bock, Mrs. John Webster and Mrs. E. B. Pentz. Mrs. Martin La Baig was absent.

Serving a delicious turkey dinner on the sands, was the stunt which met with the approval of the guests of Mrs. Montgomery Chatworth, who entertained in this novel fashion on Wednesday evening on the sands near the pier. Mrs. Chatworth and her guests motored down with hampers filled with turkey and other delicious dishes, and a bonfire was kindled for the picnickers. Among those who enjoyed Mrs. Chatworth's hospitality were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Chatsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Morse and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Needham.

Mr. and Mrs. John Webster of the Manhattan grocery store delightfully entertained with a luncheon on Friday at noon out-of-town guests who were down for a few days to enjoy the beach. The Webster cottage on the ocean front was prettily decorated in a color scheme of red and green, and those who enjoyed the luncheon were Mr. and Mrs. John Webster, Mrs. H. Adams, Mrs. L. Henniny of Hollywood and Mrs. M. Underwood. The luncheon preceded an auto trip through the surrounding country.

The largest dance of the season was given on Friday night at the new Manhattan Beach City Hall, when the City Trustees and their wives opened the hospitable rooms of the new building and entertained with dancing and cards. The white walls of the rooms were decorated with asparagus plumosus ferns and red carnations, and punch was served in a booth profuse with flowers. A large number of the younger set enjoyed dancing, while some played cards. Among those present were Mr. "Chic" Webb and Mr. William Hoskings, who dispensed music; Mr. M. M. Murray, Mayor and Mrs. Frank Daugherty, Marguerite Cashin, Miss Inez O'Brian, Mr. S. Cashin, Mr. Joseph Chattwood, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Castile, Mr. Gabriel Dagle, Miss Grace Mossman, Miss Winifred Wilkinson, Mr. Joseph Dagle, Mr. and Mrs. Max Venable and many others.

In honor of Miss Edith Harris, who is soon to marry Mr. Fred R. Cramer of Los Angeles, a party was given on the beach on Thursday afternoon which was attended by many of the friends of the young couple. One of the novel features of the occasion was the hide-and-seek hour which the guests enjoyed. Miss Harris's presents were buried in the sand, and she was obliged to dig them up with a toy shovel. Those at the party included Miss Frederick J. Harper and Miss Lotta Goodrich, who were the hostesses, and about twenty others.

There have been many pleasant house parties formed during the past week, who are enjoying the holiday season at the seaside, and among the Los Angeles people and others who are enjoying their beach homes for a few days are Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Newberry and family, Roland Emory and Fred Ball, Mr. and Mrs. Don Richards of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jarvis and children of St. Louis, Miss Carrie Morrison and Miss Hester McDougal of Boston, and Mrs. Pearl Platt Vawter and children and father, Capt. Josiah Platt, of Pasadena.

Venice.

AMONG the many parties last week was one given by the Phi Alpha Delta law fraternity at Venice. PROMINENT among the noteworthy events of the fall season was the supper dance of Saturday evening at which Dr. and Mrs. Jerome Hill Titus and Mr. and Mrs. George Edward Bender were hosts at Hotel Casa Blanca. Beautiful women, handsomely gowned, and their escorts in immaculate evening attire all added their quota of brilliance to the happy assemblage and the beautiful hotel was never more attractive. Quantities of mistletoe and great clusters of gay California holly added a touch of brightness to the lobby and foretold the approach of the holiday season, while French marigolds, blending perfectly with its blue and gold appointments, served to enhance the beauty of the ballroom. Promptly at 9 o'clock, the entrancing strains of Dossinger's orchestra announced the opening of the ball and from then until the mystic midnight hour, the mirror-like floor presented a gay kaleidoscopic scene as the dancers surrendered themselves in joyful abandon to the dictates of Terpsichore. Only with the announcement of supper came an intermission in the dance and following the menu the rythmic music of the orchestra called the guests once more to the floor. Those enjoying the brilliant event numbered Mr. and Mrs. Earl M. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Scott Strain, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Hugo Mertz, Mr. and Mrs. William Starbuck Fenton, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Baugh Fowler, Mr. and Mrs. Stearnes Ingalls, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Blakeslee, Mr. and Mrs. George H. A straight out and out half price event

Reductions take no heed of former costs

HALF PRICE 1/2 PRICE SUIT SALE

Tomorrow at 9 A. M.—A Month Earlier Than in Previous Years, We Bring You These Splendid

Semi-Annual Half-Price Suit Reductions

—Usually half prices do not come until after Christmas, but this has been such a good season, such a busy one, with fine suits hurrying out, almost as fast as they arrived, that stocks have "broken" earlier.

—So tomorrow this sale is splendidly ready with a great variety, with the premiere styles for which the Style Shop is noted, with all sizes and with all the colors you could wish.

—It is to be an unusual sale—a saving sale—and a genuine old-time New York Store Sale—the like of which in previous years has brought us as high as 8000 customers in one day—5000 of them clamoring for the doors to open. They knew that they were to get genuine bargains. We may not have 8000 customers tomorrow—we may have more—but this we are sure of: Those who do come, are sure of better garments than ever before, or at any other place. Will you be among them? Here are the prices:

$19.50 Suits, $9.75
$25.00 Suits, $12.50
$29.50 Suits, $14.75
$35.00 Suits, $17.50
$39.00 Suits, $19.50
$45.00 Suits, $22.50
$55.00 Suits, $27.50
$65.00 Suits, $32.50
$75.00 Suits, $37.50
$85.00 Suits, $42.50

—One thing in this sale is important. That is, that prices have so advanced in the open market that if we were buying these sale suits today, they would cost us many dollars more than the prices we are asking tomorrow. Another advantage in this sale is this: it is an event of last minute styles—a sale in which the better kind of women's apparel is priced as low as kinds found elsewhere, in which the last minute styles are not included.

—We suggest that women with a need for suits, come to this store tomorrow and that they come early. There is not a moment to be lost, for while there are hundreds and hundreds of desirable styles, in sizes for both misses and women, they will fairly fly away at these prices.

Diamonds
A Christmas Selection Without Parallel

In no previous year have we been privileged to display selections in diamonds and other precious jewels such as our gems experts have gathered for this season; gems which have passed not one inspection, but several scrupulously careful examinations before they were purchased. We show only perfect diamonds, those whose cutting and brilliancy fully measure up to our well-known standards and which we can now unqualifiedly recommend.

Especially Designed Diamond and Gem-set Jewelry for Gift Purposes

For many months our expert designers of jewelled pieces and artisians of our shops have directed their best efforts towards producing for this Christmas the finest selection of gem-set pieces we have ever shown. And the special jewelry shown now well proves the success of this endeavor, for creations like these have not before been displayed. Whether it be a piece of simple design or one elaborately carried out in precious gems and platinum, each reflects an individuality and distinctiveness entirely unique and as a gift is beyond comparison.

SOCIETY.

erson, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Ray Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Morgan Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gage Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. George Byron Ford, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Hatcher Granger, Mr. and Mrs. Dalton A. Field.

Carnations in pink and white artistically combined with plumosus fern formed the attractive decorative motif for the home of Mrs. Charles W. Faris, No. 405 West D street, Thursday, when she happily entertained a group of friends at a charming afternoon affair.

The Richard H. Leeson home in West Fourth street was the scene of a jolly party over the week end, a number of Lloyd Leeson's college friends from the University of Southern California law school being the guests of honor. The principal event of the week end was a supper dance Saturday evening, to which a number of favored young women were also bidden.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bennett Sherwood celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding day in charming fashion Saturday evening when they entertained with a dinner party of pleasing appointments at their home in West Sixth street.

Howard Hatcher happily entertained a merry party of friends Wednesday evening at the home of his father, Dr. James Henderson Hatcher, No. 425 West D street, with a delightful little dancing party.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. Warmer, who recently returned from an extended eastern trip, entertained a small party of friends, Friday evening at their home, No. 613 East D street. Dr. and Mrs. Warmer's guests were chiefly members of the Ontario Racing Homer Club and an interesting talk by the doctor on his attendance at the recent sessions of the National A. U. Racing Pigeon Union in Philadelphia was a feature of the evening, toward the close of which a tempting supper was served. The guests numbered Mr. and Mrs. Ray R. Delhauer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. W. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Whitson, Mrs. J. Fitzgerald, Loten Arnett, William Bachelor, O. E. Holman and L. R. W. Hawk.

Many messages of congratulation and good wishes are being received at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Otis Goss, No. 945 North Euclid avenue, over the arrival Sunday of a small son. The young man has been named James Robert Bell Goss.

John T. Morris was the guest of honor Sunday when Mrs. Morris entertained with a dinner party at their home, No. 130 West G street, the occasion being the anniversary of Mr. Morris's birth. Covers were marked for eighteen.

Colton.

BY WAY of "housewarming" their new home in Colton the Misses Marjorie and Lucille Alexander, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Alexander, who have moved over from Redlands for the winter, were hostesses on Friday evening to a merry coterie of friends, dancing being the diversion enjoyed. At a late hour a tamale supper was served, places for the feminine guests being marked by Japanese flower pots sporting a plant in bloom and for the boys by papier mache dogs. Sharing the fun were the Misses Dorothy Clock, Mildred Wheat, Christine Chesnut, Dan Carpenter, Harl McDonald, Burr McDonald, Leslie and Harold Harris, William Bethell and Milton Brown of Redlands, Miss Helen Phillips of Riverside, Miss Marie Bonnell of Colton and Charles Clapp of San Bernardino.

In celebration of the twenty-first birthday of their eldest son, Chester, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Hartley entertained on Saturday evening with an elaborate stag dinner party, a 30-pound roast pig being the piece de resistance of the six-course feast. A brass basket of pink roses decked the center of the long table arranged in the drawing-room and there was also a birthday cake lighted with twenty-one tiny candles. Rose-ornamented cards bore the names of Van Arsdale Smith, Ben Hurd and Floyd Summers of Colton, Will Harris, Jay Gill, Cam Boswell, Forrest Cogswell, Charles Weber, Will Shay, Cecil Wood, Harold Wood, Paul Hill, Will Eadie, Thayer Cline and Dr. Earl Hancock of San Bernardino, Dr. Ray Swartz of Coachella, Chester Hartley and Mr. Hartley, Sr. In serving Mrs. Hartley was assisted by Mrs. J. R. Boynton and by Ralph Hatchett and Charles Hartley as waiters. Cards furnished pastime for the after-dinner hours.

Very pleasantly commemorated was the birthday anniversary being celebrated on Thursday by Mrs. C. D. Wilson when a group of friends, Mrs. F. H. Pritchard, Mrs. R. L. Riley, Mrs. G. H. Jantzen, Mrs. E. G. Palmer, Mrs. E. F. Van Luven, Miss Bessie Topp and Miss Jennie French, made an unexpected afternoon call, bringing with them gifts of cut flowers and potted plants. After rounds of auction bridge, refreshments, also brought along by the guests, were enjoyed.

Lights shaded in yellow and quantities of English ivy and mistletoe furnished a pretty setting for the little dancing party at which the Misses Lila and Edna Vaughan and Hazel Poole were hostesses on Saturday evening at the W. E. Vaughan home. The yellow note was furthered in the dance programme and the refreshments of ices and cakes served during intermission on the screened-in veranda. Miss Gladys York furnished music for the guests, who numbered the Miss Edna Gorral, Evelyn and Helen Harper and Josephine Scribner, W. H. Smith, Roy Poole and Russell Alverson of San Bernardino, Robert Eddy, W. H. Chase, Owen Garner and Earl Stuchbury.

For the annual Thanksgiving family reunion at the home of Dr. and Mrs. L. A. J. LaMotte the guests were Mrs. M. E. Bradley, the Misses Blanche and Frances Bradley and Edward Bradley of San Bernardino. A turkey feast was enjoyed.

At the F. H. Pritchard home covers were marked at a bountifully-burdened Thanksgiving table for Prof. and Mrs. G. H. Jantzen and son Hugh, E. E. Wellemeyer, Miss Jennie French, Douglas French and Dr. and Mrs. Pritchard.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Flinn and family entertained as their Thanksgiving dinner guests Mr. and Mrs. Murray B. Howard, Mrs. Della Bailey, Mrs. A. D. Bailey and Leon Vaughn of Los Angeles.

Santa Monica.

SOCIETY folks this week are getting ready for the big Christmas tree to be fostered by the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club. In addition to being an event that is looked forward to by Santa Monicans, the Christmas tree event is the center of interest during the holidays for society people. Mrs. J. G. Urquhart, president of the club, will be assisted in the extensive arrangements for the Christmas event by a large committee of club women.

Mrs. D. G. Stephens, president emeritus of the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club, was honored at a tea given by a large number of the club members during the week. Tea was served by Mrs. J. N. George, Mrs. George McCambridge, Mrs. Edward C. Japps, Mrs. Charles Tegner, Misses Dora and Hannah Buckendorf, Miss Elsie Eicher and Mrs. D. V. Swinney. Mrs. John McTear and Mrs. Jessica Clark arranged the floral decorations.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Shutt were the host and hostess Thursday for Judge and Mrs. Fred H. Taft, Miss Charlena Welch, Mr. and Mrs. Harris Taft and Jean and Roderick Taft, Miss Lillian Bennett of Los Angeles, Lieut. Vincent Shutt of Santa Monica, Mrs. Foster and Master Nado Shutt. Wednesday Mr. and Mrs. Harris Taft entertained the same people in honor of Mrs. Joe W. Foster of Pomona.

Society folk turned out en masse to a dance given Tuesday night at the Bay Cities Garage. The patronesses for the affair were Mrs. C. H. Tegner, Mrs. D. G. Stephens, Mrs. J. C. Urquhart, Mrs. Jessica Clark, Mrs. Bryant, Mrs. D. J. Evans, Mrs. C. W. Malchow, Mrs. John McTear and Mrs. T. H. Higgins.

Mr. and Mrs. Lotus Loudon of No. 111 Ninth street, Santa Monica, were the host and hostess during the week for Mr. and Mrs. Earl Myer of Whittier, who are newlyweds. Mrs. Myer is a sister of Mrs. Loudon. A delightful dinner was arranged in honor of the bride and groom.

Glendale.

THANKSGIVING week has been full of so many enjoyable affairs that the days have not been long enough or numerous enough to accommodate the throng of merry social affairs with which they have been filled to overflowing. Foremost on the week's social calendar was the reciprocity day given by the music section of the Tuesday Afternoon Club at Masonic Hall, Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. E. W. Kinney, music curator of the club, had charge of the programme, and presented many artists of local and international fame. Miss Constance Balfour of Los Angeles sang several songs, and Julius Kranz played a group of violin solos. J. Carl Breil, the composer of the music for "Intolerance," rendered several of his own compositions. Miss May Orcutt Brooke and Mrs. Mattison B. Jones made splendid accompanists. To say that the programme was delightful expresses in no degree the excellence of the afternoon's entertainment. The artists individually and collectively excelled in their own particular fortes, and members and guests enjoyed the rare treat to the utmost. A social hour occupied the time after the programme, and dainty refreshments were served.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint with the attendant bad breath.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

One of the most delightful and unique social events of the season was the Japanese party and shower given this week by Mrs. E. R. Stauffacher and Miss Ethel B. Land at the home of Mrs. Stauffacher at No. 332 Campbell street, Casa Verdugo, in honor of Miss Irene G. Read, who will become the bride of John White Garver, of Torrence, in December. Those who enjoyed the charming affair were Miss Bessie Prevolt, Miss Mattibelle Prevolt, Miss Clara Prevolt, Miss Clara Read, Miss Charlotte Read, Miss Ethel Read, Miss Olga Purt, Miss Lillian Shropshire, Miss Gertrude Champlain, Miss Harriet Nichols, Miss Margaret Nichols, Miss Frances Jackson, Miss Ella Wall, Miss Marguerite Stauffacher, Mrs. Frac Morse, Miss Arline Hallihan, Miss Amy Bowerfind, Mrs. James L. Flint, Mrs. J. Wenger, Mrs. George Bannock, Mrs. Roy Rishforth, Miss Matilda Thompson and Miss Cecelia Wilson of Los Angeles.

Miss Mabeth Pigg, one of the most popular of the younger set, will become a December bride, and has been extensively entertained by her many friends. Saturday afternoon she was the guest of honor at a "Cupid" party given for her by Mrs. R. M. Jackson and Miss Atala Browning at the home of the former at No. 102 South Maryland avenue. Red was the color used throughout the affair. Covers were laid for thirty-six.

A joyous silver anniversary dinner was given Monday evening by Mr. and Mrs. James Pettit of South Louise street to a number of their friends. Those present were Mrs. T. F. Title of Great Falls, Mont.; Mr. and Mrs. Delos Jones and daughters, Esther and Gladys; Mr. and Mrs. David Francy, Mr. and Mrs. George Lemon and son, Wilbur; Mr. and Mrs. James Pettit and son, Guy Pettit.

El Segundo.

MISS FLORENCE GILBERT was pleasantly entertained at her home in this city on Saturday evening, with a surprise party in honor of her sixteenth birthday. The evening was pleasantly spent in games and an impromptu musical programme was offered. Miss Gilbert received many beautiful gifts from her friends, among whom were: the Misses Isabel Fitzgerald, Claudine McElwain, Rose Ashire, Evelyn Fitzgerald, Eleanor Griffin, Annie Trenberth, Ruth Paxton, Clara Gilbert and Merleum Gilbert, and Messrs. Arthur Tuck, Thomas Stinnett, Louis Erb, Arthur Koonuse, Vernon Barber, Ray Dingman, Albert Foster, Gail Skinner and Earl Chubb.

The Misses Ruth and Rachel Hanna entertained at their home on Virginia street, the members of the Friday Evening Five Hundred Club on Friday evening, which proved to be one of the most delightful affairs of the season. The guests were ushered into the rooms which were profuse with roses and lilies. Miss Emilie Rueger was winner of the ladies' first prize at cards and Adolph Johnson received the gentlemen's first prize. Others present were Ruth Paxton, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Hanna, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Converse and the Messrs. Francis Smith, Joseph Bensinger, Adolph Johnson, Russell Allen and Walter Peterson.

The R. M. Dingmans and their daughter, Miss Opal, entertained a number of friends on Thursday evening. The event was in honor of Miss Opal's birthday anniversary and was a thoroughly delightful affair. Several novel games were played during the evening, and Mrs. Dingman served delicious refreshments to the following guests: The Misses Violet Hultquist, Edith Paxton, Viola Ward, Florence Hultquist, Mary Manson, Chiquita Kelley, Ethel Griffin and Margaret Manson, and the Messrs. Leonard Vincent, Maurice Kelley, Teddy Powell, James Stewart, Charles Manson, Charles Dunkle, Wilbur Manson and Arthur Dunkle.

Oxnard.

AMONG the many residents of this vicinity who spent Thanksgiving with relatives elsewhere were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Frederick, who were guests of the Charles Borchards in Sana Ana; Mr. and Mrs. Louis Maulhardt and family, who spent he day with the Louis Hartmanns in Ventura; Charles Peverly and family, George Peverly and family, and Joseph Hartup motored to Los Angeles for a family reunion; Mr. and Mrs. Al Hostlet and family were Thanksgiving and week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Gordon in Thermal, motoring over; Miss Zoe Bartruff spent the holiday with her sister in Claremont. Many pleasant family parties gathered in Oxnard as well; Mr. and Mrs. Roy B. Witman entertained a dozen members of their family from Southern California points; Mr. and Mrs. Mel Elliott entertained a number of guests, among them being the Orin Patterson family of San Fernando, Mrs. W. L. Montgomery of Kansas, T. B. Tucker and family and Ralph Elliott and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolfo Camarillo entertained at dinner at their home in Camarillo Saturday for their daughters, the Misses Ave and Isabelle Camarillo, who left Thursday for a cruise to the Hawaiian Islands.

Mrs. L. H. Hope was hostess to a small party of congenial friends on Tuesday evening for dinner and bridge.

Mrs. Kenneth Meserole entertained at cards Monday afternoon, five hundred being the game played. Mrs. R. P. Farrell won first prize for high score, and Mrs. John Eberhard second. A delicious luncheon followed the afternoon's playing.

Miss Annie Geyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Geyer of Redlands, and Mr. Robert Diedrich, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Diedrich of Oxnard, were married Tuesday morning in the Catholic Church at Redlands. Miss Rose Geyer was bridesmaid and Mr. Moritz Diedrich best man. After a wedding trip to San Diego the young couple will live on the foothills road, this county.

A miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Vera Fairly Tuesday evening announced to friends of Miss Wallie Billinger her approaching marriage to Mr. Floyd Williams, which occurred in Los Angeles the next day, Wednesday. The evening at Mrs. Fairly's home was spent in cards and music, and a dainty luncheon was served. Twelve young ladies, intimate friends of the guest of honor, were present. Miss Billinger and Mr. Williams went to Los Angeles on Wednesday morning on the Lark. Arriving there, they were met by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Williams, James Potts and Miss May Hennessy, who had made arrangements for the ceremony. After a wedding trip in the south they will make their home in Oxnard.

Montebello.

MR. AND MRS. C. D. STEWART, who recently sold their holdings here and removed Friday to Monte Vista, were the recipients of many kindly attentions before their departure, and among them were two delightful surprise parties. The first of these was made up of Mr. Stewart's brother Odd Fellows, who arrived at the Stewart home uninvited, and spent a delightful evening. Light refreshments were served by Mrs. Stewart. Those present were Mr. J. D. Mintier, Mr. E. E. Gardner, Mr. W. A. Boles, Mr. C. J. Goven, Mr. Charles Malin, Mr. R. W. Malin, Mr. Snyder, Mr. B. E. Coffman, Mr. Carl Kieselhorst, Mr. W. P. Temple, Mr. Charles Schelnik, Mr. H. M. Stanfield, Mr. R. N. Bird, Mr. L. P. Edlefsen, Mr. J. H. Prescott, Mr. R. F. Oswley, and Mr. E. T. Cochrum.

A few evenings later the Stewart home was again invaded, the visitors this time being the members of a north-side social club, to which Mrs. Stewart belonged. They were accompanied by their husbands and children, and a jolly crowd it made. A tasty cafeteria lunch, brought by the uninvited guests themselves, was enjoyed by all, and games of various sorts made the evening a merry one. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Harry Oswald, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Stephens and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Moulton and son, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Calkins and children, Mr. and Mrs. Al Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Bird and children, Mrs. Ralph, Mrs. N. E. Stanforth and Mrs. Tuttle.

The Lamplighters' Club was entertained in delightful fashion Monday night by Mrs. S. W. Burrows. Cards furnished the principal diversion. Those who enjoyed the evening's pleasure were Mr. and Mrs. George F. Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Olds, Mr. and Mrs. C. Y. James, Mrs. S. C. Hichborn, Miss Lilian Billings, Miss Imogene Bartlett, and Mr. Stephens of Los Angeles.

Huntington Beach.

THE first card party of the season, given by the Woman's Club, occurred in the clubhouse on Tenth street, Saturday evening, and was a great success. Progressive five hundred was played at ten tables. Two vocal solos by Miss Lucile Davenport of the grammar school faculty were highly appreciated. Miss Davenport was accompanied by Miss Brogenbrager of Los Angeles. The affair was in charge of Mrs. W. E. Gerhart, Mrs. H. L. Heffner and Mrs. H. V. Anderson. Refreshments were served. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. A. M. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Benning, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Obarr, Trustee and Mrs. D. W. Huston, Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Graves, Trustee and Mrs. R. H. Chapin, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Griffith, Mrs. and Mrs. W. S. Thomson, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Dunning, Dr. and Mrs. G. A. Shank, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gerhart, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Newland, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Catching, Mr. and Mrs. James J. Conrad, Mrs. C. A. Johnson, Mrs. S. A. Moore, Mrs. Geneva Morehouse, Mrs. Stevens, Miss May Wallace, Miss Lucile Davenport, Miss Ethelyn Young, Miss Elizabeth Bushard and Miss Brogenbrager of Los Angeles.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Club was held last Tuesday afternoon in the clubhouse. The programme for the afternoon was in charge of the Social Committee. The first number was a piano solo by Mrs. Lawrence Worthy. Mrs. G. A. Shank read a comprehensive paper on "Popular Actors." Mrs. C. A. Johnson then gave a report of the Southern District Federation of Woman's Clubs, recently held in Redlands. The closing number was a delightful rendition of Godard's "Second Mazurka," by Miss Gladys Bollon. Tea was served by Mrs. W. E. Gerhart, Mrs. W. T. Newland, Jr., and Mrs. R. E. Graves. On December 30, Miss Annie Hill, assisted by Mrs. Crawford, will give a recital at the Methodist Church, under the auspices of the Woman's Club. This recital will be free to the public.

The Happy Workers of the Presbyterian Church of Westminster met in an all-day session at the home of Rev. W. T. Wardle, Wednesday.

The ladies of the Methodist Missionary Society of Westminster met at the parsonage Thursday. Two comforts were tacked for a missionary box. Committees were appointed for the sale to be held December 15 at the school hall.

The Christmas bazaar, to be given by the ladies of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be held in the church parlors and social hall. It will begin at 10 a.m. and will last until late at night. Lunch will be served at noon. Chicken dinner will be served at 5 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Boster entertained Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Frost of Whittier at dinner Sunday.

Tropico.

MISS THANKSGIVING put on her best bonnet and stepped out quite a bit this week. There were affairs in her honor by many hosts, and she bids fair to be remembered in frolics and festivities for yet another week.

One of the most cheery of the many pre-Thanksgiving affairs was the Veteran's night social, given at the G.A.R. Hall, Tuesday night by the Tropico Sons of Veterans of the N.P.R. Banks Post. Joe Griffin gave Lincoln's Gettysburg address. A bountiful repast was served.

Plans are being perfected by the Thursday Afternoon Club for their annual philanthropic day, to be held next Thursday. Members will bring contributions for Christmas charity work, and the speaker of the day will be Rev. Charles E. Stickles.

Miss Rose Virden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Virden, of No. 235 Mira Loma avenue, entertained for the pharmacy sorority of the University of California at a 5 o'clock four-course tea Sunday evening. The rooms and table were graced with red carnations, and the lights were shaded to give the same beautiful coloring. A musical programme was given, to which Miss Lulu Lanterman contributed several solos, accompanied by her sister, Miss Harriet Lanterman. Tea was served later, and the dainty menu was much enjoyed. Those present were: Mrs. Laird Stabler, Miss Ola Fitch, Biss Velba Agers, Miss Edith McDonough, Miss Vera Brown, Miss Edith Ewins, Miss Emma Therner, Miss Edna Garrick, Miss Harriet Lanterman, Miss Ione Virden, Miss Lulu Lanterman, Miss Emma All and Miss Bertha Eichler.

Cupid invaded the City Council Tuesday evening and sentenced Mayor Peters to life imprisonment with Mrs. Viola Daniels as the fair jailer. They celebrated their marriage quietly at the home of Rev. Mr. Rider, pastor of the Tropico Presbyterian Church, after the Council meeting. Mr. and Mrs. R. Richardson were the only witnesses. The couple left for San Diego to spend a short honeymoon there, after which they will be at home to their many friends at No. 401 Moore avenue.

Father's Night of the P.T.A., held Monday evening at the Cerrietos-avenue school, was a thoroughly successful occasion, even though Father was not as well represented as the committee had hoped for. A musical programme was given under the direction of Miss L. Mitchell, and little Miss Lavina Wood scored a hit by dancing the highland fling. Speeches were made by Supt. Keppel, Dr. William C. Mabry and Irving Oliver, president of the school board.

Mrs. Kate Stevenson entertained the ladies of the P.E.O. at a four-course luncheon Friday afternoon, and was assisted by Miss Harriet Meyers, Mrs. J. Herbert Smith and Mrs. Merritt Ludden. A business session followed the luncheon at which Mrs. Charles Barker gave an absorbing review of Olive Shriner's "Woman and Labor."

Gardena.

DR. G. C. CREELMAN, president of the Agricultural College at Guelph, Ontario, Can., was a guest last week of Mr. and Mrs. William Roberts of Magnolia avenue. The Guelph school owns 100,000 acres of land and has more than sixty instructors. Of the many young men in the institution nearly 600 have joined the ranks of the allies in the European war, and recently Mr. Creelman's eldest son and daughter have gone to the French border. Mr. Creelman is visiting the principal agricultural schools and colleges of the West.

Mrs. M. W. Greer and her daughter, Miss Maud Greer, have gone to Los Angeles to live, to the regret of their many Gardena friends.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Woodruff gave a delightful dinner on Wednesday evening in honor of Mr. F. M. Griggs of Eugene, Or., who is on his way to Florida, Cuba and New York. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. Angel and Miss G. E. Salzman of Los Angeles, and Miss G. Weitzel of San Diego.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Weed were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Armstrong of Santa Monica on Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. Shirley, who has been visiting his old home in the East for several months, has returned to Gardena and will spend the winter with his son, E. C. Shirley and family, on West Central avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Jones had as Thanksgiving Day guests Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson of Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Jessen have had as guests from Santa Paula lately Mr. and Mrs. Badger, Mr. Frank Marshall and son Clarence, Miss Lucille Badger and Mr. Elmer Parquett, as well as Mr. and Mrs. O. Oleson of Los Angeles.

Mr. Earle Moore and Mr. Delbert Kirckenschlager of the class of '16 of the Agricultural High School, after spending several months in Montana, have returned to Gardena, and the former recently addressed the Agricultural Club, telling of his experience of several months on a 1680-acre cattle and grain ranch, where he had a chance to put into practical use the agricultural education he had acquired while at the school here.

Upland.

AT THEIR attractive home in Washington boulevard, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pierce Fuller delightfully entertained a happy group of friends Thursday evening at a bridge supper of charming appointments. Pink Helen Gould roses were effectively combined with plumosus fern in decoration and four tables were arranged for the auction bridge tournament. The prizes were captured by Miss Eva Gerry and James Lynnward Grahame. A tempting supper followed the tournament, covers being arranged for Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Froehde, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bodenhamer, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Henry McQuillen, Mr. and Mrs. James Lynnward Grahame, Mr. and Mrs. Owen E. Atwood, Miss Mildred Ware, Miss Eva Gerry, Harold C. Moore, Everett H. Fuller and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pierce Fuller.

Mrs. Paul Cushing was hostess Friday at a pleasant afternoon affair at her home in West D street. Roses made an effective decoration and the greater part of the afternoon was spent at fancywork and social chat. At it drew to a close a tempting collation was served. Mrs. Cushing's guests included Mrs. George Aaron Brest, Mrs. William L. Brown, Mrs. D. D. Crews, Mrs. William B. Duncan, Mrs. Christopher C. Eymann, Mrs. Chad K. Francisco, Mrs. George Gregg, Mrs. Perry O. Long, Mrs. N. G. Pehl, Mrs. William C. Reynolds, and Mrs. Charles M. Sikes.

Miss Pearl Edwards very pleasantly entertained a group of friends Saturday evening with an informal dancing party at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Winters, in East Ninth street. A tempting little supper was served at the close of a happy evening at dancing. Miss Edwards's guests included Miss Thelma Bradley, Miss Lavon Cory, Miss Elizabeth Fiske, Dean Palmer, Ted Phillips, Albert Cocheron, Norban Hargroves, J. Phillips and others.

A party of Upland society folk motored to Bakersfield Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving and the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Garnet E. Adams, who formerly made their home in Upland. A big Thanksgiving dinner was the feature of the event. The party numbered Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pierce Fuller, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Henry McQuillen, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Atwood and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bodenhamer.

The interesting word has been received by the many Upland friends of Miss Edna Durkee, formerly of this city, of her recent marriage to H. L. Hamilton. Mr. Hamilton is a geologist and mining engineer and he and his bride are to make their home for the present in Texas, where he is in charge of a large graphite mine.

E. A. Bowen, William Bowen and Miss Edna Bowen, formerly of Upland, where they have hosts of friends, but now of San Diego, are visiting here for a few days, having motored up from the southern city.

W. H. Williams and W. F. Marshall of Belfast, Ireland, are spending a short time in Upland and are guests of the J. Lynnward Grahames in Euclid avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bendixon arrived in Upland this week expecting to spend the winter here. They are from Springfield, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. George Edward Bender had as their guests over the week end at their home in Euclid avenue Miss Gladys Holmes and Miss Alma Holmes of Los Angeles, who were out to attend the Titus-Bender ball at Hotel Casa Blanca, Ontario, Saturday evening.

Garden Grove.

MR. AND MRS. MARTIN CHRISTIANSON have returned to this city from a prolonged stay in Ventura, having been in that town for over two months. They have decided to reside permanently in Garden Grove.

One of the most delightful of the week's social events was the affair given by Mrs. C. C. Vogel on Monday evening in honor of her husband's birthday. Light refreshments served in the fashion of a birthday

Eloise Chamberlin

THE coats are so very right in every way that you need seek no further. Bolivia, Velour and Broadcloth, the lining of good—not common—silks; the lines graceful, sweeping, with very full—not skimpy flares. There are belts that go straight around and belts that go criss-cross. Some have fur collars and some have collars trimmed with fur—As to colors there are Burgundy, Plum, Wistaria, Blue, African Brown, Taupe and Green.

For Evening Wear

If music has color, then color has tone. And a dancing frock is a fantasia, although one might think it an aria. From there, of course, it is only a step to a one-step, and that is the evolution of a dancing frock.

It may be a lavender cloud of a thing; a butterfly with wings of glinting gold; a shimmering green for auburn hair; a stately black for one who can wear it.

But whatever it is, it has in its fabric the spirit, the joy of the dance.

And $22.75 and $27.50 for these adorables.

SUITS

We should tax your credulity were we to tell you how much more these suits were a week ago than they are today.

Imagine! Suits of velour, gabardine, serge and such—new colors like plum, African brown, green and navy and black—trimmed with fur at $16.75.

Then the next grades: You may choose from them at $22.75 now.

And the very good! Exactly what you always have wanted—individuality—distinction—character. Well, $27.50 for them!

Swelldom will have a new Department, Silk Underwear. Announcement Soon.

Not By Price Alone Should We Be Judged

Not by low prices alone does Swelldom seek to gain your trade. Only by giving you such satisfactory garments that, having tested and worn them, you conceive a sense of confidence, of trust, of old-friendship toward this conscientious store, do we secure your permanent patronage.

Only by serving sincerely and selling worthy wearables, irrespective of price, has this store's consistent growth during twelve years been possible.

In the light of the high standards of Swelldom this announcement becomes almost amazing. It stands out—apart—above all others. It is authentic advice as to where you should shop FIRST.

SOCIETY.

[illegible] were given at a late hour in the evening, a huge white birthday cake blazing with pink candles featuring that part of the entertainment. Others present besides the family circle were Mr. and Mrs Baum, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Will Miller and Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Schnitger.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stuck have had as house guests their daughter, Mrs. Will Stuck and her small daughter, the welcome visitors having been in Garden Grove all of the week. Mrs. Stuck was entertained by various Garden Grove friends and on Tuesday was the guest of Mrs. Arthur Schnitger.

A very jolly surprise event was most successfully carried out on Tuesday evening when the members of the Loyal Workers Sunday-school class, of which Prof. Fitz is teacher, invaded the peaceful home of Rev. and Mrs. Reinius. The young people made the home of Dr. and Mrs. Young the meeting rendezvous, proceeding from there to the home of their victim. When the involuntary host and hostess threw open the doors of their home to the visitors they at once gave the freedom of the house to the company, as there were about eighty people awaiting admittance.

The Tuesday Afternoon Club, which plays so large a part in the social and literary life of Garden Grove, was entertained Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. H. Cloyes. A parliamentary drill conducted with great efficiency by Mrs. W. E. Hennion was given. Mrs. Cloyes served delicate refreshments after the programme and the exchange of felicitations.

Covina.

THE marriage of Miss Eleanora Mitchell, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mitchell of [illegible] avenue, to Mr. Burgess Sutton of Azusa occurred at the home of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Catherwood Thursday evening of last week at 8:30 o'clock. The wedding was of a very quiet nature only a few of the most intimate friends of the couple being present. They were attended by Miss Leora Kring and Mr. Dave Miller. After the ceremony the couple left immediately for Monrovia, where they will make their home for a short time, expecting to come to Covina to live.

A party was given Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Merwin, Ethel May, the youngest daughter, being the charming hostess. The affair was in celebration of her fifth birthday. Miss Edna Boegner, kindergarten teacher, was present and assisted Mrs. Merwin in entertaining the little guests with games and stories. Dainty refreshments were served. Among the guests were Dorothy Warner, Marian Marfield, Marian Lepley, Howard and Zella Gillett, Ruth and Mildred Foreman, Lawrence and Elizabeth Capp, Ada and Francis Fields, Betty Phillips, Delmer Boal, Dorothy Edwards, Annabelle and Leslie Baldridge, Dorothy and Edith Cushman and Edith Merwin.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Griswold entertained Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Wilson and family of Long Beach, Mrs. E. Waye, Misses Adah and Emily Waye of Los Angeles, Mrs. E. A. Waye of Gardena and Mrs. M. L. Wilson and family of San Gabriel at a Thanksgiving dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Brunjes, Mr. and Mrs. William Hookendyk and Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Hassheider were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Brunjes in Glendora Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Harris and two children were guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gooch, in [illegible], Thanksgiving. Mrs. Harris and the children remained over the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Maitland of Los Angeles were over-night guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Keefer Monday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Hurst entertained with an elaborate Thanksgiving dinner for the family. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Hurst and two children, Mr. A. R. Hurst and Miss Maude Hurst.

Thanksgiving guests at Roselands, the home of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Griffiths, were Mrs. Grace Buckley of Seattle, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Fisher of Los Angeles and Mr. George Webster, also of Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Groom were guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Vining at Thanksgiving dinner at the Casa Blanca Hotel, Ontario. They attended the football game between the Citrus Union High School and the Chaffey High School in the afternoon.

Mr. Herbert L. McQuisick, Miss Sara McQuisick and Mr. Edward Alcott of Los Angeles were Thanksgiving dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Gall at their home on Navilla place.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Gillett, daughter Zella and son Howard and Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Gillett were in attendance at a family reunion at the home of the father of Mrs. F. G. Gillett, Mr. W. B. Merickel, No. 815 Manhattan place, Los Angeles, Thanksgiving Day.

Duarte.

THE great New England feast day was celebrated in Duarte with many happy gatherings, and the truly thankful spirit was encouraged by the joyful assemblages which congenially gathered about many festive tables. Notable among these companies was the one given by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fowler and the Misses Fowler at their home on Duarte avenue. About their flower-bedecked table were gathered Mr. and Mrs. Felix Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. Carrol Fowler and family, Mr. and Mrs. Hardiman Fowler and family, Mrs. L. J. Bailey, Miss Daisy Monroe, Miss Elizabeth Fowler and Capt. Hardiman Fowler.

At the J. G. Helsley home, Mr and Mrs. Helsley had as their Thanksgiving guests Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Partridge, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Peters and family of Long Beach, Miss Geraldine Helsley, Miss Lois Partridge, Miss Ruth Partridge, Miss Mary Partridge and Harry Helsley.

Among the Duarte folk who kept the great New England feast day with their kin were Mrs. John Dunn, Miss Teresa Dunn and John Dunn, who were members of a family dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dunn at their home on East White Oak avenue.

Among other Duarte folk who entertained with Thanksgiving dinner parties were Mr. and Mrs. Parsons, who had a gathering of the members of their family at their ranch home, and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Elliott, who hospitably entertained in honor of Rev. and Mrs. A. Stem, Miss Edith Smith and Messers. Edward Lane, Courtland and Raymond Elliott.

Beside the home gatherings there were a number of picnic companies in beautiful Fish Canyon, and throughout the day gay laughter and songs were heard issuing from the oak and sycamore groves.

One of the jolliest events of the week was the large children's party given Friday afternoon between the hours of 2 and 5 by Miss Sally Edwards of Duarte avenue, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Edwards. Mrs. Quibell and Miss Harriet Hutchins chaperoned the company of twenty little girls and assisted in games and lively sports. At 4 o'clock a collation was served by Mrs. Edwards. The list of guests included the Mises Marcia Church, Habel Washburn, Mary McPhie, Dorothy Slosson, Norma Duncan, Frances Wheeler, Viola Vollmer, Margaret Blevens, Marion Swartzhopf, Ruth Talbert, Edith Griegert, Ruth Price, Inez Lehman, Helen Pottenger, Margaret Landis, Roberta Gaylord, Edna Ranton, Leila Schench and Edith Quibell.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Radabaugh were members of a party which heard the Cherniavsky brothers on Tuesday night in Los Angeles.

On Monday evening Miss Ellen Shrode, one of Duarte's accomplished musicians, gave a concert at 1130 West Twenty-seventh street, in Los Angeles. It was a piano recital, and Miss Shrode was assisted by Mrs. Lillian Norman Gally, violinist, and Miss Bess Daniels, accompanist. The programme was a thoroughly enjoyable one, which showed the scope of Miss Shrode's musical ability, and after the concert an informal reception was tendered the artists.

The Duarte Reading Circle, which meets fortnightly, held its last gathering for November at the home of Mrs. William Beardslee on Buena Vista avenue. Mrs. E. A. Moore and Mrs. Eugene D. Northup gave readings and at 4 o'clock tea was served, and the rest of the afternoon was spent in social visiting.

Sawtelle.

THE executive committee in charge of the coming street celebration gave a ball at the Woman's Club House on Thanksgiving. There was a good attendance, and a neat sum was realized toward defraying the expenses of the barbecue and other special features of the celebration.

Mrs. Lillie Eagler of Pomona visited here last week. Her husband, C. E. Eagler, who has lived here a number of years and conducted the tailor shop on South Fourth street, expects to leave soon for Pomona, where he will reside.

In honor of the birthday anniversary of Rev. E. W. Mecum last Saturday, Mrs. Mecum surprised him with a birthday dinner. The guests were Dr. and Mrs. Eli McClish, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Stoner, Mr. and Mrs. C. X. Yeager and the latter's mother, Mrs. Carrie Thorson of Illinois, and Miss Edythe Jones.

Mrs. Susie Hayes, Mr. and Mrs. W. Hayes of Newberry Park, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Graham.

The Messengers were delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. S. M. Jones last Friday afternoon. About twenty ladies were present. A programme was given and in the contest games Mrs. A. B. Phillips won the prize. A delicious two-course luncheon was served by the hostess.

Mrs. C. S. Martin returned from San Diego, where she was called by the death of her little grandson.

Mr. and Mrs. Travis Evans had as dinner guests on Thanksgiving Day Mr. and Mrs. C. E. C. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Evans, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Stoner, Mrs. Ada Wyant, Mrs. Howard Reineman and daughter, Dorothy, and Miss Corene Evans.

Thanksgiving Day was the eleventh birthday anniversary of Miss Lyra Mecum. Several little girl friends were entertained at a slumber party in her honor. Those present were Clytie Haskell, Anna Field, Alice Ostermann, Beaulah Henderson, Mary Kanzler and Mildred Mecum.

Miss Clytie Haskell celebrated her eleventh birthday anniversary on Friday, December 1. Her mother planned and carried out a pleasant little surprise party at which a number of children spent a happy afternoon.

About 300 women of Sawtelle accepted the kind invitation of Gen. P. H. Barry and accompanied their husbands to the turkey dinner given at the Home on Thanksgiving Day. This made the day a happy one in a great many of our homes.

Moneta.

MR. AND MRS. W. G. BITTLESTON went to San Jacinto Hot Springs on Thursday, where they will remain for several days. This was their initial trip in their new car.

The Rebekahs entertained the home lodge of I.O.O.F. in Olson Hall on Monday evening. Cards and dancing were the order of the evening. Refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter McCleery and son Lyde and Miss Amanda of Santa Ana and Miss Cora Coghill of Los Angeles were house guests at Fewacres last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Watts of Pennsylvania street, with their little son, have moved to Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Williams and daughter, Miss Dorothy, spent Thanksgiving Day with former neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. C. Aitcheson of Los Angeles.

The change of residence of Rev. and Mrs. Frederick Dwight Seward to Arlington street, Los Angeles, following Mr. Seward's recent resignation of the pastorate of the Moneta Presbyterian Church, gave the ladies of the Missionary Society a long quest to find their president at their last monthly meeting. This position Mrs. Seward has held since Mr. Seward brought her to Moneta six years since, a beautiful white-haired bride. That love and admiration for their former pastor and his wife had not waned was evidenced by the fact that the husbands accompanied their wives and the lady members of the society. At the dinner a couple of pieces of dainty cut glass was presented to the host and hostess as a memento of the occasion. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Linvill, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dunn, Mrs. McDaniels, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Goss, Mr. Macomber and sister, Mrs. M. W. Raibley, Mrs. C. L. McCleery, Mrs. Hayden, Mrs. D. M. Olds, Miss Cattell and several others.

Burbank.

THANKSGIVING week was one of many delightful affairs and social gatherings. Foremost was the junior class play Friday evening. The High School students demonstrated their ability to stage a comedy and get it over in a manner not often seen. The large and enthusiastic audience which witnessed the presentation of "The Toy Shop" and the curtain raiser, "The Mishaps of Minerva," was fully satisfied with the way in which the various parts were acted by the young Thespians, and discovered that some embryonic stars were among the local talent. Howard Christensen won applause by his clever character acting and Miss Kameyo Saito as the Japanese doll was charming. Miss Irmadean Bowen did some good work as the Scotch doll, and was graceful in her dance of the highland fling. Victor Williams took the part of the ferocious Indian doll, and Eloise Horton as the French doll did some fancy dancing that won the hearts of the audience. Raymond Kirkpatrick as the clown doll proved himself a clever comedian as well as actor, and Mabel Salisbury as the big doll and Alma Knapp as the dollie from Germany scored hits. Jack-in-the-Box brought forth gales of laughter, and Helen Allen as the fairy was graceful and charming. The comedy playlet was also well staged and well rendered. The parts were taken as follows: Minerva, Miss Phoebe Brown; Dr. Brown and Mrs. Jennie Van Dusen Spuyker, Gesford Thompson; Mike Shannon, Jake Scholtes; the "reporter woman," Ida Pettit; Minerva's daughter, Marjorie Chapman; Mrs. Wright, Myrtle Magness; Mr. Stirling, William Lawrence; maid, Jennie McLaughlin; the cub reporter, Lee Shelton; the butler, Rupert Malone; the philanthropic worker, Dorothy Davenport. Much credit for the success of the entertainment is due to Miss C. Eby, who coached the students for the plays.

The Yeomen Lodge had a jolly time at on oyster supper given at Horne Hall Monday evening. About thirty members were present to do justice to the delicious spread, and an informal programme helped make the evening even more enjoyable. After supper the masculine contingent adjourned to the kitchen, where a dish-washing convention was held. The unaccustomed labor did not seem to be a tiresome task, for it was voted the crowning event of the evening.

Rev. H. A. Rudin's class of boys was recently host to Miss Louise Lawrence's class of girls of the Burbank Presbyterian Church. The party was held in the basement of the church, which was attractively decorated by the boys. The pillars were wound with ivy and chrysanthemums and the tables were made beautiful with the same flowers. Games and contests made the evening pass all too rapidly and the bountiful feast later on was a fitting climax to the evening's merriment. The girls left with firm determination to return the compliment very soon.

A party of Burbank residents comprising Mr. and Mrs. J. Hornby, Miss Eleanor Hornby and Mrs. Catherine McLaughlin were recently entertained by Capt. Lawrence Powell and wife in Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Taylor had as Thanksgiving guests Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Melrose of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lawrence, Laura Mae Lawrence and Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Kendall.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Nickerson and daughter Lucille attended a birthday dinner in Lankershim at the home of their son in that city Monday evening.

Alhambra.

A GROUP of musical students were the guests of their instructor, Miss Ollie Blackburn, on Saturday at her home, No. 318 North Monterey. The affair was a combination of Thanksgiving and classday party, and Mrs. Elizabeth McCall won the class pin for the ablest performance at the piano. Miss Virginia Watson was awarded the statue of having improved the fastest of anyone in the class with her studies.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Riseley Saturday evening entertained the Marguerita Card Club. Pepper boughs—California's wondrous leaf tree—furnished the decorations. The bright berries looked their best against the green foliage. The awards for five hundred were won by Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Gifford.

An auction bridge luncheon was thoroughly enjoyed Thursday by a party of friends of Mrs. H. J. Hanscome at her home, No. 221 South Garfield avenue. Following the game was served a very delectable repast. The guests were Mrs. H. M. Black, Mrs. R. G. Skillen, Mrs. W. C. Austin, Mrs. A. H. Palmer, Mrs. E. J. Stafford and Mrs. E. R. Braley.

Mrs. Frank Naub of North Monterey returned on Tuesday from San Francisco, where she had been on an extended visit of three months with friends.

Harley H. Dagley, first lieutenant in the Philippine service, is the guest of his brother, O. E. Dagley of this place. He is on his way to Washington. He has been transferred to the cavalry service since leaving Alhambra.

Mrs. J. A. Jones entertained a party of friends at her home, No. 418 North Garfield, last week. Present were Mmes. Hogart Thatcher, Theodore Merchant, Ralph Hornby and Fred Dickey.

Mrs. Fred Jones has returned from the north after an absence of five weeks as the guest of her son Phillip at Sanford.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Foster, recent arrivals from the East, have decided to make Alhambra their home, and will occupy the Haub property at No. 811 North Monterey.

Sierra Madre.

ONE of the principal social features this week was a lecture on art by Mrs. L. N. Legendre, a local artist, which was given under the auspices of the Women's Club. Mrs. Legendre dwelt on art in the past and present, giving a general review of the subject. Mrs. Legendre was assisted by Miss Mabel Lewis Case of Los Angeles, a pianist, who rendered several numbers of her own composition, and also Miss Ethel Brocklinger, a pupil of Miss Case, who is studying for concert work. Many of the music lovers present highly commended Miss Case's renditions for her technique and touch. The programme met with hearty approval by all present.

A very enjoyable affair during the week was the card party given by Mrs. Arthur Johnson, Jr. Invitation were issued to about forty. Mrs. Louis Dietz carried off the honors by winning first prize in five hundred and Miss Hazel Woodward in bridge, which prizes consisted of crocheted baskets filled with Cecil Brunner roses. Second prizes were won by Mrs. C. C. Nourse in five hundred and Mrs. Ernest Yerxa in bridge, which prizes were linen. Dainty refreshments were served and the color scheme carried out in purple and yellow.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Farman and family and Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Welsher spent Thanksgiving with Mrs. Mary D. Case and daughter of North Bonnie Brea street, Los Angeles.

The dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. D Welsher on Monday evening were Mr. and Mrs. James W. Reys of Pasadena.

Orange.

THE most brilliant wedding ever held in this community was that of Miss Emilie Lauchau of Olive to Oliver Burdg of Yorba Linda, the affair taking place in Olive late Wednesday afternoon. The 4 o'clock ceremony, in the German Evangelical Lutheran Church, was witnessed by 300 guests. The wedding march, played by Mr. Schmied, accompanied the march of the bridal party. The bride was gowned in white satin, and was attended by her four sisters, the Misses Hattie, Louise, Emma and Alvina Lauchau, who were all attired in gowns of a delicate maize tint. Merle Lauchau, a niece of the bride, was the winsome flower girl, and the ringbearer was Raymond Meierhoff, a cousin of the bride. The bride's brothers, Henry and Albert Lauchau, were ushers. The celebration following in the evening combined the joyous spirit and gracious hospitality of the old-fashioned German wedding and the more modern ceremonies. Rev. F. A. Theise read the impressive marriage service.

Mr. and Mrs. K. E. Watson were hosts on a recent Tuesday evening to a party of out-of-town friends entertaining with a quail dinner at their South Glassell-street home. Covers were laid for the following: Mr. and Mrs. James Lynch of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Earl S. Morgan of Santa Ana, Dr. and Mrs. Bruce Whitted of Santa Ana, Mr. and Mrs. K. E. Watson.

The McPherson Thimble Club was delightfully entertained on Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. T. M. Flippen. Mrs. Fulton, one of the members, soon leaves for Napa to make her home there. A guest of the club was Mrs. Danner of Porterville, a house guest of Mrs. Flippen. Others present were Mrs. Fulton, Mrs. God[illegible], Mrs. G. I. Field, Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. L. W. Field, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Mary Meier, Mrs. Lucien Flippen, Misses Meier and Flippen.

The ladies of the Methodist Church, South, were very handsomely entertained on Wednesday afternoon at the charming home of Mrs. A. Phillips on South Glassell street.

El Monte.

MISS MABEL FARRINGTON was a visitor in El Monte on the 24th inst. Miss Farrington is now teaching domestic science in the Azusa High School, and is much pleased with her work there.

Mrs. I. Asher was this week called to Anaheim on account of the death of her mother, Mrs. J. Harris.

A bazaar and chicken-pie supper were given in the El Monte Club House by the ladies of the Methodist Church on Friday last. The rooms were artistically decorated with ferns and flowers. Within prettily-arranged booths well-known young ladies of the community sold groceries, embroidered articles and home-made candies. Young girls waited upon the supper tables, and during the evening the guests were entertained with a delightful programme. Mrs. S. S. Ingraham directed the programme. The attendance was large and the affair was more successful, both socially and financially, than the bazaar given last year.

The ladies of the Mountain View Shakespeare Club of El Monte held an interesting meeting on the afternoon of Tuesday, the 28th. Mrs. [illegible] Klingerman was leader for the afternoon, and the hostesses were the Mmes. Blackley, Conery, Everett and Hudson. The programme consisted of an exhibit of fancy work, old and new, by each club member. Many rare old pieces were displayed. The roll call was answered by "Our Favorite Needlework." Mrs. Prouty, seated in her wheel chair, gave a talk on "Olden-time Memories." Mrs. Josie Crandall told about "Priscilla and Her Spinning Wheel," and Mrs. Fazakerley spoke about "Dorothy and Her Shuttle."

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Herbert motored to San Diego with their family for the week-end.

The pretty new bungalow of Mr. and Mrs. F. Naumann was the scene of a family reunion on Thanksgiving Day. Among the guests were E. Hirshfeld, father of Mrs. Naumann; Mr. and Mrs. Leo Harris and [illegible] children of Lancaster, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Hirshfeld of Los Angeles, [illegible] Hirshfeld and Miss B. Asher of Los Angeles.

The El Monte Thimble Club met with Mrs. Charles Clair on Friday afternoon last.

The Montebello Ladies' Club staged a very pretty cantata entitled "The Queen of Autumn" in the El Monte Shakespeare Club house last Friday evening. The cantata was written and directed by Mrs. W. D. Stephens and Mrs. R. L. Bird of Montebello. Miss Elva [illegible]shborn of Montebello took the part of Rose, Queen of Summer, and passed the sceptor to Chrysanthemum, Queen of Autumn, who was represented by Miss Ruth Green of El Monte.

"INTOLERANCE" RECORD.

Receipts Running Higher Than for "Birth of Nation."

D. W. Griffith's gigantic film spectacle, "Intolerance," continues to smash all records for attendance on the Pacific Coast. At the present time it is in its eighth week at San Francisco. Each week it is exceeding the gross receipts of "The Birth of a Nation." The first week of "Intolerance" at the Columbia Theater, San Francisco, exceeded by $3000 the biggest week of "The Birth of a Nation."

"Intolerance" is now in its sixth week in Los Angeles at Clune's Auditorium. The largest day's receipts for any one performance of "The Birth of a Nation" was $2200. Saturday, November 4, was the biggest day for "Intolerance." The gross receipts for that day were $2574.

The man without a country who won literary fame some years ago has a rival. There is in London a woman without a country, or so it seems. She is Baroness Bettina von [illegible], one time Betsy Riddle, daughter of the late Tom Scott, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad. She was born an American, became a German by marriage, then established an Italian residence and later took up residence in London. She has divorced her German baron and believes that makes her an American, an Italian, or an Englishwoman. But British authorities apparently regard her as a German, and therefore an alien enemy. Baroness von [illegible] is looking for a country that will claim her as its own. The Baroness is 43 years old.

Two remarkably talented children,

Bernice E. Graves, 7 years old, and Virginia Lee Glockner, 10 years of age, who will be heard in violin and piano selections on the Wisconsin State Association programme tomorrow evening at The Times Assembly Hall.

VOTES FOR JEANNETTE RANKIN

BY GENEVIEVE PARKE.

IT WAS a large vote at the primaries that put Jeannette Rankin on the Republican ticket for Congress. The headquarters for her campaign were in Helena, Mont., in the law offices of the brother of the first Congresswoman. It was Wellington Rankin who managed her campaign, and Belle Fligelman assisted him daily by sending press matter throughout Montana.

I started to work for Jeannette Rankin two weeks before election. The first place I went was into one of the largest counties, and one whose sentiment was considered doubtful. When I arrived at the main town of the county, I learned that out in the country the vote for Jeanette Rankin was safe; work was needed in town. My first day at electioneering I felt I did not gain much, for I spent it in calling upon a dozen women prominent for their work in public matters. They were interested in, and favored my object, but their great absorption was to drown the efforts of the "wets" by flooding the county with dry literature.

Therefore, the second morning I ignored the prosperous part of the town and went over toward the railroad tracks where the houses were small and many of them unpainted. The men, of course, were away at work, and the women were busy in the kitchen. Often I had to attack both doors to reach the woman within. Generally my knock at the front would be unheard; I was glad for this for I had my excuse then for going around to the intimacy of a kitchen door.

"I've come to ask if anyone in this house intends to vote on November 7?" was my inquiry when a door opened to me. Sometimes the woman had not registered. Ofttimes she was so sorry she had not. "I meant to," she would confess, "but I'm kept so busy with the children here at home that I just didn't get around to register." On the other hand, the reply would be: "Well, I certainly intend to vote!" Of course, she had heard of Jeannette Rankin? Perhaps she had been to hear her speak? If there was no spontaneous reply of "You can count on this house voting for her," I would fling forth what I had to say. I well knew the majority of those to whom I talked Jeannet Rankin were Democrats, so I said to them: "I am not here to inquire your party. Scarcely anyone thesc days votes a straight ticket; nearly everyone splits his ticket as he sees fit. I am here talking to you, because I hope you want to send a woman to Congress to represent the millions of us women who are not represented in the government of our country." There was no stopping me until I got through what I had to tell them. The women had the civility to listen. None of the hundreds of women with whom I talked shut the door in my face. Many asked me in; said they hadn't yet thought much who they would vote for. And in their kitchens, over their soap suds and crying babies I told them: "The reason you can vote this year for President is because Jeannette Rankin went all over Montana working to give us women the vote. You know your friends back in the East can't have their say about who is to be President, or who will go to Congress. But you can. And do you realize that if Montana puts Jeannette Rankin in Congress, that Montana is sending the first woman to Congress in the history of the United States! The way I feel about it, Montana has put her up and I'd hate to see the State start something it couldn't finish. For you know as well as I do, that there are going to be women in Congress, and why shouldn't we put in the first?" Then without catching my breath, for I soon learned that at the end of my next sentence I would have time to, I announced, "and many of us feel that a woman has a mind as well as a man—"

"I should say so!" the woman never failed to exclaim. "And do you know, I think she has more mind than a man. Why, my husband—"

At this point I would swing back to the object of my visit. Telling the woman I was glad to find that was the way she looked at the matter, I would turn to go, with a hope that she would talk it over with her husband to see if he would not be willing to do his part to give a woman a chance.

Now and then on my route of canvassing I would halt a man delivering groceries or a milk man. Sometimes in a back yard doing odd jobs I would find a husband. In approaching a man I inverted my method. I wanted him to ask me questions. Of course in every instance came the query whether Jeannette Rankin could "fill the job?" My suggestion then was that if people had thought so highly of her as to put her on the ticket, she ought to be a woman of enough efficiency to carry out her duties in Congress. I would conclude with the exclamation: "Give her a chance to show what a woman can do—why, in two years if you don't want her to remain in Congress, you can take her out!" Then the man would say, "Yes, that's true." And repeating the words of my wish would promise to "think it over."

A novice at canvassing I found the experience of interest, yet grinding; a work which needed fire in the soul to keep the weary body in motion. In the morning I would canvass up until the noon dinner hour. I stopped only when I felt at the next house I would surely be stirred in with the frying potatoes, or dished out with the stew. In the afternoon I would begin so early that the women were washing those noon dinner dishes. I talked with women who, inside a half closed door, listened to my message with the rigidity of a broom stick. Among the women with whom I talked were Democrats, Republicans, Socialists. To those who said that in the coming election they were interested in but one issue—prohibition—I got them to listen to me by telling them that Jeannette Rankin stood for that prohibition which they so much desired. I talked with the woman who embodied the primitive argument against women in public life; the woman who did not wish to be bothered with "such things"—who did not want to think about what was happening beyond the frosted glass of her front door. Around the noon hour more than once my knocking woke a woman up. The door would be opened a slit. In night gown and bare feet, and a tale of whisky in her breath, wonderingly the woman would look at me. The fresh cold air that sucked in past her would wake her up enough to grasp what I told her. And I talked to these women who had registered and said they intended to vote.

The amiable attitude of the majority of women at whose doors I knocked, was a happy surprise; for in my house to house canvass I found I had been preceded by a woman who had been sent out to canvass for the "wets." At many homes I was told about it. "She put a lot of literature on the table before she left. But I didn't read it!" these women exclaimed. "I just took her anti stuff and threw it in the fire!" After my several days of canvassing in that town, there were three things which to me appeared inevitable—Wilson re-elected, Montana dry, and Jeannette Rankin in Congress.

For throughout Montana, election bettors could find almost no one who would bet against Jeannette Rankin being elected. Notwithstanding her popularity, she did not carry the State like wild fire; when it came to the counting of her votes one realized there had been a subtle opposition. There were those who did not wish to see a woman in so high an office; moreover she was on the Republican ticket in a State strongly Democratic. Yet her election was made possible by the Republicans who stood by her, by sympathttic Socialists, and by "Jeannette Rankin Democrats." Her election was made possible by the scores of women who worked voluntarily in her behalf, all over the State. Postals with printed data about Jeannette Rankin were sent out from headquarters in Helena to these interested women. In the blank space left on the postals, the women wrote to people throughout their counties little notes of personal appeal. In one town I called upon a woman who was doing all in her power for the election of Jeannette Rankin. What she accomplished she considered amounted to little, but in reality it amounted to much. So crippled with rheumatism she could only creep around her room; one hand so full of pain that it was useless; yet with her other she wrote hundreds of postals and letters to her wide range of acquaintance throughout Montana. "You know," she told me, "we must keep favorable thoughts for Miss Rankin, circulating."

They say it was a woman's election. So it was—proportionately! Men voters are double and more the number of women voters in Montana. And many men of the State exhibited the same fairness that they showed in the granting of equal suffrage, by their help to put a woman in Congress. Montana has accomplished that which she undertook. Woman's viewpoint is needed in Congress—and to the House of Representatives Montana is sending the first Congresswoman.

Prodigy.

GIFTED CHILD TO PLAY.

Members of Badger State Society to Hear Seven-Year-Old Violinist. Attractive Programme is Arranged for Tomorrow Evening.

Meeting of the Wisconsin State Society tomorrow night in The Times Assembly Rooms will be made notable by an exceedingly attractive programme. Musical numbers, dances, the timely playlet "War or Peace" and an address by Harry E. Andrews, managing editor of The Times, will provide an unusually enjoyable evening.

The gifted children, Bernice E. Graves, 7 years of age, and Virginia Lee Glockner, 10 years old, her accompanist, will present a unique musical sensitiveness and sweet is a child prodigy, who even at the age of 5 won her hearers with her musical sentitiveness and sweet charm of her ways. At that time she played on an eighth-sized violin. She now is using a larger instrument. With earnestness of her work, under her teacher, J. Robert Saunders, she has learned the forms of the major and minor scales, can tell any key at a glance, can play all the scales diatonically, and in broken thirds as well as arpeggios and chromatics. She is also beginning the study of theory. Her work is exceedingly interesting.

Beside this novelty, Phoebe Ara Bowler, gifted young pianiste, will give a solo that promises much pleasure to her hearers. Beatrice Lindenberger and Irene Hissem of the Wallis Dramatic School will present an interpretative dance. The playlet "War or Peace" will be presented by Vivian Wikadal and Winona Wenzlick, two talented young women.

BUSINESS TALKS TO WOMEN.

BY ELLEN LANE SPENCER, Author of "The Efficient Secretary."

Starting a Business on Ten Dollars.

Let us change an old saying, "Truth is sadder than fiction." The saddest thing about truth is that it is an incontrovertible fact that you cannot escape, whereas fiction is so much more enjoyable for everyone in that the writer by a few strokes of his or her typewriter can create fire, flood, earthquake, or a million dollars, to relieve an apparently cornered situation.

Thus, the writer who tells us about the business girl who started a successful business of hand-painting dress buttons on a capital of $10, and is now the hand-painted dress button queen with a million dollars in bank, draws a lot on fiction, with an immeasurably bad influence on the reader who happens to be susceptible.

For the sake of fiction, the writer tells about the $10 and fails to mention the $1000 that the dress button queen's father, brother, or uncle, put into the business two days later. Also for artistic effect, the writer declines to point out that for a year and a half the business did not make anything.

We read of scores of them every year—but never a word of warning sounded about the thousands who fail to get there. That is truth, inartistic truth, and fiction is pleasanter reading.

Let the ambitious girl who reads of big successes made on a capital of $10 or $100, make out a list of, say, the stationery needs of a business just starting—consider how many letters must be mailed at the start at 2 cents postage each, then consider how far small capital goes in starting business.

Let the business girl who wishes to start in business figure out the cost of rent, furniture, stock, stationery and telephone for her place of business for three months—what it will cost her to live for that period, and if this sum and a little more is available, at the end of three months she may find herself on a break-even basis, if the business in which she proposes to engage is one for which there is an exceptional demand. If she must create the demand she will have to support herself and her business for a year.

Have you girls who are ambitious for a business of your own ever heard this? Probably not—it is sadder than fiction, but truer.

MEN I HAVE MET.

BY TOM FITCH.

Statesmen.

Upon the completion of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in 1859 passes were issued by it to every newspaper office in the United States to enable it to send a representative to Washington and return, to attend the celebration of the completion of the road. I was deputed by the Milwaukee Free Democrat, on which paper I was employed as a local reporter, to make this trip. In the excursionist car I met Francis P. Blair, Jr., then a Republican member of Congress from Missouri, but who nine years afterwards was the Democratic nominee for Vice-President. Mr. Blair wore, as an ornament to his watch chain, a small piece—set in gold—of the rope with which John Brown was hung, whether as a tribute to the memory of Brown or to the achievement of the hangman I do not know. Blair was on his way to Wheeling, W. Va., to address a Republican meeting, and I accepted his invitation to stop over and listen to him. I remember his gaunt personality and his raucous voice. In his speech he was especially bitter on Stephen A. Douglas, whom he compared to Milton's Satan, "Squat like a toad close to the ear of Eve." Blair took back a good deal nine years afterwards. Indeed, he was chiefly renowned for taking things back.

In the summer of 1860, when I came to California on the voyage from Panama to San Francisco, on board the steamer Uncle Sam, I met daily Judah P. Benjamin and Reverdy Johnson, who were on their way to San Francisco to attend the New Almaden quicksilver case. I met them but—.

"We did not speak as we passed by,
I to J. P. or him to I."

Indeed, we did not really pass by, for they occupied quarters abaft the main shaft, while I, owing to the unremitting attentions of the journal with which I had been connected, made my temporary home on the forward deck.

The next time I met Benjamin was in January, 1861, when seated in the gallery of the United States Senate chamber, I saw this lion of the tribe of Judah—as he loved to be called—listening to the farewell speech of Jefferson Davis.

Davis did not place his withdrawal from the Senate on any other ground than that of logical and passionless performance of what he conceived to be his "duty to his State." He disclaimed any allegiance to the Calhoun doctrine of nullification and secession, which, he said, were antagonistic principles. He did not believe that a State had any right to remain in the Union and disregard its constitutional obligations by a nullification of an act of Congress. Secession, he claimed, belonged to a different class of remedies and was to be justified upon the basis that the States are sovereign and that the Union was a mere compact, from which they had a right to withdraw with or without a reason. If he thought that Mississippi was withdrawing without sufficient provocation or without any existing necessity, he would nevertheless be bound by her action and terminate his functions as a Senator. Mr. Davis said that he was too ill to make a lengthy argument and he looked it. His tall, gaunt figure, rises before me even now.

Six weeks later, on the night of March 3, 1861, I was privileged as a temporary private secretary to Senator E. D. Baker to be present in the Senate lobby and "meet" the great historic figures of that era. I heard Crittenden of Kentucky—white-haired and eagle-eyed—plead for the compromise measure which he believed would preserve the Union from impending civil war. One of the Virginia Senators denounced Crittenden's measure as a bread pill, and Douglas interjected the remark that hypochondriacs were often best cured of imaginary disorders by the use of bread pills.

Gliding about the floor on that night, with the footfall of a boy and a smile which proclaimed you to be one of his closest friends, although he had never before met you, was the statesman-Senator from New York, William Henry Seward, whose memory is known to fame in many ways, but especially as the author of the phrase that "between freedom and slavery there is an irrepressible conflict of opposite and enduring forces."

Yet Lincoln said months before that "a house divided against itself cannot stand," and Lincoln quoted that idea, if not those words, from an editorial in the Charleston Mercury. Great thoughts are often in the air and strike many men simultaneously.

I left Washington the next week for California, and did not see the Federal Capitol again until the spring of 1869, when I went there as a member of the forty-first Congress from the State of Nevada. My first active service there was, at the request of Gen. Redington of Sacramento, to co-operate with Congressman Sargent of California in securing the election of James G. Blaine as Speaker. There was a close contest for that office between him and Dawes of Massachusetts, and Sargent and I placed ourselves in the hands of Judge Peters of Maine, with liberty to trade our votes for clerk, and sergeant-at-arms, and postmaster, and any other outlying office, in exchange for votes for Blaine, and the judge executed that trading job with a celerity and efficiency that would have won encomiums from a San Francisco Barbary Coast politician. Blaine was neither ungrateful nor forgetful, and after his election invited us to choose our own places on committees—which we did. No man lived more vividly in American public life while he lived or seemed to die more utterly when he died than Mr. Blaine. He was a brilliant orator, a fearless and sagacious statesman and ordinarily a clever political manager. He made a mistake which cost him the Presidency when he described Roscoe Conkling as a strutting turkey cock.

"Lord Roscoe," as New Yorkers called him, never forgave Blaine; indeed, he never overlooked any depreciation of his personality. He inherited his self-esteem from his paternal ancestor. That gentleman, who had been a member of Congress from New York while Roscoe was still a youth, many years afterwards emerged from his retirement to canvass for Grant in 1872. He was introduced to an audience in a Pennsylvania city as "the father of Roscoe Conkling." With voice hoarse with rage he said: "My fellow-citizens, I served with credit as a member of Congress, and I have represented my country in a foreign land, and now in my old age it seems that my only title to distinction is that of being 'the father of Roscoe Conkling.'"

Ben Butler was hated by Congressman Farnsworth of Illinois who secured the appointment of a committee to investigate the construction of the New York and Boston Customhouse, expecting to show that Butler as a large owner in the Cape Ann Granite quarries had profited improperly by a contract to furnish granite for their construction. I was appointed a member of the committee and we went to Boston during the holiday recess. There I discovered that Farnsworth was running the investigation to "down" Butler, and with a natural love of fair play as well as a general admiration for the "grand old man" of Massachusetts, I managed to throw the doors wide open for the presentation of Butler's side of the case. When we returned to Washington Farnsworth prepared a report smirching Butler and secured to it the signatures of a majority of the committee. Then he handed it to me to sign. I put it in my pocket and said I would look it over and return it in the morning. After reading it I sent it around to Butler's house with a suggestion that he might find time to brief his side of the case.

At midnight he sent me a brief which I put in shape as a minority report and the next morning I returned the majority report to Farnsworth with a copy of the minority report. Both reports were submitted without discussion and after hearing thme read the House adopted the minority report.

Farnsworth never forgave me and Butler never forgot me. I verily believe that if I had introduced bills to appropriate money to cover Nevada with public buildings and aid in gridironing that State with land grant roads, Butler would have supported them all.

No State in the Union had a greater representation in both branches of the Forty-first Congress than Massachusetts. At the head of all stood Charles Sumner. The thirty-two years that have come and gone since he passed into the great unknown have not dimmed the luster of his fame. The achievements of others in the forum have not caused men to forget him. It was my privilege to meet him several times in conference committees and he was always courteous and considerate and never dominating in disposition or manner.

His speech on the "Crime Against Kansas," lives as a classic in oratory as great as the appeal to Demosthenes to march against Philip, or the speech by which Cicero blasted through all time the name of Verres. Of Senator Butler of South Carolina, he said: "He has chosen a mistress who, though ugly to others, is always lovely to him, though polluted in the sight of the world, is chaste in his sight—I mean the harlot slavery. For her his tongue is always profuse in words. Let her be impeached in character, or any proposition made to shut her out from the extension of her wantonness, and no extravagance of manner or hardihood of assertion is then too great for this Senator. The frensy of Don Quixote in behalf of his wench, Dulcinea del Toboso, is all surpassed. He discharged the loose expectoration of his speech upon the representative and the people of Kansas. There was no extravagance of the ancient parliamentary debate which he did not repeat, nor any possible deviation from truth which he did not make."

Concerning Senator Butler's state Mr. Sumner said, "Were the whole history of South Carolina blotted out of existence from its very beginning down to the day of the last election, civilization might lose little."

For this speech Preston H. Brooks, a nephew of Senator Butler and a Congressman from South Carolina, two days after, while Sumner was seated at his desk in the Senate after adjournment, came behind him and beat him over the head with a heavy stick until Sumner sank to the floor bloody and senseless. Sumner was incapacitated for further work and remained absent from the Senate nearly four years. The justification which Brooks offered for this assault would have been comical if it had not been ghastly.

He said, "I knew that Sumner would not accept a challenge to fight a duel and if I had sent one he might have had me arrested. He had insulted my State and whoever insults my State insults me. I went to work deliberately and speculated somewhat as to whether I should employ a horsewhip or a cowhide, but knowing that the Senator was my superior in strength, it occurred to me that he might wrest it from my hand, and then—"

One of the sharpest tongued orators that ever enlivened the dreariness of the United States Senate was John James Ingalls of Kansas. He had a caustic tongue in private conversation, as well as in public speech. It was my good fortune to occupy a seat at the same table with him one winter at a Washington hotel, and to listen with delight to his comments on men and events. "I pity you Californians, the infliction of your sand lotters," said he. "Kansans are not anarchists or Socialists or nihilists or communists. You may call them hayseeds, but they do not desire the repudiation of debts, public or private, or favor the forcible redistribution of property."

Ingalls did not admire the oratory of Bob Ingersoll. He said that he would give him for his lectures the same advice that a gentleman gave to the keeper of a saloon in Leavenworth, as a recipe for selling more beer, namely, to sell less froth.

This was not fair to Pope Bob, by whose side I have often sat for hours at the Washington Club. We had one fault in common. We did not know how to play draw poker, though we played it all the same. As I read the news the other day from the battle front in Europe forty years shriveled like a scroll and I looked up at the rotund face of Ingersoll and heard his golden voice roll out the following sentences:

"We hear the music of boisterous drums, the silver voices of heroic bugles. We see the pale cheeks of women and the flushed faces of men. We see the soldiers as they march proudly away under the flaunting flags, keeping time to the grand wild music of war—marching down the streets of the great cities, through the towns and across the fields, down to the fields of glory to do and to die. We are by their side on all the gory fields, in the hospitals of pain, on the weary marches. We [illegible] guard with them [illegible] and under [illegible] with them on ravines running [illegible] blood, [illegible] We see them pierced by [illegible] torn with [illegible] forts, and in the whirlwind [illegible] charge, where men become [illegible] with nerves of steel."

THE HARP.

Life found a Harp by the road one day,
A Harp on which none had played;
And he swept his hand o'er the stiffened strings,
But never a sound was made.

Love fluttered by, and he took the Harp
And he said, "It shall sing if I please"—
And but one note came, just a sweet, faint tone
That melted away in the breeze.

Sorrow came by, and he took the Harp,
And he said, "It hath lain full long;"
And Love said, "Thou wilt not make it sing
If I can not waken its song."

Sorrow sighed deep, and he stretched the strings
Until each one whined with the pain;
And he made them quiver and throb and pulse,
And he tightened them in again.

When every string was drawn and taut,
He then would have turned away,
But Life said, "Nay, thou hast tuned the Harp;
Let us hear what thou wilt play."

Oh, those pulsing chords that Sorrow drew!
Oh, that song so thrilling sweet!
E'en Love forgot to scoff, and sank
In awe down at Sorrow's feet.

Oh, that melody so throbbing wild,
Like the cry of a broken heart,
And e'en Love wept as if he had felt
A cut from his own keen dart.

Shadows of night crept over the hills
And stars came out over the lea;
Sorrow gave up the Harp to Life,
And said, "It is tuned for thee."

EDUCATORS.

Howard Lee McBain, who has been made one of the commissioners of education of New York City by Mayor Mitchel, is a Canadian who was educated at Richmond College in Virginia, and Columbia University. After teaching in Richmond and at the University of Virginia he returned to Columbia and resumed the study of his specialty, which he now teaches. Then followed a year of service on the faculty of George Washington University, in Washington, D. C., and three years of work on the faculty of the University of Wisconsin.

The new secretary of the British National Education Association, Mr. A. J. Mundella, has had many years' experience of educational administration. His own education he received at Nottingham and also in Paris, and subsequently he entered upon a business career. Eventually he took up the journalistic profession. At present, in addition to carrying out the duties of secretary to the National Education Association he is chairman of the managers of about fifty schools in the St. Pancras district, where 50,000 children are taught. The work of after-school care committees also claims his attention.

Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice has sailed for the Amazon River with a party of scientists, which includes besides Mrs. Rice, Dr. William T. Councilman, pathologist of Harvard University, Earl S. Church of Newport of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Ernest Howe of Newport, geologist. The expedition expects to make a topographical survey of portions of the Amazon Valley and interior districts and studies of the disease of natives in that section.

Dr. Eric Mjoberg, a Swedish explorer, has arrived in the United States to study the latest inventions in aviation preparatory to making arrangements for an exploration trip into the interior of New Guinea. HAPPY THOUGHT CLUB SYMPOSIUM.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

No race or nation has a monopoly of happy thoughts. They may blossom and bloom in any clime and the Happy Thought Club recognizes this fact. No barriers of creed or color are reared against aspirants for membership. All that is essential is the disposition to think cheerily and the ability to express the thought cleverly.

So it is that the membership roll already includes such minds as Hari-Kari Shimose, the Nipponese nightingale, and Peter Horse Pistol, the Pawnee scout and medicine man. Also the Philippines, Hawaii and Mexico are represented on the roster. Europe would be on the roster also but for the fact that they have had no happy thoughts there for two years. It is difficult for men to have genial fancies while they are hurling deadly missiles at one another.

The latest alien applicant for admission to the club is Don Caesar Cafeteria, a retired chewing-gum baron from Yucatan, who has bought him a date orchard in Southern California and is spending his leisure time in a compilation of the [illegible] literature of Central America. His chicle plantation on the Gulf of Campeche was raided by revolutionists and he came to this country to carry out his literary ambitions in peace. He speaks the English language with purity and precision and is also the author of a number of Spanish ballads dealing with romance and adventure in the tropics, and which he will translate for the benefit of the club collection.

Sandow Hostetter, a literary descendant of the bitter builder, is also desirous of being annexed by the Happy Thoughters. He began his career by writing stuff to boom the sale of stomach stimulants in prohibition States and some of his work was so appealing that it would make a Kansas farmer climb from his cot in the midst of the night and walk eight miles in search of a blind pig. He is also the author of the slogan, "Better buy bitters than [illegible]." He says that he is now making his headquarters on the Pacific Coast and has simply got to have an outlet for his happy thoughts. He offers this fragment to the dream ballad contest:

I had a dream—and you were at my side,
With eyes that sparkled with love's tender gleam;
You did not strive your passion then to hide—
Alas! I wakened—it was but a dream.

The secretary was instructed to notify both Don Caesar and Sandow that their names had been placed on the waiting list and would be put through when all formalities were complied with.

In awarding the prizes for the best offerings in the kissing contest a little scandal was avoided with difficulty. The referees were the shades of the eminent amatory experts, Lord Byron, Thomas Moore and Robert Burns. They were secured through the efforts of Mme. Uneeda [illegible], the club clairvoyant. When the report was made out it gave the grand prize to Owen Moore whose offering began with the lines

"Could Love imprisoned be he'd there be found Caged in thy velvet lips, where joys abound."

At first hint of this a roar went up from Oscar Opdyke Onions, who had learned that Owen Moore was a great grand nephew of Tom Moore, one of the judges. He had the clairvoyant call the spirits together and then laid the matter before them. It was found that neither Byron nor Burns was aware of the relationship and that the Irish poet had slyly put one over on them while eloquently pressing the worth of his kinsman.

When the situation was understood warm words followed between Byron and Moore and finally the Irishman chased Byron in the river and he had to swim across the Styx to save himself from a beating up.

Left to himself, Bobbie Burns declared he would settle the contest with the dice box. The name of Uncle William Snaggs was good for four sixes and carried off the first prize. Arthur Moore Cumming—who is no kin of the poet, won second honors and the prize for the best definition of a kiss went to Angela Kuhn, who described it as a place where two souls meet.

All the winners will have to do to secure the prizes is to pay the freight on them from the Bethlehem steel works, where they were deposited.

Uncle William Snaggs is not aware of the honor that thus unexpectedly came to him. He was not at the club dinner on Thanksgiving, as that was irrigating day at his place. The Sage of the San Gabriel Wash sent the following message to the brethren as an aftermath:

"The great Gringo Eat Fest hath, once again, passed into the nothingness from whence it came, the same nothingness into which it passeth year by year, each time leaving mankind a little weaker in the department of the interior than before its advent. I know, for I celebrated and am now on a diet of bean soup and lithia water. At first I thought I could trace my condition to a view I had of the new Myra Marr poster, but since wifie has asked me to stop talking in my sleep I ask Myra's pardon for my unfounded suspicions. So far as I am concerned, the turk's revenge is complete, and I doff my bonnet to him.

"Oh noble turk, thou didst not die in vain, for ere the sun beyond the western hills did sink last Thursday mankind, full of pain from indigestion and its kindred ills, did groan and curse thee loud and long and wished thy kind a thousand miles away. Thou are revenged upon the hungry throng that made a feast of thee Thanksgiving Day. The [illegible] learned will ere long be forgot, the stomachaches and ills we have endured, and shortly thy descendants will be caught and on the sacrificial alter be immured. But two and twenty days of grace remain; the headsman grimly with his ax at play. Hope and reprieve beyond that time is vain, they e'en will eat thee before Christmas

Although the Myra Marr posters were not responsible for the condition of Uncle William, they did create a decided sensation when first put to view. The delicate beauty of the heroine of "Henrietta of the Hungry Heart" has been intelligently accentuated by the artist. The beauteous Myra has been shown in a characteristic pose. She is out in her rose arbor playing with the humming birds. She is garbed in simple girlish garb and full of innocence and expectancy. A sound is heard and she springs up like a startled fawn. She puts her hand to her ear and fancies she can hear the hoarse rumble of the brewery wagon, whose coming she awaits with childish eagerness.

At that moment the artist has found her.

But, alas! it was not to be as she fancied. What she heard was the heavy breathing of the bandit, Kleotas of the King Killers, who had come with a platoon of husky piano movers to kidnap her, to imprison her in a hogshead and to transport her overseas in the hold of a cattle ship. 'Tis a wild night, me lads, and heaven pity those who are abroad on the face of the deep!

MYRA MARR,
in "Henrietta of the Hungry Heart."

The poster aroused the utmost enthusiasm when first shown to the club. It is mainly in black and white, but the lilylike perfection of the heroine is indelibly there. The charming ingenuousness of the face with the ear delicately attuned as if to harken to the reverent call of the iceman form a picture that is not to be forgotten.

The Old Resident gazed at it with passionate fervor and then put on his hat and went out without saying a word. Four hours later the Chief of Police telephoned in that a squad of officers had arrested a wild man, who claimed to be a member of the club and was wearing the club pin in his necktie. He had wrecked one cafe and was starting in on another when surrounded by the cops. All the way to the station he persisted in singing at the top of his voice:

"Oh, Myra Marr; oh, Myra Marr,
I wonder where in (hic) you are?"

There was a strong suspicion abroad that the boisterous personage was none other than the Old Resident, who had been suddenly overcome by the appealing beauty of the poster.

Now that the club drama is safely on the stocks, attention turns to the next venture. It is proposed to organize a No. 2 company and have a couple of offerings under way at all times. Violet Veronica Busby has been anxious to have the club undertake her masterpiece, "Reno Ruth's Revenge," with herself as the star, but the scenario has not yet been given out.

Prof. Watts Eaton Hughes is preparing a Shakespearean review which he calls "Midsummer Night's Scream," and which would claim the services of some of the best film stars in addition to the club members. He proposes to do Shakespeare electrically and will have all the leading characters of the Bard of Avon brought together in one modern production. He wants Charlie Chaplin to play Hamlet, while Roscoe Arbuckle does the ghost in a union suit. He would have Douglas Fairbanks and Fay Tincher as Petruchio and Katherine and have Richard swapping his kingdom for a jitney instead of a broken-down plug of a horse. He wants De Wolf Hopper for Falstaff and thinks Ham and Bud might get away with Romeo and Juliet. He wants Lady Macbeth in a skirt dance, and he wants Brutus to prick Caesar with a needle full of hop. He wishes to see Theda Bara wandering around the forest of Arden as Rosalind, while Ambrose tacked up real estate signs on the trees as Orlando. There are a lot of other things he wants—most of which he won't get—but he has sketched out a plot that will hold the characters together long enough to get in front of the screen.

Members of the club were asked to suggest further operations of the club in the way of film productions.

All applications for club membership; all offerings in the prize competition for dream poems and all club correspondence may be addressed to Eugene Brown, Editorial Rooms, The Times.

SARTORIAL STARS.

English Actress Asserts American Women Know How to Dress Better than Any She has Seen in Travels Around the World.

Viola Roach, the English leading woman who will be seen this week in "Hobson's Choice," at the Mason, compliments the American woman on her personal appearance.

"There is no woman in the world who can wear clothes to such wonderful advantage as the American," said Miss Roach the other day. "In numerous respects she is far ahead of her French sister, who is generally thought to be the best-dressed woman of the world. The French proverb is: 'If you have sense you will make yourself pretty. If you have money you will make yourself elegant.'

"The well-dressed American woman really far excels the Parisian in originality and finish. There is a certain completeness to the American woman's toilette which the Parisian lacks through a fondness for streaming ribbons and fluffy things that soon become bedraggled looking.

"The foreign women are quite envious of the American woman's independence and originality. She is recognized all over the world for a jauntiness quite different to any other women on the hemisphere, and people can talk all they want to about the wonderful style of the 'chic Parisienne,' but she cannot compare with the well-groomed American. I have traveled over the world three times and never have seen such exquisite creatures in any country as you boast of here in the States."

INVENTS OWN EFFECTS.

Novel Fire Illusion in Act by Clever Vaudeville Man.

Not the least interesting thing about "The Forest Fire," the tremendously dramatic spectacle on the Orpheum bill this week, is the fact that Langdon McCormack not only wrote the drama, but he created the entire spectacle, including the electrical devices, painting and the scenery and staging.

Representation of fire, while not new to the stage, has never been offered except by the aid of silk and blowers, and Loie Fuller patented these effects the world over fifteen years ago. McCormick invented his own effects without the aid of silk or blowers, and they are said to be even more realistic. So realistic, in fact, is the fire effect that a note on the programme will inform the timid that no real fire is used.

How Many Housewives Read the Daily Quotations of Silver Bullion and Know Its Value?

Yesterday's price was seventy-four three-eighth cents an ounce. On its value is based the cost of all wares made of Sterling Silver. Steadily the price has been advancing point by point. The consequence now is, all Table Silver must advance in price. Manufacturers, today, cannot buy Silver at seventy-four an ounce and sell their products at today's prices, without a direct loss. Before January 1st, prices will advance as much as 15 per cent. if not more. If you are in the market to replenish your Silver, any time within the next thirty days, this information will be especially interesting to you. We have every reason to believe that this advance will be a permanent one. Sterling Silver, bought at today's prices, is a particularly desirable gift for Christmas—the price is attractive—we are sure we can save you fifteen per cent, perhaps more. This makes Silver a "good buy." Personally, we have decided we will not change or advance the price of any article in our immense stock of Silver until after the Christmas trade is over. This applies, however, only to articles now in stock. No special orders can be taken for future delivery unless at the then prevailing prices. Spoons, forks and heavy weight Silver will be much affected by this advance. We send out this warning to our customers and friends that they may avail themselves of the opportunity to replenish their stock of Silver before the advance is put into effect. Our stock of Gorham Silver is so large that we are sure we can meet any demand. Profits on Sterling Silver are small—the saving of fifteen per cent to you means a big bargain. Kindly think this matter over and avail yourselves of this opportunity to add to your Silver at today's prices, any pieces that may be missing.

Signal Players Have Exciting Mishap, Too, by the Way.

After a week's absence from the studio, Helen Holmes, Paul G. Hurst, William Brunton, William Behrens, and others have returned from the Yosemite Valley with exterior scenes made for the eighth and ninth episodes of the serial, "A Lass of the Lumberlands." Since their return the interiors of the ninth have been completed, and the two Signal companies have combined to produce in record time the interiors of the tenth and eleventh installment so they may make another trip to the mountains for exteriors before the winter snows begin in earnest.

Returning from location on a hand car with a push car trailing, on the last day of their stay in the valley, the company met with an accident which laid up two of the players temporarily and distributed minor bruises and scratches impartially among all the others of the party. The cars were hurrying along a piece of down-grade when they struck a curve too sharp to be made at the speed at which they were traveling. The car jumped the track, throwing the players to the ground. Paul Hurst, director, struck on his shoulder, tearing loose the ligaments and necessitating that he wear it in a brace for several weeks; Behrens was thrown against a small boulder, the shock of the fall preventing him from working for two days.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. Charles Farnam, who has been decorated personally by the Crown Prince of Serbia with the Order of St. Sava for her services in Serbian relief work, is from New York, and was the first woman of any nationality to enter reconquered Serbian territory. She accompanied the Crown Prince when the Serbians crossed the Cerna River above Dobroveni and stormed the Bulgarian stronghold of Brod. She nursed in Serbia through the first and second Balkan wars and through the typhus epidemic of the present war.

Mrs. George Clifford Boarman of Washington, D. C., has a maid in her employ who has been in the service of the Boarman family for eighty-seven years, or since she was born. According to Mrs. Court F. Wood, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, this is a world's record for length of service in one family.

Quitting her position as stenographer to go to the wash tub, Miss Georgianna Cuthbert is making $68 a week, and she handles only five washes to do it, according to her testimony in the equity action in which she is defendant and Mrs. Marie Lusson, her neighbor, plaintiff. Miss Cuthbert informed Judge Swartz that one family alone paid her $30, another $12, two $9 and a fifth $8 a week. She gets the business, she says, because she does not use bleach or acids in cleansing them. "None of the clothing I handle is soiled, only mussed," she said. Mrs. Marie Lusson seeks to prevent Miss Cuthbert erecting a laundry in the rear of her lot in Ardmore, Pa.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

Alvan T. Fuller of the Ninth Massachusetts Congress District will make a unique entrance into the Sixty-fifth Congress as the only member within the memory of living man elected upon an anti-pork-barrel platform. Congresses have been tipped over completely through campaigns in which party extravagance has been one of the battle-cries, but never before, has a Congressman been defeated because he got too much for his district or his State.

Mr. Bryan was turned down twice in the Nebraska campaign. His first defeat was when the Democrats refused to send him as a delegate to the Democratic National Convention, and the second one was the defeat of his brother for the gubernatorial nomination. While he says he will retain one of his homes in Nebraska and will continue to be a voter in that State, he has dismantled his home at Fairview, shipped a portion of the furniture to his winter home at Miami, Fla., and is sending his splendid library, the pride of his heart, to his summer home at Asheville, N. C., at which place it is said he will hereafter have his residence.

Merrit Lane of Jersey City, who has been named vice-chancellor of the Equity Court of New Jersey, will draw a salary of $12,000 a year for as much of his seven-year term as he fills. He was graduated from the New York Law School, and was admitted to the bar in 1902. During the period when the State's largest insurance company was changing from a stock company to a mutual basis he was prominent as counsel for the policyholders.

Business associates and employees of Thomas A. Edison sent to his office recently a hand-carved cabinet said to be worth approximately $7000. The cabinet is an exact reproduction of the famous piece of wood carving which the inventor admired when on his trip to Paris a few years ago. Knowing of his admiration for the cabinet, his friends sent an expert carver to Paris to make a copy.

Harry Thatcher Dunn of Toledo, O., is said to be the most heavily insured man in the country, as he has taken out policies aggregating $1,800,000 on his life. Dunn is president of the Fiske Rubber Company and vice-president of the Willys-Overland Automobile Company. Premiums alone amount to approximately $1000 a week.

Capt. Frederick Courtney Selous, the explorer and big-game hunter, now serving in the English army, has been given the Distinguished Service Order for "conspicuous gallantry, resource, and endurance." He is a member of the Royal Fusiliers. The battalion with which Capt. Selous is associated is composed of men who have seen service on the frontiers of the empire, and he was largely instrumental in their recruitment.

TIME AND TOIL GIVEN GRATIS TO UPLIFT PARENT AND CHILD

Through Its Seventeen Departments, Administered by Public-spirited Women, the Los Angeles Federation of Parent-teacher Associations Promote Health, Education, Morals and Patriotism of the City's People, with Special Attention Given to the Immigrant and the Poor.

With a corps of altruistic, public-spirited women imparting the impetus of zeal and self-sacrifice, the Los Angeles Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations is doing a steadily-growing work assigned for the betterment of the child, the parent and the community. The poor, the "little mothers," the immigrant know this work from intimate association and from real benefits they receive. The educators of the city, the charitable, the leaders in such uplight work also know what the federation is doing, so that, with its State and national affiliations, it has the indorsement and support of many of America's most prominent people.

The specific object of this federation is to co-operate with the State and National Congress of Mothers. It endeavors to promote loftier ideals of the meaning and purpose of parenthood; to co-operate with educators and legislatures in securing the best physical, mental and moral training for children, and to assist in procuring the best possible legislation for the development of the Los Angeles public schools.

The California Congress of Mothers was organized here in 1900, with Mrs. W. W. Murphy as the first president. The work grew so rapidly that in 1910 it was thought advisable to separate the State from the local work and the Los Angeles federation was formed, with Mrs. Chalmers Smith the first president.

Not only has the work of the local circles, situated in almost every school district in the city, grown in interest and efficiency to the greater advantage of the children, but has been so enlarged that it now reaches out its arms to all the school children in the city needing aid.

To fulfill this purpose, seventeen departments are now in operation under the management of this federation.

HEALTH WORK.

It is the duty of the Clinic Committee to co-operate with the health and development department of the public schools in caring for the health of school children and to assist in providing medical, surgical and dental services for those whose parents are unable to make such provision. During the past five years the following treatments have been given to children whose parents are unable to pay the customary dental and medical fees:

Dental clinic, 8569; eye, 2679; ear, 539; general medicine, 277; osteopath, 664; speech, 107. Total treatments for the year, 12,845; average treatments per day, 76.

On May 12 the cornerstone of the new clinic was laid at College and Yale streets. This new building, costing $45,000, was the gift of the late O. T. Johnson, and is considered a valuable asset to Los Angeles' educational system.

DAY NURSERIES.

The day nurseries started with the well-known Utah-street establishment. The need has grown until there are now four day nurseries, and a new one will soon be opened. Here the older children—"little mothers"—bring the babies, that are cared for and given a wholesome noon meal of milk and crackers, thus allowing the older children to go to school and enabling the mothers to go out and earn a living.

EDUCATIONAL COMMITTEE.

Mrs. O. T. Helpling, chairman, says, "It is the duty of the Educational Committee to bring to the federation, in the form of lectures, the newest and best along educational lines; to encourage the establishment of social centers in the schools, where parents, teachers and educators may meet and discuss conditions and topics vital to their particular needs and for the betterment of home and childhood. We are working to bring before them from time to time, all that is new and best along these lines from an educational standpoint."

The Educational Committee is endeavoring to help the immigrant mother by teaching her English, sewing, good housekeeping and American ways. Many of the little foreigners soon become ashamed of parents who cannot understand English and American ways. This often results in disobedience and incorrigibility.

JUVENILE COURT.

The federation co-operates with the Juvenile Court and probation department in doing constructive and preventive work, thereby educating the public opinion to demand only the best for child welfare. Books on the laws pertaining to children and the ordinances relating to them, which are commonly broken, have been compiled by members of this association and distributed all over this county. Fifteen homes for girls have been found during the past year, and the committee has endeavored to help all children coming to them for assistance, often loaning money, which is paid back out of wages earned.

PATRIOTISM.

One department has aimed to help to a realization that true patriotism is a practical virtue, which should be practiced every day in obeying the laws of our land, promoting the welfare of our homes and our children.

SCHOLARSHIP.

The work of the scholarship committee has been to help to keep in school children who without such aid would be forced to leave their studies to earn wages to assist in supporting the home. A scholarship consists of paying the mother $3 a week, which would be the average earning capacity of the child. Eleven scholarships have been furnished the past year, many car books issued to high school students living too far from the schools to walk, and a large number of text-books have been furnished free to these pupils.

EMERGENCY DEPARTMENT.

During the past year 3500 individuals have been helped through the emergency department. There were twenty nationalities represented. Also, 28,428 garments were distributed. Not all of the contributions came through this department, as some went direct through the schools. At Christmas time 200 baskets of food were given out and a large number of Christmas stockings filled with candy, books and toys, as well as some wearing apparel. Entire outfits for babies, including stockings, dresses and underclothing, were placed in some of the stockings.

The emergency department has a bungalow on Normal Hill, where each week it distributes clothes absolutely free of charge to children who are not very well clad to attend public school.

The council of presidents, of which Mrs. E. H. Noe is now the president, was formed to bring the president of each local association in closer touch, so they may discuss child welfare in the home, church, school and State, and receive a better and wider experience in dealing with their own local problems; it also gives them more prominent representation in the federation.

FINANCE.

The Los Angeles Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations is financed largely by donations, entertainments, etc., as the dues are less than nominal, only 1 cent per member being paid. Last year the total receipts, aside from State dues, were approximately $3000, of which less than $75 was from dues. The expenditures were over $2600. This year the dues will be 3 cents per member. Every working member of this organization gives her time, strength and ability without money and without price, feeling that the greatest work we can do in this world is to help the coming generation to its best and finest development.

Mrs. C. C. Noble, the present federation president, is largely responsible for the big membership of which this organization is composed, as she has been national, State, county and city membership organizer more than twelve years.

The Congress of Mothers, of which this federation is a part, is the only child-welfare organization which is officially recognized by the United States government, through P. P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education.

WHO THEY ARE.

The founders are: Mrs. Theodore W. Birney, Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst, Mrs. George Alfred Fletcher, recording secretary, Philadelphia; Mrs. George K. Johnson, auditor, Langhorne, Pa.

The national advisory council includes Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Hon. P. P. Claxton, Washington, D. C.; Rev. Josiah Strong, New York; Roger B. McMullen, Chicago; Frederic Schoff, Philadelphia; G. Stanley Hall, Ph. D., Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, Chicago; Dr. William P. Wilson, Philadelphia; Hon. Elmer Ellsworth Brown, New York; Hon. Charles R. Skinner, New York; A. A. Birney, Washington; George K. Johnson, Philadelphia; William E. Bryan, Ph. D., Bloomington, Ind.

The State federation is also indorsed by the State Board of Education, State Superintendent of Public Instruction Hyatt being on the advisory, and by the Board of Education of Los Angeles, as the Parent-Teacher Federation has been an auxiliary to the board for some years.

BITS OF VERSE.

Morning.

See, today's another day!
  Yesterday was dreary,
But 'tis past, and shall we say
  Morning finds us weary?

Nay, today the sunlight shines—
  Yesterday 'twas raining;
Nature not for long repines—
  Are we still complaining?

Ah, the things we meant to do!
  Yesterday went fleetly,
But today, the long hours through,
  We can fill completely.

Yesterday we failed. Today
  May effect a meeting
With success, who, blithe and gay,
  Waits to give us greeting!

—[Beatrice Barry, in the New York Times.

What is a Christian?

What is a Christian? He who does his best
  To make this warring world love's dwelling place;
Who rends the veils of greed and self-unrest
  Which hide his brothers from their Father's face;
Who, stumbling oft, yet up the steeps doth plod
  And helps wayfarers toward Christ's shining goal
By service to his fellowman until God
  Makes his abode within his struggling soul;
Who bears aloft his torch, though tears and fears
  Obscure it oft and dim with doubt's dissent;
Unwarped by woe, though battle scarred by years
  Of toil for peace and human betterment,
The Christian greets life's onset undismayed
And, dying, meets life's Master unafraid.

—[New York Sun.

Worth Trying.

Did you say you have a trouble?
If you wish to make it double
Just tell it to your neighbor in a confidential way.
Spread it out where folks can know it,
Let your face and actions show it,
Do not let a soul forget it from the dawn until close of day.

Would your soul forget its trouble,
Make it vanish like a bubble?
Then you put that little trouble in a closet out of sight.
Bid it stay there all unheeded,
Say its presence is not needed,
Then you start to work at something that requires mind and might.

Set yourself to work for others,
For your struggling, burdened brothers,
You will find so many burdens heavier than the one you bear,
That your trifling little trouble
Soon will vanish like a bubble,
And your very self, my brother, will forget 'twas ever there.

—[Mabel Brown Denison, in Farm and Home.

Miss Elizabeth Daingerfield, a remarkably clever young woman, has been named as manager of the Kingston horse farm owned by McKinney & Corrigan of Cleveland, Ky. And she finds spare time to contribute reviews of books and essays on topics of interest to the newspapers and magazines of the State. Kingston comprises 7000 acres of rolling blue grass pastures, and spacious paddock in the Russell Cave pike, three miles from Lexington. There are six sires, sixty brood mares and more coming, twenty-six yearlings and twenty-eight weanlings and these, together with the men and women necessary to run such an establishment, are under the care of Miss Daingerfield, who is the last word in efficiency.

SEASON'S OUTPOURING OF NEW FICTION

Novels and Stories by William Dean Howells—Sir Hugh Clifford—Irvin S. Cobb—Arnold Bennett—Rex Beach—Kate Douglas Wiggin—Jack London—Cyrus Townsend Brady—E. Temple Thurston—Dana Burnet—John Trevena—Lucas Malet—Cora Harris—Booth Tarkington—Percival J. Cooney—James Willard Schultz—Baroness Orczy—Maurice Lebanc—Charles Alden Seltzer—and a Score of Others.

"The Leatherwood God."

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS is said to have had in mind for more than a half-century the story he has put into "The Leatherwood God" (The Century Company,) which is based upon an actual occurrence among the early settlers of Ohio and in a locality with which he was familiar in his youth. For many years, so we have heard, he has worked on the manuscript. The essential features of the story and even the important [illegible] of the "god" have been taken literally from records. The result is that he has written not only a novel of interest, but an authentic psychological study of religious hys[illegible]

When Joseph Dylks, slender, tall, with long black hair, comes into the settlement, the several sects are harmoniously worshiping together in the "temple." The city-born generation can have no adequate conception of how seriously the backwoodsmen took their religion, of how [illegible] literal hell and heaven, one of sulphuric flames and the other of [illegible] streets of gold, seemed to them. The city-born people have [illegible] chemistry on the one hand and metaphysical abstractions on the other, for the inexorable [illegible] whom our grandfathers [illegible] in awe and abject humility. The old-fashioned revivals and camp meetings were utter [illegible] of hysteria, when the people were wrought into a condition of [illegible] credulity and actually [illegible] the horizon for the flaming [illegible] of the Last Judgment.

The settlement is in such a condition when Dylks arrives. His mysterious attitude, his horse-like snort of "salvation," his aptitude for quotation from the Bible which by [illegible] convey the assertion that [illegible] of God, put the more credulous in the mood to believe when he [illegible] himself from prophet to [illegible], and at last to the assertion "I am God and the Christ in . . . . There is no salvation but by faith in me."

It is not easy for the present generation to believe that there were people in America so credulous as to worship at the feet of such a character—not even with [illegible] Boston bearing witness of how great has been the influence of latter-day Messiahs, and one of them a woman who wrote a book [illegible] very difficult for people without abundance of faith to understand.

No people in the settlement are aware of Dylks's real identity. His wife has thought him dead and has married, and his brother-in-law. But they are fearful of proclaiming the truth, though they know very well he is neither God, nor a good man. When Dylks takes possession of the common meetinghouse, when he offers to work a miracle and make seamless [illegible], when he commands to be worshiped as the living God, there are people who grovel awe-stricken before him. Justice Braile, however, "the thinker," is unimpressed; and his shrewd questioning wrings from Dylks admission of imposture. When exposed, there are people who cling to faith in him. And when he leads them away to show them heaven in all of its magnificence and is drowned, there remain those who testify that they saw him rise in glory to his mansion in the sky. The enigma is easily solved: they want to believe. They yearn to believe. They are ready to deceive themselves and to seize upon [illegible]. Dylks understands this. He [illegible] it.

"The Leatherwood God" is a model of the art of writing by the process of elimination. Mr. Howells conveys atmosphere, and gives an intimate [illegible] of the settlement, he individualizes his characters, and swiftly, convincingly, develops the dramatic situations, and does it with a minimum of words.

"The Further Side of Silence."

In 1883 an English boy with but [illegible] years on his shoulders entered the service of his government in the Malay Peninsula. Three years later he was sent on a special mission to the Sultan of Pahang, and for two years he lived in communication among the Malays in their native state and the result was, in his own words, "thus at a preposterously early age I was the principal instrument in adding [illegible] square miles of territory to the British dependencies in the East, and this fact forces me to the conclusion that my share in the business stands in need of some explanation and defense, if readers who call themselves Britishers are to be persuaded that I am not merely a [illegible] upon a large scale. The tales and sketches contained in this book supply me with both. I, likewise, have with my own eyes seen a Malayan prison; have lived in a Malayan court; have shared [illegible] of the people of all ranks and classes in their towns and villages, in their rice fields, on their rivers and in the magnificent forests which cover the face of their country. I have traveled with them [illegible], by boats, and raft. I have [illegible] with and against them. I have camped with the downtrodden [illegible] tribes of jungle-dwelling [illegible] Semang, and have heard from their own lips the tale of their [illegible] . . . I have seen them emerge from the dark [illegible] in which their days were spent into the daylight of a personal freedom such as white men [illegible] most mundane things."

So does Sir Hugh Clifford write in his preface to "The Further Side of Silence" (Doubleday, Page [illegible]) [illegible] prose-texture has been compared to that of Joseph Conrad's, but the comparison is not just. Sir Hugh Clifford is superior to the need of a tag whereupon he is credited with some other man's merit. Entirely apart from the signal distinction of having while a boy added 15,000 square miles to the British empire is his marvelous ability to tell a story, to tell it with dramatic intensity, and with words that seem chosen as a lapidary chooses gems for a queen's ornament.

These are tragic tales with the wall of the forest aborigines echoing between the periods; adventurous tales, alert with excitement; picturesque and romantic tales that are well-nigh unbelievable, but which at the same time seem real—a paradox, if you please to have it so, but such a paradox as one may find in all stories that are cherished as of extreme value. The intrigue in "At a Malayan Court" makes one breathe the faster for the reading; and "The Ghoul" and "The Were-Tiger" tend to stiffen the hair in uncanny fright; those of warm red blood that love the lure of danger will feel their hearts pound hard before "In the Valley of the Telom" is finished; and such a tale of loyalty as "One Who Had Eaten My Rice" shows better than argumentative words could ever do why this stripling from England welded a new kingdom to the Victorian empire.

There are many stories in the book, nineteen in all, but that of "The Further Side of Silence" for imaginative beauty and exalted tragedy cannot be considered inferior to any. The theme is something like that in W. H. Hudson's "Green Mansions;" a glorious woman of the forest is murdered by the cruel savages that think her a foul witch.

Yet another fascination is woven into the tales. In every paragraph the author not only shows intimate familiarity with his strange people, which is expected of one who has lived so long among them; but, without imposing on his narrative, without digressions and wanderings, he offers a great wealth of information on customs and taboos, the rituals and intricate formality of these savages. To what extent and with what accuracy he has done this cannot perhaps be fully appreciated by anyone unread in "The Golden Bough," Sir J. G. Frazer's work on anthropology.

"Local Color."

We unblushingly acknowledge having done in regard to Irvin S. Cobb's popularity what Mother Partington with a broom did to the ocean. The good woman tried to send the waves back where they belonged, but she had to pick her skirts high and run for dear life. We long ago seated ourselves aloof on a hilltop and watched in disgust the Cobbian inundation. "If that is humor," we grumbled, "then Charlie Chaplin must really be funny;" for Cobb as a "funny man" bored us to distraction. And he seemed determined to be a humorist, a clownish, blatant, smart-alecky funnyman.

Even the "Old Judge Priest" stories, which showed serious and kindly intentions, bored us; but we liked those in "The Escape of Mr. Trimm" and said so. There was big stuff, grim and gripping and built with mastery. But his "Anatomy," his "Operations," his "Bill of Fare," his revision of Europe—all that inspired us with the Caliguan wish that one paddle would serve for his host of admirers.

Now comes "Local Color," with ten short stories, which makes us wonder all the more why Mr. Cobb ever wrote about his "Operations" or his "Anatomy." Those things simply do not count. They compare to "Local Color" as "Fatty" Arbuckle compares to the courageous conception and magnificent execution of Mr. Griffith's "Intolerance." Many of these stories are great in the full significance of the potent word. "The Field of Honor" is the finest war story having an interest that connects it with America that we have read. "First Corinthians" is a classic on charity and should be read from every pulpit in the land. And any man who writes or dreams of ever writing cannot read "Local Color" without having strange, uncanny emotions and an intimate sympathy for the poor, colorless Felix Looms seize upon him.

Many of the other stories, as "The Eyes of the World" (which, incidentally, is located in our own fair midst,) and "Enter the Villain" have strong narrative interest; and some, as "Persona Au Gratin," which are based on the anecdotal surprise, the unexpected (or designed to be unexpected,) surprise, seem very trivial, indeed, in company with "Local Color" and "Field of Honor."

But as a book, "Local Color" (George H. Doran Company,) adds something vital to American letters.

"Kinsmen."

Percival J. Cooney's "Kinsmen" (George H. Doran Company,) is a much stronger and better-knit story than his previous book, "The Dons of the Old Pueblo," which was a historical novel of Spanish days in Los Angeles. "Kinsmen," a story of Scotch Highlanders who were among the early settlers of Canada, has a little too much excitement, a bit too much melodrama—for scarcely a chapter is without its surprise and "punch"—to be considered as a novel of quality, though Mr. Cooney has a fine narrative style and handles with skill more characters than the usual book contains.

The plot revolves around the Laird of McNab—The McNab, as he styles himself with good reason—chieftain among the Highlanders, who tries to exact among his transplanted kinsmen the same inexorable allegiance that was given in fealty by their forefathers to his ancestors. With the coming of Barclay Craig to the settlement, the Highlanders have among them a man of education and courage who knows that McNab (though it is chiefly his council, or the withered, malicious deep-seeing McTavish, who is to blame,) is cheating them of their timber and exacting rentals for himself that belong to the government.

It is significant that Craig's first appearance carries his fist into the face of Allen Dhu, son of McNab, who is trying to kiss the fair Flora, daughter of McIntyre, whom McNab later seeks to hound from the country. McNab is outraged and horrified when he formally offers to allow McIntyre's daughter to marry his son, and the offer is scorned. Flora's brother, aided by Murty, a generous and wily Irishman, organizes the young bloods of the community into a lawless band that carry punishment into McNab's yards, firing his granaries and outhouses; but at length they listen to Craig's cooler head, and a formal petition is drawn up seeking an adjustment of their grievances which are carried to Canada's Governor. Craig bears the petition, and one after another close escape from death harrows him, a long term in jail awaits him, and more adventures beset him before he at last meets the Governor and sets the wheel of laws and justice in motion.

The story, especially considering the complications and many characters of importance, is well worked out. The McNab, a towering man, is portrayed with care; his son is somewhat too much the typical villain despite the flare of regeneration toward the end; but Craig is a solid and convincing character, untheatric notwithstanding his many sensational adventures. Mr. Cooney obviously knows the settlement life and the personality of the Highlanders, and, though he has been copious, he has been discriminating in the use of the Scotch dialect. There is ruggedness and strength in "Kinsmen" that was far from "The Dons of the Old Pueblo."

"Windy McPherson's Son."

Sherwood Anderson has made himself a jacket from a small piece of Thedore Dreiser's robe, and so identifies himself in his first novel as a member of the New American School of Realism. But unlike the dean of the new school, Mr. Anderson is not only concerned with faithfully and vigorously presenting characters not altogether admirable, but he must solve as well as show their problems.

Sam McPherson, the son of "Windy," leaves the Middle West town, where his father's name denotes shiftlessness and braggery, and being capable, ruthless and dishonorable, he gains control of other people's money, reorganizes and develops the Rainey Arms Company—then double-crosses Rainey himself, though he is married to Rainey's daughter. "I could not be an ass, even for you," is his message to her; and as evidence of how much it meant to him not to be an ass, he offers to make over to her or Rainey his winnings from the deal. He becomes a "big man," a money king, but separated from his wife and heart-sick, cashes in on his stocks and bonds and takes up a kind of vagabondage; then winds up a spree by adopting two children of a wanton mother and carrying them back to his wife. She welcomes him and them, and he feels that at last he has adjusted himself to life.

The book is written with narrative vigor; but excepting the first part, which presents a remarkably accurate and careful picture of small town life, the story is episodical and sketchy, and the last part is nothing more or less than trashy. Sam McPherson himself is a rather anomalous character; to our mind, not convincingly drawn after his marriage.

Somewhat furtively, with intimations, but scarcely more than intimations, the author more or less continually refers to sexual incidents and interests in McPherson's life, so that his text is almost as much obsessed with sex as Mr. Dreiser's, but Mr. Anderson lacks the directness and elaboration of Mr. Dreiser. It is as though he would write more about these things if he dared.

"The More Excellent Way."

"Love! How can it be weighed for a single moment beside duty?" is more or less the text of Cyrus Townsend Brady's anti-divorce novel, "The More Excellent Way" (G. P. Putman's Sons.)

The characters in this story are about as human as a bundle of sticks and Chrissey de Selden, heroine, who, so Mr. Brady assures us, is a "strong character," vacillates and weeps and has heart pangs in a most astonishing and amusing manner. Though an Italian count and Neyland, an American hedonist, love her, she marries Warburton, her guardian, who is a perfect gentleman in every way. But on her wedding night she screams: "Don't touch me," and shortly afterwards begins pining for Neyland, who seems to be a decent sort of a chap as long as he isn't drunk. Warburton allows her to get a divorce. He acts the gentleman all the way through, though she taunts him with being a foundling and having no name.

No sooner does this flighty heroine get a divorce, intending to marry Neyland, than "she discovered then, in that hour, at that moment" that she really loved the man whom she wouldn't let touch her on her wedding night. Neyland, after financial troubles, considerately dies; so she remarries her ex-husband—which, according to Mr. Brady's title, is "the more excellent way" of settling divorces.

"Kildares of Storm."

A story of Kentucky without mention of moonshine or feudists is in itself an attractive novelty, but Eleanor Mercein Kelly has also told a dramatic and strong story of a superwoman in "Kildares of Storm" (The Century Company.)

As a girl, Kate was wooed by the big, famous Basil Kildare, owner of vast acres and breeder of blooded stock. Kildare is a man of fierceness and some brutality, and he calls Kate his "pretty wild hawk" who has "the spirit for the mother of Kildare men." But it is daughters, not men, that are born; and Kildare is slain by the lover of Kate, who then finds that by the terms of her husband's will she must surrender the estate if she marries again.

Kate becomes the competent and driving manager of the Storm estate and breeds mules instead of horses, because there is more money in them. She is firm, but tries to be just; and throws her protection about an unwedded mother, and does it with good courage—but trembles a little when she finds that much the same compassion is required of her for one of her own daughters.

It is the story of a woman's effort to succeed amid difficulties, and Kate is drawn as a woman of fine character though she loves the man that killed her husband, and eventually ends her hard fight in the haven of his arms.

"Leatherface."

Baroness Orczy goes back to that other epoch in the Netherlands history when fierce conquerors bestrode the land of Belgium, and tells the story of "Leatherface" (George H. Doran Company) amid the settings of war between the Prince of Orange and the Duke of Alva.

Plot after plot and surprise attack after surprise attack is directed against the Prince, whose head is desired above all earthly things by the Duke, but each time he is warned by the mysterious messenger in hood and leather mask, who, so the more superstitious Spaniards avow, is none other than the devil himself.

Leatherface is thought to live at Ghent, a city of stiff-necked burghers whom the Duke would like to catch harboring Orange or his friends in order that there would be an excuse for plundering the city. So the beautiful daughter of Hidalgo Juan de Vargas is forced into marriage with the son of the High Bailiff of Ghent, that she may keep her eyes on the burghers and report what she learns to her father. She learns many things that her father never expected her to—and one of them is to have sympathy for the people amid whom she is set as a spy.

The story is full of color, but not so swift-moving as it is agreeable to find in this type of romance, and it is not too much to expect that Leatherface would have more adventures before our eyes instead of being merely told what a strange, daring devil he is.

"The Lion's Share."

"The Lion's Share" (George H. Doran) shows Arnold Bennett at his most tedious, which is a most remarkable exhibition—his most tedious. He essays a gay and witty comedy, a story of exciting and romantic complications, all solemnly written down with that profusion of words which has served him well in depicting with microscopic fidelity the low-spirited realism of which he is unquestionably a master.

Audrey Moze, the only child of a severe father, suddenly finds herself orphaned and wealthy—free to go her own way and seek the lion's share of pleasure, yet as innocent of the ways of the world as a convent bred maiden. Accompanied by a Miss Ingate she undertakes to enjoy Paris, and not being aware of the value of money suddenly discovers that her experimental practice of economy is not necessary, then blazes forth in a riot of extravagance. She has admirers and friends, and becomes addicted rather than devoted to a temperamental violinist. Returning to England she joins with suffragettes, defies the police and the doggedness of a detective, engages with the militants in annoying the peace of statesmen, and is carried by Mr. Bennett's sluggish prose through numerous adventures that have amusing potentialities.

The story drags—drags—drags unutterably. Comedy borne on crutches is anything but delightful; and it gives as much relief to the reader as to Audrey when she finally weds her foolish musician.

"Apauk, Caller of Buffalo."

James Willard Schultz has drawn from the memory of his thirty years of intimate life with the Blackfeet another story that is both interesting as a narrative and valuable as a record of Indian lore, in "Apauk, Caller of Buffalo" (Houghton Mifflin Company.) The introduction supplies the assurance—not needed by those familiar with Mr. Schultz's work—that the story of Apauk is true; and there is irony in the statement that Apauk, "the bringer of plenty," the man who lured hundreds and thousands of buffaloes over the cliffs and into the traps, so that the people might feast through the winters, died of starvation.

The story tells how Apauk as a boy, though he had already taken a weapon from a living enemy and gave promise of being a fine warrior, decides to become a caller of buffalo, because in all the three tribes of his people, evades war parties and such gifted man—and he is crushed beneath the herd so that his secret died with him. Then Apauk with his sister, and an old woman who had been as a mother to them, remains all of one summer away from his people, evades war parties and countless other dangers, while he prays to his gods, makes medicine and studies the habits of the buffalo until he learned the secret of making them follow him.

As no man had ever done before him, he succeeds in luring the herds while on horseback, instead of on foot as all the other callers had found necessary. For years he keeps the camps of his people red with meat; but with the coming of the white men, the great havoc they work among the herds with their high power rifles and hunting parties, Apauk eventually finds the ranges empty of food and his services are no longer of value.

"Old Forty Dollars."

Frank Wing, author of "The Fotygraft Album," gives a series of country-town boy sketches in "Old Forty Dollars" (Fleming H. Revell.) George gets the name of "Old Forty Dollars" when he applies to the railroad company for that sum as damages for the death of his pet by a train. The cat is buried with honors; and a famous cat was "Vein Sucker," a veteran of the "carnival of blood" which the youthful sportsmen conducted with the pet cats of the neighborhood. Prematurely, George lets it be known that he has applied for damages and the nickname is fastened onto him and sticks, though he does become enough of hero to get his name mentioned twice in one issue of the Peoria Transcript for his part in rescuing the victim of an accident.

George is by no means the only boy in the book, though he, so to speak, is the leading character, and takes an active part in instituting the chivalrous tourney after reading Ivanhoe, and also is the chief conspirator in framing up a deal against the champion buttermilk drinker of the village.

The stories haven't the smoothness, the humor, the naturalness that characterized many volumes of boyhood escapades and trials, but there is no question but Mr. Wing knows village life and also knows much about boys.

"The Agony Column."

Those who have read Earl Derr Biggers' "Seven Keys to Baldpate," will probably anticipate the denouement in "The Agony Column" (Bobbs-Merrill Company.) But whether or not they do detect the joker in the story, they will no doubt be much concerned over the predicament into which the Strawberry man gets himself with a letter of introduction to an English captain just back from India.

Through the "personal column" of a London paper the Strawberry man has made overtures to the Grapefruit girl, and she tells him that he can write her seven letters and then, if the letters are interesting enough, she will allow him to meet her.

The Strawberry man finds much to write about. He explains in full how he comes to be suspected of murdering the English captain when it is really the work of German spies (only in the end he admits to her that he is really the guilty party,) and how the chief of the German spy department is apprehended, sitting right in the highest seat of the British service.

"Penrod and Sam."

Booth Tarkington relates further adventures of Penrod Schofield and his friends in "Penrod and Sam" (Doubleday, Page & Co.) the latter name elevating to titular dignity one Samuel Williams, who lacks Penrod's ingenuity but is entirely acquiescent in the youthful machinations of his friend. Mr. Tarkington is at labor to expound the psychology of michievous boyhood, and gives over a goodly share of text to explaining and analyzing, which marks the stories, amusing as they are, with a certain stiffness. They lack ease and fluency.

Penrod plots and schemes. He doesn't tumble headlong into trouble; but with a kind of calculation he gets himself and usually other people into it. Perhaps only "goody-good" boys like Georgie Bassett who forces himself unwelcomed into the "In Or In" secret society, which is housed in an old piano box, would scruple to steal his sister's love letter as his own example of a "letter to a friend" in English composition. And though humiliation came upon him for that "forgery," Penrod does not seem to care.

He is baffled and disgusted at another time when he finds that his persistent interference with his sister's suitor has given her great pleasure and satisfaction.

Cats are Penrod's special delight, and he turns the unlucky felines to ingenious uses, not only when he transforms Gipsy into a jungle tiger and strips the breeches off his negro chums so they will more realistic appear as "benters," but especially when, with the aid of his sister's purloined stockings and much excelsior, he uses a neighbor's pet as the motive power for an uncanny, snake-like monster that scares a bibulous dinner guest out of the house.

"A Drake by George."

We very much dislike to think that this is a new book by John Trevena. It is more agreeable to think of it as some earlier manuscript injudiciously brought from cover in the malformed hope that it may satisfy the admirers of "Granite" and "Sleeping Water" and "Wintering Hay." It has none of the sternness, none of the loftiness, none of the sympathy and compassion that has made Mr. Trevena's stories of the moors and the people on them prized and acclaimed.

"A Drake By George" (Alfred A. Knopf) is unpleasant comedy, a thing of complicated, ingenuous, loose-jointed plot and counter-plot, in which the two principal scoundrels of the bookful of scoundrels persistently seek to rob two women, one of whom is feebleminded.

A character of interest, who, regrettably is speedily dropped from the story, is Capt. William Drake. He is a ponderous but lovable liar, proud in the unsubstantiated belief of direct descent from Sir Francis Drake. His is a wonderful imagination, and his loquacious stories about his many peculiar curios are entertaining and amusing. But he dies on page 56.

"The Shining Adventure."

With a felicitous combination of satire and sentimentality, Dana Burnet pleads in "The Shining Adventure" (Harper & Bros.) for playgrounds for Gotham's children.

The 8-year-old orphan, son of a Socialist who was killed by a nervous militiaman and who is known as the King, escaped from the palatial guardianship of Miss Philomena Van Zandt, "a beautiful woman grown cold with the worship of pure respectability. . . . pure patrician, with wealth enough to make her ancient Knickerbocker name almost unnecessary." She tours the Eastside in an electric brougham (with a liveried chauffeur and footman) to distribute Bibles to the poor.

The King escapes with a bright tin sword and a bag of pennies and buys a park for the street children to play in. He champions a crippled girl in O'Connor's Alley, whips the leader of the gang, assumes leadership, royally pays for rides on the merry-go-round, champions another unfortunate lady, and finally leads forth his army of children to the park which he has purchased from the old gardener.

In the meantime, Miss Philomena is busy with an uplift conference in which the bishop is the dominant member, but an accident to the King brings realization to her of how futile and absurd is theoretical and supercilious charity. Her transformation is abrupt but effective, and the merry tale ends happily with Miss Philomena backing the ex-prize fighter and Democratic candidate for Alderman because he promises parks for children.

"The Brown Mare."

It has been many years since Alfred Ollivant wrote "Bob Son of Battle," and over-enthusatsic announcements assure those whom they reach that his new book, "The

His last message fierce invective.

Mark Twain's posthumous novel, "The Mysterious Stranger," one of bitterest in the language.

MARK TWAIN'S POSTHUMOUS BOOK A MESSAGE OF DESPAIR.

The Great Jester, Speaking as if from Beyond the Grave, Declares Mankind is but "a Homeless Thought Wandering Forlorn Among the Empty Eternities"—"The Mysterious Stranger," Found in Manuscript after His Death, is as Bitter a Book as there is in the Language.

THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER. By Mark Twain. Harper & Brothers, New York.

MARK TWAIN had long been dead when the manuscript of "The Mysterious Stranger" was found.

It is like an appalling message from the grave; and it was the Great Jester's last message to the world.

It was written when he stood on the heights of age and the glow of the last sunset was on his face.

Wherever the English language reached his name was honored.

He had searched the earth over, and in genial words that stirred tired men and women to mirth had made sport alike for vanities and difficulties.

He knew poverty and disaster.

He had been blasted by financial failures. But his spirit seemed indomitable. He had written the joyous books of childhood; and the heartening cheer never faded from his text though he wrote while the creditors' eager hands waited to seize the finished page.

And he had won—he had won everything that it seemed a man could desire to win. Ancient universities felt themselves honored when he accepted their degrees. Statesmen and financiers sought his companionship, men of letters proclaimed his greatness, and the people loved him with an affection that but few men have ever known.

Then he wrote "The Mysterious Stranger"—as bitter a book as there is in the language. His incomparable charm is on every page, but his message is one of despair, satirical, contemptuous, melancholy; proclaiming mankind lower than the brutes, utterly befuddled and without hope:

"Life itself is only a vision, a dream. Nothing exists; all is a dream. God—man—the world—the sun—the moon—the wilderness of stars—a dream, all a dream; they have no existence. Nothing exists save empty space—and you!"

The Medieval Age.

The story is placed in Austria in 1590. "It was the Middle Ages in Austria and promised to remain so forever. . . . It was still the Age of Belief in Austria. But they meant it as a compliment, not a slur, and it was so taken, and we were all proud of it."

In the village three boys live and play together. They know about the old astrologer "who lived in a tumbled old tower up the valley, and put in his night studying the stars. Everyone knew he could foretell wars and famines, though that was not so hard, for there was always a war and generally a famine somewhere."

They knew the priest, Father Adolf, "who had defied the devil" and had once intrepidly thrown his bottle of wine at him, "and there, upon the wall of his study was the ruddy splotch where it struck and broke;" and they knew Father Peter, who was suspended by the church for being accused of saying "that God was all goodness and would find a way to save all of his poor human children."

These boys had listened to the weird tales of an old soldier who had been at the siege of Vienna, who had seen ghosts and had met and talked with angels.

Then one day as the boys sit together under the trees a young stranger appears before them. He is an angel, one who appears to be about their own age, but who insists that he is 16,000 years old as mortals reckon time; but he seems to be only a boy. His name, he tells them, is Satan; and noticing their consternation, explains that the other Satan was his uncle, and that the Fall did not affect the rest of his family. "We others are still ignorant of sin; we are not able to commit it," he explained.

And as he talks, for the amusement of the boys he makes out of dirt a multitude of little men and women about two inches in height, and these miniature folk begin busily to clear off a small patch of ground and start to build a castle.

The Symbolic Tragedy.

"Two of the little workmen were quarreling, and in buzzing, little bumblebee voices they were cursing and swearing at each other; now came blows and blood; then they locked themselves together in a life-and-death struggle. Satan reached out his hand and crushed the life out of them with his fingers, threw them away, wiped the red from his fingers on his handkerchief and went on talking where he had left off: 'We cannot do wrong; neither have we any disposition to do it, for we do not know what it is.'"

A few minutes later "the wives of the little dead men had found the crushed and shapeless bodies and were crying over them, and sobbing and lamenting, and a priest was kneeling there with his hands crossed upon his breast, praying; and crowds and crowds of pitying friends were massed about them, reverently uncovered, with their bare heads bowed, and many with the tears running down—a scene which Satan paid no attention to until the small noise of the weeping and praying began to annoy him; then he reached and took the heavy board seat from our swing and brought it down and mashed all those people into the earth just as if they had been flies," and he goes on talking just the same.

He says, when the boys protest, that it makes no difference; that he can create plenty more when he needs them.

The Blessings of Satan.

He takes the boys over the world. He shows them the past and the future. He describes what he saw at the creation of the world, and expresses the uttermost contempt for human beings who were made of clay and mud. When asked to bestow permanent earthly happiness upon Father Peter, who has been accused of thievery by the astrologer, the Angel gives the priest an insane delusion that he is an emperor. When asked to bless two friends, the Angel kills them, explaining that through death they evade a long life which he can see, by looking into the future, would have been filled with anguish.

In the panorama of history, the Angel shows them Cain murdering Abel; the flood; wars without end; Caesar invading Britain—"not that those barbarians had done him any harm, but because he wanted their land, and desired to confer the blessings of civilization upon their widows and orphans." Christianity and Civilization are shown marching hand in hand through the ages "leaving famine and death and desolation in their wake, and other signs of the progress of the human race," as Satan observes.

Civilization, Murder and Kings.

"You perceive," he said, "that you have made continual progress. Cain did his murder with a club; the Hebrews did their murder with javelins and swords; the Greeks and Romans added protective armor and the fine arts of military organization and generalship; the Christian added guns and gunpowder; a few centuries from now he will have so greatly improved the deadly effectiveness of his weapons of slaughter that all men will confess that without Christian civilization war must have remained a poor and trifling thing to the end of time. . . . It is remarkable progress. In 5000 or 6000 years five or six high civilizations have risen, flourished, commanded the wonder of the world, then faded out and disappeared; and not one of them except the latest ever invented any sweeping and adequate way of killing people. . . . You gain nothing; you always come out where you went in. For a million years the race has gone on monotonously propagating itself and monotonously reperforming this dull nonsense—to what end? No wisdom can guess! Who gets a profit out of it? Nobody but a parcel of usurping little monarchs and nobilities who despise you; would feel defiled if you touched them; would shut the door in your face if you proposed to call; whom you slave for, fight for, die for, and are not ashamed of it, but proud; whose existence is a perpetual insult to you and you are afraid to resent it; who are medicants supported by your alms, yet assume toward you the aids of benefactor toward beggar; who address you in the language of master to slave, and are answered in the language of slave to master; who are worshiped by you with your mouth, while in your heart—if you have one—you despise yourself for it. The first man was a hypocrite and a coward, qualities which have not yet failed in his line; it is the foundation upon which all civilizations have been built."

No Sane Man Happy.

Satan, after striking the old priest with madness, declares that no sane man can be happy, for to him life is real and he sees what a fearful thing it is. Only the insane men can be happy, and not many of those. The few that imagine themselves kings or gods are happy, the rest are no happier than the sane. He adds: "Of course, no man is entirely in his right mind at any time, but I have been referring to the extreme cases."

Satan causes a woman's child to be drowned so that the little girl may escape a lifetime of shame and anguish. When the carpenter, to whom the mother is in debt, seizes the body so it may not have a Christian burial until his money is paid, "it drove the mother wild with grief and shame," and the boys ask Satan to interfere. But he said the carpenter and the rest were members of the human race and were acting quite neatly for that species of animal. He told them, however, that he would interfere if he found a horse acting in such a way, and that the boys must inform him when they came across that kind of a horse doing that kind of a human thing, so that he could stop it.

The boy, who acts as chronicler, says "we believed this was sarcasm, for of course there wasn't any such horse." Finally, at the boys' importuning, Satan does interfere so that the poor mother is burned at the stake for blasphemy. And when they express themselves as horrified, the Angel tranquilly explains "by this prompt death she gets twenty-nine years more of heaven than she is entitled to, and escapes twenty-nine years of misery here."

The Bitter, Tragic Message.

But in the end, Satan destroys even the hope of heaven. He says that nothing is real. That he himself is only a "thought"—a dream that has "revealed you to yourself and set you free."

"Strange that you should not have suspected years ago—centuries, ages, eons ago!—for you have existed companionless through all eternities. Strange, indeed, that you should not have suspected that your universe and its contents were only dreams, visions, fictions! Strange, because they are so frankly and hysterically insane—like all dreams: a God who could make good children as easily as bad, yet preferred to make bad ones; who

MULTITUDE OF POETS MAKES SEASON MERRY WITH SONG.

Remarkable Sonnet Sequence by Olive Tilford Dargan in "The Cycle's Rim"—Emile Verhaeren Writes of "The Sunlit Hours" Before Belgium Days of Trial—Other Verses by Henry Herbert Knibbs—Edgar Lee Masters—James Oppenheim—Robert Frost. Lyman Bryson—B. H. Nadal and Katherine Howard.

FOR the most part, finding excellent sonnets is like searching for gems amid the ruins of a palace and one must poke about in the mould and debris where the poet had his workroom. It is not often that one discovers a necklace of flawless, perfectly-matched stones—it is less frequent that one comes upon a sequence of precious sonnets like those in Olive Tilford Dargan's "The Cycle's Rim" Charles Scribner's Sons.) which are addressed to one whose body lies in the sea, "locked down with wave on wave," and to whose memory she lays her "leaf of laurel on the waves."

Her invocation is:

"O Love, that gave
The bird its wing, brown earth the quivering wood,
The fish its fin, a free sky to the slave,
And man his God, give me the song that breaks
Like buds from heart-sod—darts with pollen flying
To lips of lyric bloom, and silvery wakes
The trembling merrows, sweeter for that crying.
One deathless song—of all thy gifts the crown—
Flute-call of lovers till Time's sun goes down."

We cannot believe that anything like the true quality of these intense songs of leashed emotion may be appreciated if the thirty-second sonnet is unread. It is:

"The tulip makes the months a rajah's walk;
Turbaned the season comes, a nodding Ind;
Young dandelions squat upon their stalk
Like children at a show; the clouds float thinned,
A broken troop beneath the bannered blue;
But no heart beats in any flowering thing;
No little flames lie in cold eyes of dew.
By Heaven's care of man, this is not Spring!
The earth's in coffin, and these imps are called
To paint her cheeks and wreathe her dead-gold hair;
And there's no mourner, no wild drops that scald
A paling face, as though the tearless air
Her chill, rouged body drifts to charnel shore;
For Love dies first; and Grief can weep no more."

These are truly wonderful songs. The brilliant phrases again and again evoke admiration. Here is nothing commonplace and dull, for this singer is borne aloft on radiant wings. Consider:

"What fiery dust the stolid earth must hold,
So many passions have in her been laid!"

And:

"As one who stands beside a breaking sea
And fatuous strives with fainting voice to reach
Across the waves, where mild shores hidden be,
To charm the ear of dancers on the beach,
Would I sing now if now I sought to rhyme
Love's ocean-flexures with immortal word
For lovers on the shores yet waiting Time;
But, keyed so frail, I, like that little bird
Whose song is gaily pitched above man's ear,
Shall not less happy sing though none may hear."

The grief-note is never absent, but no line is without courage. "The Cycle's Rim" has every sonnet in it crying out in tones that cannot be denied belief, that this is no simulated grief—no theme chosen merely for the poet's artifice. It is real. It is more than merely real: it is the rare adornment of reality with the iridescence of imagery. This is no black-robed grief. No. The poet has told for herself what it is:

"Sordid my life, they say, and they say true,
If the world's favor be life's only sun.
Here in the firelight where I bake and brew
None save immortals look me smilingly on.
Ah, only Heaven's vagrants! If I durst
Take mine own chair an angel must get up.
And, would I drink, ere I may ease my thirst
Celestial lips make bright my cabin cup.
But no silk robes trail hither for my sake.
And for my dear, he is a lord so poor,
His dreams are bare of gold. He can but take
A thread from Fate, and, leaving not his door,
If he there will, beneath a threshold vine,
Spin white eternity in one brief line."

So she speaks across the gulf to the loved one, and all who will may hear.

"The Sunlit Hours."

Emile Verhaeren's "The Sunlit Hours" (John Lane Company) is no recent work of the Belgian poet who flamed into fury when Liege fell. Here is a sequence of love poems, celebrating the ecstatic dalliance of lovers attuned. And he sings:

"O splendour of this joy of ours, Woven of gold of the sunlit hours!"

—lines from which the verses, translated by Charles R. Murphy, take their title so reminiscent of the tranquillity in Belgium some thirty months ago.

Verhaeren is not by nature a martial singer. He loves the fields, the peasant's homely tragedies and the "... tranquil morning garden, where

Sinuous paths wind in the blue haze
Like swans upon the deep blue waterways."

These are verses of exquisite passion—singing a strong, pure, tender love. But the theme rises above the merely personal into

"This fair garden flowering to flame,
That seems the wondrous beauty to proclaim
Of that clear garden whereunto we cleave,
Is crystallized in frosted gold this eve.
A great white silence drops athwart the sky.
Out there where gleams a marble hue,
Whither, one by one, the tall trees stride,
Each with its shadow, long and blue
And lonely by its side.
No stir of wind; but soundlessly
The blanched veils of cold alone
Unfold themselves mysteriously
On the marshes' silver or the roads' white stone.
The stars are lustrous with desire;
Like furbished steel the rime
Within the cold, translucid air,
From some infinity sublime,
Across the paleness of a waning moon,
Falls shower on shower of fire—
Star-dust that there
Sinks in a scintillating swoon.
It is the hour divine, when wistfully
A million eyes look down upon the earth—
Upon the hazards of our human birth—
From out immutable eternity."

Thus it is that Verhaeren was wont to sing when the world was at peace.

"Riders of the Stars."

Henry Herbert Knibbs shows no signs of succumbing to the quirks of "vers libre;" and it would be incongruous to have songs of cowmen done in typographical spurts and splashes, for the men of the range loved even lines that rhymed as they chanted to the restless herd on storm-threatening nights. And Mr. Knibbs no doubt speaks true for the riders that have quit the open country and gone clattering up the golden stairs and down the golden streets when he records their petition before the "Throne Sublime" as:

"Give us a range and our horses and ropes; open the Pearly Gate,
And turn us loose in the unfenced blue, riding the sunset rounds,
Hunting each stray in the Milky Way and running the Rancho straight;
Not crowding the dogie stars too much on the way to the bedding grounds.

"Maverick comets that's running wild, we'll rope 'em and brand 'em fair,
So they'll quit stampeding the starry herd and scaring the folks below,
And we'll save 'em prime for the round-up time and we riders'll all be there,
Ready and willing to do our work as we did in the long ago."

So that is why in his concluding stanza Mr. Knibbs asks:

"Have you heard in the starlit dusk of eve when the lone coyotes roam,
The Yip! Yip! Yip! of a hunting-cry, and the echo that shrilled afar,
As you listened still on a desert hill and gazed at the twinkling dome,
And a viewless rider swept the sky on the trail of a shooting star?"

Mr. Knibbs knows more than the spirit of the range, and has a faculty for description that is well illustrated in the opening lines of "Apuni Oyis:"

"There's a lodge in Arizona where the rugged pines are marching
Straight and stalwart up the hillside till they gather on the crest,
And around their feet the grasses and the purple flowers are arching
In the dim and golden glamour of the sunlight in the West."

"The Trail-Makers" is a poem somewhat in the style of Robert Service celebrating the rugged conquests of Alaskans; "The Killer" is a short study of an outlaw that no doubt will be shocking to sensitive persons; and "Sunlight" is a poem based on the war and the part taken by a range-bred horse in France, while the closing lines fling scorn to neutrals, thus:

"So we have sold them our horses. What shall we do with the gold?
Lay it on Charity's altar, purchasing columns of praise?
Noble indeed are our courses; running the race as of old;
Why should we Mammonites falter? Noble indeed are our ways."

"Riders of the Stars" (Houghton Mifflin Company,) contains some two score poems, and all but two are based on some phases of the West.

"The Great Valley."

Edgar Lee Masters's work since "Spoon River Anthology" (a new edition of which has just been issued with illustrations by Oliver Hereford,) seems very tame and unimpressive. The first editions of that curiously startling book are already selling for from $8 to $15. A few of the pieces in "The Great Valley" (The MacMillian Company,) are somewhat Spoonriverish, as "The Mourner's Bench," "Cato Braden" and "Winston Prairie" and perhaps "Monsieur D— to the Psychoanalist."

The studies, or rather impressions of Theodore Dreiser and John Cowper Powys are interesting. The impressions of Dreiser begin:

"Jack o' Lantern, tall shouldered,
One eye set higher than the other,
Mouth cut like a scallop in a pie,
Aslant showing powerful teeth.
Swaying above the heads of others.
Jubilant with fixed eyes, scarcely sparkling.
Moving about rhythmically, exploding in laughter.
Touching fingers together back and forth,
Or toying with a handkerchief.
And the eyes burn like a flame at the end of a funnel,
And the ruddy face glows like a pumpkin
On Halloween!"

All of which may be quite "vivid," but fairly groans aloud with the effort to be so.

The lines on Powys are more complimentary, but as erratically expressed.

"The Typical American" and "Come, Republic" are entirely commonplace in the effort to satirize and to exhort America to nobler ideals.

The first ten selections are studies of pioneers in and around Chicago, and one readily discovers that they have in them the better workmanship and more sincerity than the others. In this group are "Fort Dearborn," "Capt. John Whistler," "Emily Brosseau: In Church," "The Ouija Board," "Hanging the Picture," "Lincoln and Douglas Debates," "Autochthon" and "Grant and Logan and Our Tears." A short poem worthy of notice is "Achilles Deatherbridge," which charmingly chronicles an episode in the Civil War.

"War and Laughter."

James Oppenheim is passionately but sophomorically concerned in "War and Laughter" (The Century Company,) with life, creeds, love and the usual bewailments of verse hopefully designed to be striking. A sense of incompleteness, not wholly due to the method of "free verse," characterizes his work. Much of it is like sketches hastily written and to be later painfully developed into something of value. But among these sketches often appear passages that grab the admiration, as these lines from "Laughter:"

"As Sunday is the Sabbath, a day of holy unctions,
I said, I will go visit the solemn ones:
They whose mouths are turned down at the corners, and whose glassy eyes never wink nor gleam:
I will visit, not the worshipers in a Church:
I will go visit the fishes.
Crowded was the aquarium:
On one side the glass, the people; on the other, the solemn ones.
I stood and marveled at the miracle of their gravity.
You see, they wave their fins, open their mouths,
And hang suspended in bubbling waters;
The circle of their flat eyes heaves a little without lids:
They are neither happy nor unhappy.
I knew they were fishes; but did they know they were fishes?
No, nor even that I, watching them, was a man!"

Much of the contents, despite the typographical form, is sheer prose; and, as "Adventures in Darkness," not very good prose.

Among the sonnets included one is distinctively better than the others, and well worth quoting:

"Now, golden October, crowned with the grape, is singing,
While the javelin winds against the woods are hurled,
Glorious from the blue the sun is flinging
His rain-rinsed brilliance on the vivid world;
And the wine-mad month in red and gold regalia,
Scattering leaves, sowing valley and hill,
Goes out dancing to death in a Bacchanalia
Laughing, singing, for she dies with a will.
Fully lived has the year, so she dies in laughter:
For all that spends itself, is ready for death
O my beloved, let us live hereafter,
Pour ourselves in each other, spend our breath,
Love in the uttermost loving, so that when quaffing
Death's black liquor, we toast one another, laughing."

But for the most part the section called "Rhymes" shows very clearly why Mr. Oppenheim has a right to prefer the "free verse" form, which as yet has brought forth so few poets of stature that the little fellows, of whom there are a multitude, may strut about without appearing so very diminutive.

"The Golden Book of Sonnets."

"Scorn not the sonnet. Critic, you have frowned,
Mindless of its just honors; with this key Shakespeare unlocked his heart"— and, though Browning said that Shakespeare did nothing of the kind, yet Wordsworth's injunction to the critic is particularly apt for an age that blandishes its antics under the foreign name of "vers libre." Good Master Slender wished at the Castle Windsor that "rather than forty shillings I had my Book of Songs and Sonnets here," whereas if this wise man who set sonnets before shillings had been familiar with William Robertson's edition of "The Golden Book of Sonnets" (J. B. Lippincott Company,) he might not have stayed to see Falstaff get into trouble with the Merry Wives, but would have hied himself straight back to his library.

Herein gathered are sonnets from Sydney to Symonds—aye, more, from Sir Thomas Wyatt, who died in 1542, to Richard Le Gallienne, who still makes glad the hearts of those that like the tune of his lyre. Some 250 treasures are between the covers, and we know of no place in the same compass where may be found such wealth of graceful phrasing or so many unblemished songs.

Here Keats declares, "the poetry of earth is never dead;" and Christina Rossetti asks to be remembered when she is "gone far away into the silent land;" Elizabeth Barrett Browning offers tribute to her great lover and enjoins; "Open thine heart wide, and fold within the wet wings of thy dove;" and Andrew Lang speaks to Homer thus:

"As one that for a weary space has lain
Lulled by the song of Circe and her wine
In gardens near the pale of Proserpine,
Where the Aegean isle forgets the main,
And only the low lutes of love complain,
And only shadows of wan lovers pine—
As such an one were glad to know the brine
Salt on his lips, and the large air again—
So gladly, from the songs of modern speech
Men turn and see the stars, and feel the free
Shrill wind beyond the close of heavy flowers,
And through the music of the languid hours,
They hear like ocean on a western beach—
The surge and thunder of the Odyssey."

Here, too, Swinburne's phrases with winged alliteration soar in tribute to Browning; and Byron fiercely cries the tyranny of Chillon. A noble assemblance, indeed, with Shelley, Donne, Coleridge, Southey, Watts-Dunton, old Drayton and young Philip Marston, Shakespeare and Francis Thompson and some two score more illustrious ones, each offering the choicest of his sonnets.

"Mountain Interval."

Robert Frost has been one of the most highly-praised of the new poets, gathering to himself the admiration of those who cannot become enthusiastic over the various poetic sects that have some kind of an "ism" in their verse. His is a slow beating, firm pulse, as was shown in "North of Boston" and is even more noticeable in "Mountain Interval" (Henry Holt & Co.)

These opening lines from "Birches" are typical and show, we believe—though we have little admiration for his style—his descriptive ability at its best:

"When I see birches to left and right
Across the lines of straighter, darker trees,
I like to think some boy's been swinging them.
But swinging doesn't bend them down to stay.
Ice-storms do that. Often you must have seen them
Loaded with ice a sunny winter morning
After a rain. They click upon themselves
As the breeze rises, and turn many-colored
As the stir cracks and crazes their enamel.
Soon the sun's warmth makes them shed crystal shells
Shattering and avalanching on the snow-crust—
Such heaps of broken glass to sweep away
You'd think the inner dome of heaven had fallen."

It is visible enough that such lines have a quality above common prose; and his narrative poems, as "In the Home Stretch" and "Snow" have much that is attractive, but they are so drab of theme and so depressed in feeling that one is likely to think of them as rather homely things to be wearing the garments of poetry.

Even rhyme does not wing his lines. Mr. Frost chooses deliberately—of that there can be no question—the lowly themes, the commonplace, as "The Cow in Apple Time:"

"Something inspires the only cow of late
To make no more of a wall than an open gate,
And think no more of wall-builders than fools.
Her face is flecked with pomace and she drools
A cider syrup. Having tasted fruit,
She scorns a pasture withering to the root.
She runs from tree to tree where lie and sweeten
The windfalls spiked with stubble and worm-eaten.
She leaves them bitten when she has to fly.
She bellows on a knoll against the sky.
Her udders shrivel and the milk goes dry."

Surely the lovers of rusticity can ask for nothing more than that—or than the whole of "Mountain Interval."

"Smoky Roses."

He would indeed be captious, who, searching among Lyman Bryson's "Smoky Roses" (G. P. Putnam's Sons) found nothing whatever to please his fancy, for here is variety indeed: verse with a mission tinged with the sociological, and verse of strange fantasy, narrative verse that tells a story entertaining to the ear in phrases that do not offend; but most daring of all is the mood in which Mr. Bryson has, without drawing a curse upon his effort, written a companion piece to one of the greatest of poems, "Andrea Del Sarto," but it is hardly worth quoting.

A simple and short poem of interest is "Vengeance:"

"I sent my enemy to Hell
And, for the evil he had done
To me and everyone
Who came within his cruel clutch,
They made him suffer overmuch.

"Then, after he had burned a while,
I went to visit Hell again,
To smile at him in pain.
He made me see his face all singed;
I'll not forget—now he's revenged."

"The Garment" is of a theme that has been in the work of many poets lately who seem to have undergone a revulsion toward "sweat shop" goods. "Old Man Laks" is a good as well as typical example of the new realism in verse, and its lines are swift and its phrases vivid. We find however more pleasure in his exotic and colorful verse, which is illustrated by "The Poppy:"

"Astarte's face in the blood-red moon astare.
No breath—all silence in the heated gloom.
Shuddering in a swoon the passionate air
Holds in a garden as a narrow room;
And down the path, the bending poppy-bloom
Burns through the velvet dusk a crimson flare.

"The poppy has no words but potent fire,
Bold in the darkness, rises in her heart,
Makes throbbing anguish of her soul, entire;
Sears the thin petals of her face apart.

"An alien wind is questing on the path;
The swinging, swaying poppy petals hold
A languor that no other love-flower hath.
The stranger wind knows how the tale is told,
Scatters the poppy suddenly, with cold—
Astarte bleeds the moon in futile wrath."

We do not quite get the sense of all that, but the words are attractive, the phrasing vivid, and it seems that it must have some tangible sense which has escaped us. In which case, it is a fine poem.

"Friendship and Other Poems."

A poet should take his lady's eyebrows seriously and not mistreat the limping Muse. But B. H. Nadal in "Friendship and Other Poems" (Robert J. Shores, New York) has many satirical poems and chief among these is his "Ode to Vers Libre" which begins:

"Oh, careless muse, uncombed if nothing worse,
A kitchen maid—the Mary Ann of verse,
Pounding raw steak, rattling each pot and pan
And beating tattoos on the garbage can
So seldom sweet or fair, you say you sing
While jangling discords make the welkin ring;
Virile at times—poetical by chance,
A rhythmic rival of St. Vitus dance.

Be occult, mystic, cryptic if you like
Oh, Hobo of the soul! Oh, tramp upon life's hike!
Be graphic, bold, be free, be anything,
But don't, oh slattern Muse, attempt to sing."

All of which brands him as a "reactionary."

There is much serious verse in the slender volume, though none of it is passionate. A poem of more strength than the others seems to us to be "The Statue Speaks;" and "Warning!—The Lusitania" is in parts vivid and stirring, but the poem as a whole is somewhat emasculated by the foreword. Except in those which are designed as invective—and Mr. Nadal is quite intense—there is a shimmering, satirical humor that dispels a critical scrutiny of his poetical forms which, though occasionally much better than the average, are not of the best.

"Wild Earth and Other Poems."

Padraic Colum's "Wild Earth and Other Poems" (Henry Holt & Co.) are for the most part poems of peasantry and belong to that school which finds "great beauty in simplicity" and places no particular value on vivid phrasing or imaginative qualities, nor yet in swift dramatic touches.

An exception to this is "The Ballad of Downal Baun," which is more strongly pervaded with the eerie quality that is somewhat associated with the Irish verse: and this ballad sings the adventure of Downal, "the silent man" who went to a fair and bought a black ox.

A typical poem with a little more music in it than most of the others is "Across the Floor:"

"The fiddles were playing and playing,
The couples were out on the floor;
From converse and dancing he drew me,
And across the door.

"Ah! strange were the dim, wide meadows,
And strange was the cloud-strewn sky,
And strange in the meadows the corn-brakes,
And they making cry!

"The hawthorn bloom was by us,
Around us the breath of the south.
White hawthorn, strange in the night-time—
His kiss on my mouth!"

"Polonius and the Ballad Singers" is a piece of distinctive value; but the most of the verse is quite commonplace.

"The Little God."

As anyone would expect if at all familiar with Katherine Howard's "The Book of the Serpent," this latest book is full of whimsy, strange, fleeting visions. "The Little God" is called "child verse for grown-ups." It is all very simple and quite ridiculous no doubt—just as childhood is—as may be glimpsed from "Violets:"

"I just ate six violets,
'Cause they tasted good;
I hope they understood.
I hope they know
It was because I loved them so.
I've been wondering how
The taste gets in;
I've been wondering how
The smell gets out.
Mother says I've worn her out
Asking why and what it's all about;
She said I'd understand sometime—
I'll be told when I'm enough old."

"Tags" is much more characteristic of the author's mood and style. The child says.

"The gardener put tags on my flowers:
'Labels,' he said—I took them off.
Mother doesn't know what's got into my head;
I acted like a wildflower, she said.

"I don't know—
I didn't like them, so—I took them off.
I'm not to do so any more:
I've promised—'cause I tore
Them all first go.
We don't like tags, the flowers and me."

"The Little God" (Sherman French & Co.) contains scores of these little speeches—exquisite gossip from a child's lips—which explains about flowers and birds and weeds and other mysteries of the garden.

IBSEN'S "BRAND."

BRAND. By Henrik Ibsen. Translated by Miles M. Dawson. The Four Seas Company, Boston.

Miles M. Dawson was authorized a quarter of a century ago to translate "Brand" into English verse after Ibsen had read the first draft of the translation. Edmund Gosse has called "Brand" "one of the great poems of the world;" and though it is very well known in this country that Ibsen is considered a great poet by his own people, the efforts to transmute his poetry into English have not been adequate to cause us to associate Ibsen the poet with, or as anything like comparable to, Ibsen the dramatist.

Mr. Dawson does much to rectify that discrepancy. His translation of "Brand" is admirable poetry. The glowing fierceness of "Brand" as a mighty tragedy is in his lines.

The tragedy itself is well known. Ibsen struck with a two-edged sword at religious practices; at those who compromise and at those who are uncompromising. Pastor Brand is the apotheosis of fanaticism. "I am no ranting sermonizer," he cries. No. He worships God fiercely, disdaining creeds and churches, abjuring comfort and ease. He crosses a storm-beaten lake to shrive a dying man; he spurns his avaricious mother, demanding that she give up her hoarded pittance on the threat that he will not visit her when she is dying; he will not leave his bleak parish even to save the life of his child, and after its death he forces his wife to give her choicest mementoes to a wretched fallen woman, then tells his stricken wife that because she gave them unwillingly she might as well have cast them into the sea. He builds a new church, but growing disgusted with the worshipers—temporizing and dilatory and compromising—he closes the doors, throws away the key and starts off with those who dare follow him toward the mountains. His followers grow a-weary and stone him—but he pushes on, madly on, until he is buried beneath an avalanche.

"If want breeds not spirit,
'Tis not worth while the pack to save,"

may be taken as Brand's philosophy. He curses the weak-spirited, the compromiser. He is puzzled by what responsibility for weakness may be placed on heredity, or what causes and extenuations there may be for crime; but after troubled meditation, he disposes of all that with:

"Riddle deep and dark as hell!
No one can your meaning tell.
But along the sheer abyss
Dances on the witless crowd.
Souls should tremble, cry aloud,
But of all scarce one sees this:
What great obligations grow
From the fact: 'I live.'"

One of the striking passages in which the translating poet has certainly not offended the original occurs when Brand reproaches his mother for her greed, and recounts an incident remembered from childhood. He tells her that he has a horrified conception of her—

"From an experience when a boy:
That memory time cannot destroy,
It scars, disfigures and disgraces
The soul, as harelips do men's faces.

"One autumn evening, father dead
And you sick unto death in bed,
I tiptoed in to where he lay,
Ghastly beneath the candle's ray,
I stood there, staring from a nook,
And saw he held a prayer-book.
His trance surprised me most of all.
And now his wrist had grown so small.
I recognized there very well
Fresh-ironed linen's pungent smell.
Then heard I footsteps on the stair;
A woman entered; unaware
That I was present, sought the bed.

"She rummaged, searched the body o'er.
First did she move the dead man's head,
Drew forth a bundle—two—three—four!
She counted—whispered 'More! More! More!'
She dug one package out from under
The pillow, corded, knotted, bound.
With eager hands she stripped and tore
And with her teeth rent this asunder.
She searched again and more she found.
She counted. . . . Muttered: 'More! More! More!'
She wept, she prayed, spluttered, swore:
And, like a hound she seemed to trace
By smell each secret hiding place.
Each hiding place was drained at last
And with her treasure she slunk past,
With greed unsated left the room
Like one sent forth to meet his doom.
The treasure in a cloth she laid
And stood there, sighing: 'That was all!'"

Brand's Christianity is unreasoning. He is of the stuff that martyrs are made; but fanatics also. There is nobility in his offer of shelter to the wretched harlot who enters with a babe in her arms, and in his exhortation:

"Woman, let your child be freed
From the wild life that you lead,
Be redeemed, from sin upraised,
And the brand from him erased!"

But the woman scornfully answers:

"Much you know of the affair!
Such a miracle none can Ever compass as reclaim him—
'Tis not possible for man!
War on you who did disclaim him!
Where I bore him—know you where?
'Twas a filthy ditch along
Where was drinking, ribald song;
In the slush baptized and mire,
Crossed with coals left from the fire,
Fed from spirit-flask before
From my bosom. When I bore,
Men stood 'round us two and more.
Know you who these were? His father—
Or, indeed, his fathers, rather!"

But Brand is not disgusted. The vile speech does not repress his feeling of what is his duty, and he calls upon his wife and asks if it is "not clear what should be your duty here?" And she with breaking heart parts with the treasured clothing that wrapped her own babe. Though Brand was quick enough to rebuke his mother for greed, he upholds the harlot when she cries out for more, after the wife has parted with only half of her treasures.

And when the woman is gone he turns on his wife and asks: "Was it willingly you gave?" and hearing her answer, he retorts:

"Your gift's cast in the sea
And the law's unsatisfied!"

Indeed, indeed, it is a strong drama, and Mr. Dawson has done splendid work with it.

LOOKING FOR CURIOS.

THE QUEST OF THE QUAINT. By Virginia Roble. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

The author begins the chapter on "Old Valentines:" "In the forgotten forties, flowers were 'posies' and letters 'missives'. People wrote of 'ringlets' and 'tresses', never of 'hair'. No one cried, although enough 'tears were shed' to drown the heroines of the day. It was the age of romance, but romance on stilts."

And "The Quest of the Quaint" records the search for trophies of that period which, without respect for our own superficial and bedaubed decade, we call "artificial." Decorated bandboxes, silhouettes of Edouart and Patience Worth, Bennington dogs, teapots, mugs, jugs, clocks, cotton prints, mirrors, furniture, candlesticks and a score of other half forgotten things, prized by the collector and discovered in all manner of out-of-way places, is the theme of the author's comment.

AMERICAN NOVELS FOR AMERICANS.

Rupert Hughes, One of the Finest of American Novelists, Tells what He Thinks of the Fad for Russian Books.

BY RUPERT HUGHES.

When, as a boy in Missouri and Iowa, I used to be invited to eat at another boy's house occasionally, I noticed a delightful flavor about the alien food that was lacking at home. As a matter of fact, our own food was equally good and probably better; at least, the boys from other homes eating at mine said so.

Later I realized that, next to hunger, there is no better sauce than novelty. I was crediting other folks' food with virtues it did not possess; bringing to it what I found in it.

People who read books are subject to this same palatal fallacy. Fed up on American life and its representations in fiction, they take up an English or a Russian novel and are greatly excited. They wonder why American fiction lacks the brilliance and profundity of foreign fiction. They write doleful essays explaining the reasons. The usual explanation, repeated till it nauseates with its parrot squawks, is that Americans write in haste and for money. This was said of authors before America was discovered and is as true of one country as of another.

Only today I find in the New Republic a few melodious tears shed by John R. Dos Passos, who contrasts two American women with Russian women and admits that American fiction is pitiably inferior to Russian. I can't and don't read Russian periodicals, but I know enough about Russia at second hand and about humanity at first hand, to feel safe in declaring that this same essay has been written in reverse by Russians complaining of the morbid repetition of unhealthy patterns in Russian fiction as contrasted with the fresh, vivid, unfettered style of the Americans.

Reading the biographies of the great Russians I am struck by their poor success at home and their bitter sufferings at the hands of native critics who cried up foreign wares. Also I know that American fiction circulates to an enormous degree in Russia.

Many years ago a man I knew came back from a visit to Russia with the overwhelming statement that a Russian princess, a great reader, too, had told him that my book, "The Real New York," was the best book she had read that year. Now "The Real New York" was only a guide book with a very poor coating of fiction. The lady in Russia was tired of reading about the steppes and the serfs and the knouts and the suicide syndicates, and about chateaux and schlossen and week-ends and curates. She was thrilled by my descriptions of the horrors of Coney Island; the curious ethics of the "family entrance" open on Sundays when the front doors were closed to vodka devotees; the elevated trains; the parks in the slums, Riverside drive by moonlight, and other things unknown in Russia. In this country these were stale topics and for quaintness one had to read about Moscow or Delhi or Whitechapel road. A corner saloon is hopelessly stupid to the average American reviewer. There is something fascinating about a "pub" or a bottega; a "dollar" seems plebeian, a "quarter" is trash; a "half crown" is literature and a "pistole" or a "sou" is romance. But it is only our fatigue of home things that makes us feel this way, and the business of American novelists is with dollars and saloons and other things that occupy so much the national soul.

At times when I read the Russian masters (all honor to them) there is something irresistibly appealing about dialogue like this as I get it through a translation darkly:

"A prosperous morn to the biptchka (a footnote usually explains this as meaning little mother;) and dost thou suffer still with thy shtchemkvds (a painful ailment) so hateful to God?"

I read that and spurn the cheap American stupidity of "Mornin,' maw' is that goldurned rheumatiz nibblin' at ye yit?"

Yet the latter is an exact translation of the former and exactly as artistic, vivid and true and it took as much of a genius to transcribe it.

The trouble with American fiction is that, like all other national expressions, it grows monotonous when unrelieved by travel. When I have read several Russian books in succession, I find them ludicrously morose, imitative, sophomoric, mock-heroic burlesques of Hamlet at his most hopeless hour. I turn to the infinite variety, sanity, democracy, tenderness, wit, pathos and gentle mysticism of American fiction. After I have read persistently the American magazines and novels,

WOMEN SCORED IN GRIPPING WAR DRAMA BY ARTZIBASHEF

Play Ends with a Punch Showing How a Whole Coward Is Preferred to a Mutilated Hero—George Middleton in "The Road Together" Depicts the "New" Woman Who Is Devoid of Passion and Jealousy—Plays by Beulah Marie Dix—Rose Pastor Stokes—Charles Nirdlinger and Sheumas O'Brien.

"War."

IT IS the thirty or fewer words in the stage directions which close the play that make Michael Artzibashef's "War" (Alfred A. Knopf) a tremendous drama. The final and unspoken sentence is the keystone in the tragic arch and gives the plot strength and unity. It is slipped into place so abruptly, so swiftly that one is astonished to see what but a moment before appeared to be a heap of ideographic stones suddenly become a symmetrical and imposing structure.

The play, translated by Thomas Seltzer, is in four acts, the first of which is nothing but a prologue which, besides what utility it may have in introducing the characters, is for no other purpose than to show the contrast between a household when the country is at peace and the same household when the country is at war, and women are weeping and fearful because their men must go to the front.

The role of Asya is scarcely less important than that of Nina, who, more than any of the others, has the play revolve around her. Semyonov, the consumptive student, is reminiscent of Sanine, the titular hero of the novel that made Artzibashef known in America. He is of a higher moral type than Sanine, but as bluntly speaks his mind. When Asya is weeping because her beloved Volodya, brother of Nina, is ready to enlist, Semyonov horrifies her ears by remarking that he is thinking only of Daue, a young officer of great musical talent whose death would be a loss to the world.

"You are all heroines," he says to her, "until it strikes home. It's Daue and none but Daue, that I am sorry for. He is worth all the Volodyas in the world put together. If Daue should be killed it would be a genuine loss.

> Asya: You are not sorry for the others.
> Semyonov: For some I am; for others I am not. For your Volodya, for example, I am not. Upon my word, I'm not.
> Asya (indignantly:) Aren't you ashamed of yourself, Senya?
> Semyonov: Why should I be? It is only to you that he is so precious. But for humanity to be minus one Volodya is really no loss.
> Asya: Why, he is your friend.
> Semyonov (darkly:) I have no friend.
> Asya: So much the worse for you.
> Semyonov: Perhaps. But try to look at it objectively. All right; Volodya remains at home, goes through the university, becomes an instructor in mathematics, marries you, begets children. What boredom! Is it worth being born into the world for that?

The last speech is entirely typical of Russian pessimism; but in this instance Semyonov is embittered because he in vain loves Asya.

In much the same way Prince Voronetzky has in vain loved Nina, the wife of Vladimir Aleksandrovich, an officer. The Prince is neither morally scrupulous nor courageous. Only he, Nina's aged father and the consumptive Semyonov, who is too weak for war, are among the men that remain. Daue bids his violin a passionate farewell. Vladimir tears himself from the weeping Nina. Volodya pushes the entreating arms of Asya aside and enlists, as becomes the son of an old warrior who has explained petulantly to Nina when she, thinking of her individual happiness, protests against war.

> "Only Russia's enemies can speak that way. (Striking the table with his fist.) In such a time as this we have no right to speak about our own personal love. We have no right to argue and reason. . . . We must all go and die, and we mustn't reason about it. I am an old man, but should it become necessary, I will go without question, because the whole of Russia, my country, needs my life. What are you in comparison to the destiny of Russia?"

Nina is lonesome and sorrowful and the Prince offers his comfort, which is refused. She is loyal to her husband. She looks forward to seeing him again. Then comes the news of Daue's death; and she exclaims, "How terrible war is!"

> The Prince, comfortably remote from the battle front, answers bravely:
> "Yes, it is terrible. And yet there is a great deal of tragic beauty in it. I don't know how it is, but I feel drawn to the war myself; something pulls me to it.
> Semyonov (who has overheard, speaking in an undertone:) It seems to be a very mild form of attraction.
> Prince: What is life here? It is not even a game; it is just a long-drawn-out agony. We don't live here; we just exist. . . . But there, face to face with death, the everyday shell drops off, and man becomes that which he ought always to be—the tragic bearer of heroic ideas. . . . It may seem strange, perhaps but I honestly envy those who are in the thick of it. There is movement, fight, real life out there.

But the Prince gets no nearer the battle lines than the comfortable household of Nina's father.

Comes then news that Volodya has been killed and his body is being brought back for burial. Even Semyonov is no longer sardonic. Distress fills the household—but the Prince talks to Nina of love, and is repulsed. But she even becomes happy because news is brought that her husband has been wounded and is soon to be home.

> Semyonov: Yes, you are lucky, after all.
> Nina: He is wounded, though.
> Semyonov: What if he is? The wound will heal. You know, it's even better so. If he hadn't been wounded he might have been killed later. Now it's all over. Even if he should want to go again he is cured, you won't let him. In the meantime the war will end, and then you can begin to live. With the cross of St. George, all roads are open to him. He can get anything he wants. You'll move to Petrograd—I can't for the life of me get used to that name—Petrograd.
> Nina (smiling gaily:) No, no; I won't let him go again. Let others go now. Vladimir has done his part.
> Semyonov: And has distinguished himself doing it, too.
> Nina (radiant:) Try as I may, I can't imagine Vladimir in war—a hero—under fire. As I see him, he is just a plain, dear man.

Vladimir, the hero, her husband, is carried into the room before Nina and placed in a chair. The blanket with which he is covered slips off and shows the stumps of his legs wrapped up in white, formless, ugly rags. Vladimir puts out his hand to her and eagerly calls: "Nina!"

Then says the stage direction: "Nina starts back from him in terror, reels, and falls straight into

"The Road Together."

George Middleton's four act play "The Road Together" (Henry Holt & Co.) is, nothwithstanding his repeated trick of allowing people to overhear what other people say, in point of technique the best that he has written. The development is surprisingly rapid, each act complete as an act should be, the dialogue is natural and interesting, the characters have personality—but their psychology makes one pause, not incredulous, but hesitate and wonder.

After ten years of comfortable married life, Dora, the wife of Wallace Kent, district attorney, discovers that her husband, who aspires to a seat on the Federal bench, is not so intrinsically honest as she had believed. She further discovers that her very dear friend, Julia Deering, has secretly—honorably—been long in love with Wallace. This is revealed when Julia urges Dora to meet Safford again, a man whom Dora had sent away after being strongly tempted to go with him. In the process of ferreting from Kent the political deal which would mean his appointment to the judgeship, Dora is nearly overwhelmed to find that her husband has long been in love with Julia, though he does not suspect that she loves him. Dora has ceased to love Safford, but pretends otherwise.

That complication seems a little theatric, no more so perhaps than is permissible in work designed for the theater. Kent accuses Dora of being a "wanton" for having "lived a lie" with him, admits that he also has "lived a lie" with her, but blames her extravagance for the financial embarrassment in which he find himself. Dora tells him to go to Julia and be happy. She also goes to Julia to ask that she, Julia, not reveal to Kent that she, Dora, no longer loves Safford. Julia, finding that she can now have the man she has long loved, discourses thus:

> "Listen, Dora! Because he was unattainable he filled my thoughts; yet when he came to me I saw clearly what all the years of thought unconsciously had done. They had bound you to him in my eyes; always the thought of him had also been the thought of you, because you two were man and wife and I was an outsider. . . . Dora, I have lived with the thought of Wallace, but you have lived with the man. You said it all that day in a few words. You've shared the daily habit of living; you've walked beside him; he's held your hand; you've eaten at the same table; moved in the same room; sat by each other's bed in illness and shared the hidden intimacies while I lay in the night alone. And then his work. I could never be a part of that. It isn't my sort. This all means something more than what he and I have felt for each other."

When Kent comes in upon them and insists upon telling Julia the truth about his corrupt political deal, Dora tries to protect, calling upon Julia not to believe him, and saying that her extravagance had forced her husband to do it.

The result is that Julia now realizing that Kent has been a "thought" rather than a lover, goes away; and Dora and Kent are somewhat reconciled in the midst of stripping their house while preparing to separate.

Dora and Julia are the apotheosis of the "new" women; the generous, altruistic, thinking women, who are no longer jealous of each other when both love the same man and want him. Such women would never do murder. They are not women of passion. They overcome the so-called primal impulse. And as such women they are interesting—but not entirely convincing.

"Moloch."

Beulah Marie Dix, with the laudable purpose of making war repugnant, has written "Moloch" (Alfred A. Knopf,) a play in three acts, a prologue and an epilogue. It is overloaded with mechanical horrors. The scenes are not laced together with a vital story. As a sequence of pictures — tableau — in which the same people appear before, during and after the war, it is no doubt very valuable to the pacificists. The author treats war as an abstraction. She doesn't differentiate between the aggressor and the defenders of their hearthstones. The enemy is called "the foreigners;" she shows the individual sufferings—and ignores the factor of national destiny, the protectorate of weaker countries, the ideals of a free land. These remarks are pertinent because hers is a thesis in dramatic form, and not a drama despite the fact that it has been produced by the excellent company of Holbrook Blinn.

When war is declared Robert's friend (the characters have no country or nationality,) being a "foreigner" leaves the family he has been visiting and the girl he loves, and returns to his own country to fight the country of his guests. The invaders come, and a lieutenant is murdered by a half-crazed woman in Robert's home. The house is burned and his wife and father are turned out into the cold. Robert, an officer at the front, captures and tortures an enemy's aviator who has accidentally dropped a bomb on a Red Cross train. The aviator is Robert's friend, who is so badly burned as not to be recognizable.

After that war is over, when Robert and his brother are wounded and no longer fit for service, his country finds that the allies have been dishonorable, so an alliance is made with the erstwhile enemy and together they war against the erstwhile ally of Robert's country.

"Moloch" is just the sort of slush to appeal to those who study the froth on the current of events without knowing or caring for the tidal surge that makes the currents. There are people, and lots of them outside of America—in Belgium for instance—who would rather suffer all the theatric horrors that "Moloch" conjures up than have such "blessings" as non-resistance brings.

"The Woman Who Wouldn't."

G. P. Putnam's Sons announced "The Woman Who Wouldn't" as "harsh, brutal, strong," they defined it very well. It is the sort of a play one expects from Rose Pastor Stokes, who, though she uses a familiar theme in a familiar way, has put new harshness, new brutality and new strength into the story of the poverty-stricken laborer's family.

It is sordid, and some people may think it disgusting. But the author has writen it well and the time will come—we hope—when nothing more than good work will be demanded of the artist; and nothing but badly written lines and poorly drawn characters will be disgusting in literature. None of these are in "The Woman Who Wouldn't." The material is old, the viewpoint even of Mary Lacey in the third act, when she is proud of her illegitimate child, is not new.

The scene is laid in a workingman's home in a small milling town in Pennsylvania and the first two acts show the Lacey home suffering from the effects of a long continued strike. The action of the play develops around Mary, a young girl of 19, who sends away Joe, the boy she loves, though he is willing to do the "honorable thing" by her even though he admits that he does not longer love her.

The mother, Mrs. Lacey, is a long-suffering Christian woman who pathetically believes the Lord will provide though no food is in the cupboard and coal must be borrowed by a half-bucketful from the neighbors. The father scorns the idea of a God caring what happens; but rises in an orthodox temper and strikes his daughter when he finds that she is pregnant. To evade being forced into marriage, Mary runs away from home.

Eight years later she returns, famous as "The Mother"—so-called by the workingmen over the country because of her speeches. She finds her father injured and with spirit crushed, her mother dead, her sister still pitifully struggling to get along. The child is with her. She tells them, even the child, that Joe is the father; and he offers—wants—to marry her; but in a friendly way, she refuses. She is contented, she is not ashamed.

We submit that that is not an easy situation to sustain with anything like dramaturgical dignity. The impulse is to rise up and call the idea "damnable." Perhaps the idea is. Ministers and good people who know about such things must pass on that. We are concerned with the dramaturgical features; and they are excellent. Considering how old, how worn, how hackneyed is the material used, "The Woman Who Wouldn't" is a remarkable play. And though it is designed as a thesis play, the thesis is in the body of the action rather than in the matter of the characters.

"Four Short Plays."

Charles Frederic Nirdlinger, author of "The World and His Wife," and many other plays that have been produced with success, offers "Four Short Plays" (Mitchell Kennerley) for the amusement of those who like comedy in one act.

Of these, "Aren't They Wonders?" is perhaps the most entertaining. It is put together with a dramaturgical dexterity quite rare and though the play is highly "unethical," since neither the woman who deceives her husband nor the young employee who also deceives him is punished, yet it is good comedy. Miss Kaye, the stenographer in the same office with Tom Farrer, cleverly baffles the wife of their employer when she attempts to arrange it so Tom and she will be together—alone—for the New Year's celebration. The two women are the "wonders," and the titular question must be answered emphatically in the affirmative.

"Looking After Louise" is another satirical study of woman, showing the adroitness with which she will discard one lover and take on another even while pretending to be the soul of honor and being, in fact, so scrupulous that she cannot bear to hurt the feelings of the one whom she is discarding. Such injury to his feelings is quite neatly evaded by lies.

"The Real People" is a rather topsy-turvy burlesque showing a vaudeville troupe at rehearsal and after rehearsal. Right under the nose of the audience bloody and apparently serious tragedy is suddenly transformed into comedy; and it is to be hoped that the effect on the stage will be more striking than in print.

"Big Kate" is written around the popular conception of Catherine of Russia, showing her tempestuous and volatile passions, her hysterical temper and the intrigue by which a supposedly English schoolmaster (who is really a diplomat trying to persuade her to furnish Cossacks to George III to fight American revolutionists) evades becoming her husband.

Three of these plays, and one in particular, show the one-act play at perhaps the most dexterous phase to which it has been developed in this country. Mr. Nirdlinger is a clever craftsman and he is at his cleverest in "Aren't They Wonders?"

"Duty and Other Irish Comedies."

Sheumas O'Brien calls "Duty" (Little, Brown & Co.) and the other four plays in the book "comedies," but they are ironically comic. Two of them, "Duty" and "Jurisprudence," might as well be called satires.

The former, "Duty," presents the predicament of an old woman breaking the law by selling liquor at her public house after closing hours. The Head Constable wheedles a drink from her, and he is driven into concealment by the approach of the Sergeant, who also wheedles a drink from her. The Sergeant, fearful of discovery, goes into concealment when the Constable enters. He too coaxes a drink from her. Then when the three dignitaries of the law have discovered one another they find that she has sold drinks to two civilians, and the civilians are haled off to jail while the Head Constable in the name of his "Duty" informs the unfortunate old lady that he will prefer charges against her.

"Jurisprudence" also gets its dramaturgical energy from potent liquor. The magistrate finds the de- to discover that this liquor has been purchased for "Scotch Whisky" in the very store of which the magistrate is himself the proprietor.

"Magnanimity" shows what poor chances honest and guileless folk have against the machinations of the wicked. When a stranger in the public house offers Bernard Flavey a good coat in exchange for an old one, Flavey is overcome with gratitude, little thinking that the coat he obtains is one which the police, on the trail of a burglar, are seeking. And when Garret Devlin writes a letter of recommendation for Flavey, and purchases a watch at a bargain from a stranger, he little realizes that his magnanimity will establish him as an accomplice in the burglary.

"Matchmakers" is a farce revealing the pomposity and subsequent humiliation of Denis Delahunty and wife when they find that the news of Denis being elevated to a title is unfounded, and that Kitty Corcoran is therefore not so beneath their son as they had thought.

"Retribution" could be played only with Irish characters. No other people would be generous enough to strip their trousers and send them out with a friend to pawn; no other friend would drink the money up and then return to explain how it slipped through his fingers; no other mutual friend would be plausible enough to persuade the second party to entrust his last bit of clothing on the road to the pawnbrokers.

The plays are amusing, but their development is somewhat jerky. They are more on the order of farce in that they do not convey a strong sense of probability.

CATCHING SIMILES.

A DICTIONARY OF SIMILES. By Frank J. Wilstach. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

"If our first parents had had a Boswell," says Mr. Wilstach in the preface of his unique dictionary, "many similes which are now in general use would be known as having been current in the Garden of Eden. Undoubtedly, on many occasions, Father Adam, when addressing Mother Eve, made use of 'Cold as ice,' 'Busy as a bee,' 'Proud as a peacock,' 'Weak as water,' 'Angry as a wasp' and 'Bitter as gall.' With reliable data, many a simile which is now marked Anon. would be credited to Adam."

Mr. Wilstach began the Dictionary of Similes in 1894, and has collected something over 20,000. He chanced to notice the expression that "the news spread like wildfire," and he began to wonder about similes in general, and, he says, "I began to copy into a large blank book the similes in every book I read. Finding this collection of use to others as well as to myself, it occurred to me that as opportunity presented I would begin with Chaucer and gather all the useful picturesque similes from all of the important poets and prose writers down to the present time. It seemed an endless undertaking, but I pursued the work with growing interest and delight. . . . Victor Hugo, in 'Les Miserables,' tells of an old man who never went out without a book, and who seldom came back without two. This has a humorous application to myself. Year after year I have carried about with me some volume or other on which I had set my covetous eyes, hoping during an idle moment in a busy day to rifle it of its similes. And, often, like the character in 'Les Miserables,' I have ventured forth with a single volume and returned with a precious armload. So this work has been carried on through sheer love of the chase."

The quotations range from Eschylus to Irvin Cobb, the latter getting into classic company just thirty-six times. Balzac, the Brownings, Byron, Dickens, Conrad, Dumas, O. Henry, Hugo, Thomas Hood, Keats, Longfellow, Kipling, Meredith, Ouida, Shakespeare, Shelley, Swinburne, Wordsworth and Whittier, are among those most frequently represented, and numerically Swinburne closely rivals Shakespeare.

The book is not only valuable for the student, but it is interesting. Similes are pictures, and this is a picture book for the mind's eye; a wonderful collection plundered from the classics and from many contemporaries that will perhaps be classics.

A TOURIST'S NOTEBOOK.

HAWAII: Scenes and Impressions. By Katherine Fullerton Gerould. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

The interesting part of Mrs. Gerould's "Hawaii" is her attitude toward the islands and the people and scenery rather than in what descriptive details she offers. Though she acknowledges that her experiences were limited to a month, she found time to form an opinion on everything—from positive assurance that the natives do not believe there is a Japanese peril to the fact that the missionaries are responsible for the exterminating death rate among the Hawaiians, who are "literally dying of clothes."

She found that the important work of dredging in Pearl Harbor was "not pretty to look at," and her aesthetic sense was outraged by the ubiquitous khaki of the American soldiers. She informs us that in the famous aquarium "you can see fish that seem to have been created by French dressmakers;" and with some detail gives an account of a feast which she attended where everybody—or almost everybody—was drunk, though she was assured that there was only pink lemonade to drink.

Her chapter on Kalaupapa, the leper settlement on Molokai, is informative, though she goes into the Stevenson-Hyde-Damien controversy without having anything new to tell. It is entirely in keeping with her attitude throughout the book that she should remark that the Hawaiians "by playing the ostrich about Kalaupapa" and "declining to talk much of it "lose the finest chance in the world of being praised;" and "let loose in Kalaupapa a shrill eugenist from the East, and you would soon have a Kanaka hell." The lepers seem quite comfortable in their privilege of marrying, and the experiments and observations of the STUDY OF THOREAU.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU: A Critical Study. By Mark Van Doren. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

Bernard Shaw is one of the few men who have lived to find himself, in spite of obstreperous struggles, being coddled and caressed by the very people he tries solicitously to outrage; but if ghosts are observers of the world, then the shade of Swift, finding his choicest satire enshrined in the nursery library, must be subject to whatever is the spirit's equivalent for apoplexy; and Mr. Van Doren predicts some such unpleasant experience for the shade of Thoreau, for, says Mr. Van Doren, Thoreau "will always appeal to the 'confirmed city men' he affected to pity. For the same reason that 'Robinson Crusoe' appeals most to land folk, 'Walden' will appeal more and more to the men and women of 'institutions,' to men in studies and clubs, to boys by the fireside in winter."

This critical study is the first to be founded chronologically on Thoreau's Journal, upon "the closed pages" of which he spread the introspections of a mind that was troubled with the disjointedness of the world.

"Thoreau had more native humor than any of the transcendentalists, just as he had a livelier appreciation of facts. . . . 'Thoreau is with difficulty sweet,' said Emerson. Thoreau rarely bothered about being sweet. He had an appetite for sarcasm and a gift for rejoinder, and often indulged both in the closed pages of his journal. He was a voluble talker, and did not spare his fellow townsmen criticism. Stevenson most absurdly charges him with 'a hatred of a genuine brand, hot as Corsican revenge, and sneering like Voltaire.'"

But Mr. Van Doren thinks that Thoreau "is properly discounted only as his readers grow civilized and distrust the exposition of the elementary; he will come fully into his own when there is no one left who takes him literally and recommends his audacity as either profound or ultimate."

The intellectual men of Thoreau's time are described "as not so much men as faculties—not so much individual beings as individual forces. Carlyle is a whole universe in miniature, 'creaking, groaning, tortuous.' . . . Byron is an angry, glowing cheek. Keats is an odor hanging heavily close to the earth. Shelley is a mad bird who would fly higher than is possible. Wordsworth is a column of white mist moving among the hills. Ruskin is a swift, fevered river. Emerson is an electric wire snapping and emitting brilliant, cold sparks. Thoreau is a pard-hunter, moving quietly whither he likes and refusing to be touched."

Mr. Van Doren compared Thoreau's solitude to a "vacuum" in which he lost the nice balance between his private and the world's public life. But the isolation and solitude gave him opportunity to develop appreciation for the beauties of the books that he was unceasingly reading. "One wise sentence," he said, "is worth the State of Massachusetts many times over;" and he envied the Greeks because they could "express themselves with more facility than we in distinct and lively images. He hated "wooden and lifeless" words, with "paralysis in their tails," as he hated gossip. And the author estimates that "he was a good workman, filing rather more finely than Emerson took the trouble to file. 'Every sentence is the result of a long probation,' he said, and 'should read as if its author, had he held a plow instead of a pen, could have drawn a furrow deep and straight to the end.' 'The prose writer has conquered like a Roman, and settled colonies,' it seemed to him."

ARCHITECTURAL ADORNMENT.

A HISTORY OF ORNAMENT: Ancient and Medieval. By A. D. F. Hamlin. The Century Company, New York.

Prof. Hamlin deals with architectural and not with personal ornament, and beginning with the earliest examples (Egyptian, Chaldean, Assyrian, Asiatic and Greek) shows how designs which, in some cases were carried far down the ages, were drawn from plant forms familiar to the early decorators.

The book is somewhat technical and seems to have been written for the special use of students.

It touches on the industrial arts—textiles and pottery, wood carving and iron lattices—but interest in them is confined to their architectural values; that is, as their use for drudgery, tiling, doorways and windows.

Prof. Hamlin, who fills the chair of architectural history at Columbia, explains that by the method followed in this volume "attention is directed to the origin and development of the historic styles of ornament, all the various motives, kinds and types of ornament of each country and period being considered in discussing the style of that time and region." He promises other volumes which will treat of the oriental and modern styles.

DEFENSIVE FORCES.

Capt. Kerrick's "Military and Naval America" is designed to be comprehensively informative, to describe the work and duties of the various departments of the army and navy, and to explain for the layman—who is astonishingly ignorant of those subjects—the organization of the several fighting forces, which, by comparison with those of our only possible foes, are extremely inadequate. But this is not a campaign book for the militarist. It is purely explanatory.

Capt. Kerrick describes the work of the executive departments—the General Staff corps, Adjutant-General's department, the Judge Advocate's department—and explains the organization of the various corps—quartermaster, medical, signal—and gives detailed information regarding the infantry, artillery, cavalry and National Guard branches. It is really a handbook of military affairs, and covers the navy as thoroughly as the army, revealing the multitude of problems which each arm of the service has to face from providing

"COTTON IS KING" THE WORLD OVER.

Brilliantly-written Book Shows How the White Fleece has been Woven into the Web of Civilization.

COTTON AS A WORLD POWER. By James A. B. Scherer. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

James A. B. Scherer, president of the Throop College of Technology, Pasadena, has written the epic of cotton. The purpose of his book has been "to trace the skeins of this fleecy white fiber through mazes of fable and fact, from its cradle in India, where Alexander discovered it, to modern England by tortuous slow stages through Egypt, Rome and Spain; to tell the story of its revolutionary influence in Great Britain and to suggest its wholly unappreciated effect on the history of the United States; to show the personality and depict the times of some of the men whom it influenced and who in turn lent their vigor to increase its strength; and finally, to indicate the peculiar importance of cotton in contemporary world trade," and its relation to the Great War.

The first known mention of cotton is found in a Rig Veda hymn, composed fifteen centuries before Christ, which honors the "threads in the loom," indicating that manufacture was already well advanced; and the fact remains, says Dr. Scherer, who gave the material in this book as lectures at Oxford and Cambridge in 1914, that the deft fingers of the Hindu "wrought with the bow and the almost incredibly simple East Indian loom so as to produce delicate fabrics that have never been surpassed."

Columbus found cotton in America, Magellan found it in Brazil, and the soldiers of Cortez "marching on to the great and romantic capital city, which stood buttressed and insulated in the middle of a huge salt lake, discovered an imposing urban civilization that staggered them, as though they had suddenly stepped back across the centuries to Nineveh or Thebes" and the splendid fabrics and much of the armor of that civilization were made of cotton.

Dr. Scherer's book is literally fascinating. His somewhat new interpretation of cotton as an economic and historical factor, as even an influence on the pessimistic deductions of Malthus which begat the Darwinian theory, is sustained and developed with a charm rarely found in books of heavy import.

He shows the importance of spinning in Colonial life, and the origin of manufactures in America, and how cotton was chiefly responsible for the factionalism that eventually took form in the bitter moral issue of slavery and became the Civil War.

The Southern States were the first of the Union to take a stand against slavery and, as anomalous as it may now sound, they were the first to concede the invalidity of States' rights; but perceiving the economic benefit of slavery in the cotton fields they gradually reversed their position and under the guise of States' rights forced the issue of the sword.

With the early development of cotton in the South, which exported heavily and fed the looms of England, the industrial and epochal revolution in England was brought about. England, passing through the cotton famine occasioned by the Civil War, has since sought to prepare against further famines by developing for herself cotton fields in Egypt and other parts of Africa.

Dr. Scherer believes that the South was defeated chiefly by the maritime blockade that shut off exports. "Cotton is King," he says, became the feverish watchword on the southern lips, but the northern gunboats would not permit King Cotton to levy his tributes on the exchequers of Europe; and the author shows how the South failed to utilise even what opportunities it did have, and so lost millions upon millions in gold that might have gone into the war treasury.

He believes that not only the South, but the whole of America, is now failing to utilise to the best advantage its cotton opportunities, and says of America: "A shrewd nation of money-getters, they nevertheless permit Europe so far to surpass them in the dextrous manipulation of their natural monopoly as to sell them back $2 worth of cotton for every $1 worth they ship abroad."

He believes that even as cotton forced the negro problem in all its magnitude upon the South, so now it is in a fair way to solve that problem, for "it is this plant now that chiefly employs and improves him as he labors with liberated hands. . . . A steady drift of negroes is proceeding from cities to the country, and it is in cotton farming that the negro chiefly succeeds."

The demand for cotton grows in leaps and bounds. The annual turnover of capital is now estimated at $250,000,000. He shows how Imperial Valley and Arizona are now producing the fleecy wealth on a scale that will soon put California and the Southwest into "the Cotton Belt."

The cotton market is explained as a most delicate seismograph recording world disturbances; and it is shown that three days after Austria declared war on Serbia, "the cotton market throughout the world was in a state of collapse," but was soon restored because of the enormous demand for the "vegetable wool."

The importance of cotton in the world war he believes justifies England's strictest blockade against Germany. It is not only needed for clothing, for bandages, for blankets, for tents, but for ammunition. Powder is made of cotton and "for rifle ammunition alone the German army consumes an average of fifty-one tons a day, while their machine guns require at least an equal amount, and the lighter ordnance more than three times as much—making an annual total consumption by this one army of not less than 100,000 tons, or 400,000 bales, American weight, for ammunition purposes only. . . . As for the navy, it is said that a twelve-inch gun consumes 300 pounds of ammunition, or about a half a bale of cotton from which this is made, with every discharge; so that a battleship firing at its greatest capacity, might use 5000 to 6000 pounds of powder, or from ten to twelve bales of cotton, every minute during an action."

MAN AND MANKIND.

TAKE IT FROM ME. By Vance Thompson. Fleming H. Revell Company, Chicago.

Vance Thompson has tried to get off his perch and be friendly. He has many valuable things to say, but he seems rather affectedly informal about it—or maybe like the young man from the country in O. Henry's "Poet and Peasant," Mr. Thompson is so natural, so completely himself, that all of us who are used to conventional artifice cannot help but be suspicious that he is posing a bit.

But he says much that is interesting, though the repetition of that titular phrase—"Take it from me"—is quite irritating. However, he writes vigorously and it is easy to admire a book that has in it such glowing passages as: "Do you remember in ante-bellum days how that pompous word Humanity strutted about? Things were to get themselves done for Humanity. Science sweated in laboratories and clinics—for Humanity. It sliced up dogs and anatomized paupers—for Humanity. There were even men who proclaimed themselves Lovers of Humanity. And all that sort of thing. It became a cult, a credo, a totem. . . . You can't make an abstract thing of it—crown it with a capital letter—and then kneel down and worship it or stand up and love it. You can love men and women and children; you cannot love Humanity—for no sane man can love a vague, mathematical theorem, a vague 'general average' of mankind."

That is the text of his essays, so to speak. He believes that love and kindness should be personal; that we should sympathize with and try directly to understand the other fellow—recognize his rights. And he says: "I think you may read the story of civilization in this attempt, manifold and tragic, to get rid of the two wrong ways of living in this world—by begging or stealing, so-named or not—and to establish the law of work for wages. Many of the attempts have been pathetic in their futility."

He thinks the tragedy of riches and poverty is that it separates "man from his fellowmen and in this separation is the peril and the penalty. The old story of Lazarus and Dives was nothing but a parable of this truth. The tragedy in it is not the fact that one was rich and the other poor—that one sat at the table and fed himself, while the other lay in the road harried by dogs that fed upon his sores. The tragedy lay in their separation. And that separation was a mere symbol of the rich man's isolation after death—when chaos rolled between him and his fellows.

"It is rather odd that when you take a man of the people and let him become a rich man he never loses this inbred, popular view of his riches. He knows the peril. Carnegie, the little Scotch ironmaster, was a man of the people. Into his strange little brain there came the ambition to make the steel trade an empire over which he should reign supreme. He did it and when he was tired of the toy he sold it for nearly $500,000,000—most of them superfluous. Then dim ancestral voices began to whisper to him the wisdom of the race. The terror of the superfluous fell upon him. And with both hands he tried to throw away the superfluous—to beat back the money waves that were flowing in upon him, waist-high, throat high, up to the mouth and the nostrils and the eyes. A tragic story—tragic as that recorded in old books and old plays—and told in statistics more puissant than a Shakespeare tragedy."

PISCATORIAL PUBLICITY.

Dana Burnet, whose new novel, "The Shining Adventure," was published recently, writes from Maine that he has been leading "a life shamelessly normal and regular, doing nothing except work, swim, fix my automobile, walk, repair my automobile, swim and work." He continues, "one of my friends has just caught an extremely large fish. I might borrow it and have my picture taken holding it by the tail. I have often seen pictures of authors holding large fish by their tails. They seem to be very popular—the pictures, I mean, not the authors."

MIDSHIPMEN AND MARK TWAIN.

Mary Twain's works, according to a recent report, have proved to be the favorite books of fiction of the midshipmen at Annapolis. A certain number of hours' reading a week is now obligatory at the Naval Academy. The future admirals are al-

A VOLUME OF ESSAYS.

THE PLEASURES OF AN ABSENTEE LANDLORD AND OTHER ESSAYS. By Samuel McChord Crothers. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

Mr. Crothers appears but slightly vexed by the troubles of modernity. True enough he touches on war in "The Strategy of Peace" but has little to say that has not been heard over and over, though perhaps no one has used just the phraseology that "the present war will go on till its momentum is exhausted, and it will give way to that equilibrium which we, for want of a better term, call peace." But Mr. Crothers, unvexed and genial, finds enjoyment in keeping his eyes to the past and in old books. He finds that modern writers cannot have their prose texture favorably compared to Izaak Walton's or other valued writers of the seventeenth century, for our novelists use words that "are listless and indifferent. They look as if they had been up late at night and had lost interest in life."

For his examples of "Protective Coloring in Education," he mentions boys that pretend to be dull in school so they will not be petted, but instances the allegorically scientific verse with which the grandfather of Charles Darwin surreptitiously, so to speak, slipped knowledge into the minds of those who admired his poetry.

He is delighted with Dr. Fuller, an author in whom Pepys (three hundred years ago) found pleasure and expounds the secret of his charm, which was a tranquil, cheerful attitude toward the political calamities of his turbulent day. The titular essay, "The Pleasures of an Absentee Landlord," is rather an exposition of the fact that a man can get some pleasures out of life without being worried by responsibilities.

To our mind the most entertaining of his chapters is "A Literary Clinic," which further illustrates the theory that it is easy to take the problems about us too seriously, and in which Mr. Crothers by charming indirection recommends that literary critics read a few pages in the Congressional Record before ploughing into the current novels. The contrast, he believes, will certainly enhance admiration for the novels—though they do use words that seem to have kept late hours and to have lost interest in life.

J. HENRI FABRE.

THE LIFE OF THE CATERPILLAR. By J. Henri Fabre. Translated by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

M. Fabre found a universe in his backyard and among the important inhabitants—though in his wonderful eyes there were none unimportant—were the caterpillars. He discovered that the despised gnats wage deadly war upon the cabbage caterpillar by impregnating its eggs with their own, so that their own grubs are born within the intestines of the cabbage scourge and eventually destroy him. He discovered that pine, or processionary, caterpillars have by virtue of sensitive spots on their backs infallible meteorological faculties and remain snug in their warm nests when distant storms are brewing. He discovered that the female moths of certain varieties call the males from afar by means of odors that progress much like waves of light so that the "scent" (used for want of a better word) is carried even against the wind.

All of his experiments were conducted with improvised instruments, as he says: "I have at my disposal absolutely none of the apparatus dear to science, not even a modest thermometer, for my unlucky star continues in the ascendent, proving as unkind today as when I learnt chemistry with pipe-powls for crucibles and bottles that once contained sweets for retorts."

And this great scientist, who writes like one inspired—as no doubt he was, if man can ever be—drew from his observation that came close to seventy-five years of intense study an abiding faith in a Divine and Discriminating Intelligence. "But let me tell you," he says, sadly, "we are called old-fashioned, you and I, with our conception of a world ruled by an Intelligence; we are quite out of the swim. Order, balance, harmony: that is all silly nonsense. The universe is a fortuitous arrangement in the chaos of the possible. Chance has decided all things," and changing from irony, he writes: "Yes, we are a pair of prejudiced old fogies when we linger with a certain fondness over the marvels of perfection. Who troubles about these futilities nowadays? So-called serious science, the science which spells honor, profit and renown, consists in slicing your animals with very costly instruments into tiny circular sections. My housekeeper does as much with a bunch of carrots, with no higher pretension than to concoct a modest dish, which is not an invariable success."

He also says that if we choose to go to school to the caterpillars we may soon see "the inanity of our leveling and communistic theories. Equality is a magnificent political catchword, but little more." Among the processionaries, all work, all spin, accident determines the leader each day and all follow him blindly, and "it is a splendid world of equality truly, but, alas, a world of caterpillars. Inequality is our law. And a good thing, too. A sound which is invariably the same, however often multiplied, does not constitute a harmony. We need dissimilarities, sounds loud and soft, deep and shrill; we need even discords which, by their harshness, throw into relief the sweetness of the chords. In the same way, human societies are harmonious only with the aid of contraries. If the dream of our levelers could be realized, we should sink to the monotony of the caterpillar societies; art, science, progress and the lofty flights of the imagination would slumber indefinitely in the dead calm of mediocrity."

M. Fabre was, at the close of his long life, close to the century mark, when fame found him out and carried his name over the world; but he lived long enough to know that he would never be forgotten, so beautifully was his work done; and his studies of the caterpillar are no less interesting than his better known studies of the flies, spiders and bees.

REMINISCENCES OF CIVIL WAR DAYS.

Veteran Statesman Shows Contrast Between the Present and a Half Century Ago. Stories of Lincoln's Time.

REMINISCENCES OF A WAR-TIME STATESMAN AND DIPLOMAT: 1830-1915. By Frederick W. Seward. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

Frederick Seward, son of Secretary of State William H. Seward, was Assistant Secretary of State under the administrations of Lincoln, Johnson and Hayes, and his reminiscences, which are chiefly of the Civil War period, give some curious and much interesting information on the historical events while he watched and in which he participated.

It is like hearing a voice speak across the gulf of time when one now living repeats stories of the Revolutionary War told to him by his grandmother who saw Tarleton's dreaded dragoons. But Mr. Seward, though he repeats some things previously put into print by himself, has more than grandmother's tales to relate; more than to relate—as he does—how Horace Greeley was given opportunity to found the Tribune, or how the word "telegram" was coined, or to explain the occasion and genesis of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," or the dramatic manner in which the unsuspecting Meade was notified that he had been appointed to the command of the Army of the Potomac, or how President Lincoln was once under the inadvertent fire of a French cruiser.

Mr. Seward carried warning of threatened assassination to Lincoln, who was on his way to Washington, which resulted in a change of train schedule; and on the night that Lincoln was assassinated he had his head fractured while repelling an assassin that fought to reach his sick father, the Secretary of State.

Among the interesting things in the reminiscences is the comment which Lincoln made in the author's presence just before he signed the Emancipation Proclamation. "I never in my life," said Lincoln, "felt more certain that I was doing right than I do in signing this paper. But I have been receiving calls and shaking hands since 9 o'clock this morning, till my arm is stiff and numb. Now this signature is one that will be closely examined, and if they find my hand trembled they will say 'he had some compunctions.' But, anyway, it is going to be done."

The Civil War is remembered as bloody and ruthless, and the banks of the Potomac were the scene of many fierce conflicts. "Armed vessels patrolled the river. Fortifications were erected on its heights. Armies encamped along its shores. The sound of cannon or musketry daily echoed over its waters. Homes and fields were abandoned by their owners, for none felt safe against the raids of the scouting or foraging parties of the Union and Confederate troops."

But one spot was sacred, inviolate. There was no truce, treaty or understanding—but both armies respected Mount Vernon, the home of Washington. "No foraging or plundering took place within its precincts. . . . It was the one bit of neutral ground in that long and bloody war. Reverence for Washington's home and memory hardly needed to be inculcated by the commanders, for it was implanted in the heart of every soldier, whether he was a Northern man or a Southern one."

Mr. Seward tells, but does not vouch for the report current at the time, that the old mansion was left in the charge of two persons, a man and his sister. "He was a Union man, she was a sympathizer with the Confederacy. When the visitors approached from the river side, they were presumably from the Union gunboats, and he went out to meet them. When they approached from the landward side, they were presumably from the Confederate camps, and she went out to greet them. But it made little difference. Whichever they were, they all came as friends, and were received as such."

From Mr. Seward's account it appears that those were the days when American statesmen followed a unique policy of diplomacy and did what they thought was right. The Cabinet advised and secured the release of the "Trent," a British steamer whose capture was the occasion for great rejoicing in the North, and did so on the ground that holding the vessel was violation of the very principles which the United States had fought the war of 1812 to uphold. When Japan made a mistake and paid an excess indemnity, the surplus was without historical precedent returned. When Samoa offered herself to the United States the offer was reluctantly and only tentatively accepted. When war was threatened between the United States and England over Alaskan boundaries a conference was called and the British commissioner upheld the claims of the United States. The amity that followed each of these ethical adjustments would seem to illustrate that, German philosophy of statecraft to the contrary, the honor of a nation should not in the least differ from the honor of an individual if nations are to have mutual respect.

Mr. Seward discusses his subjects topically, and they are numerous. He has much to tell of Alaska and the Alaskan purchase, which his father was instrumental in making though there was much opposition to buying a land where the ground was "frozen six feet deep" and the "rivers were glaciers" and the only vegetation was "moss." He saw the entrance of China into the field of diplomacy and quotes an astute remark of a Chinese diplomat of the day: "A statesman stands on a hill. He looks farther, in all directions, than the people, who are standing at the foot of the hill, can see. When he points out what course they ought to take, they are suspicious that he is misdirecting them. They cry 'Pull him down!' When they have at last gained the summit from which he points the way they can then correct their misjudgment, hundred homes and have converse with the hearts of men and women. Instead of seeing but the front of things, we walk and take in life from every angle."

He believes that all men intellectually great, and particularly statesmen, have been lovers of books. It is the profitable study to read of the youth of great statesmen. Almost invariably you will find them as young men such as would today be sneered at as 'book-worms.'"

Mr. Ingersoll pays especial tribute to his favorites, Whitman, Tolstoy and Thoreau first of all because the author of "Walden" can make him forget the city and steam radiators. He believes that the great author can never go out of fashion, though the younger generation may sneer at him. He writes: "They say that Byron (with Scott) is nowadays out of fashion. 'They' are mistaken. The autohor of 'Childe Harold' and 'Don Juan' will never be truly out of fashion so long as there is a flare in youthful hearts, a discontent in ambitious minds. He is the poet of a great revolt, a kicker at the traces, and then again he is the singer of the bleeding heart, of lost causes; he hurries you across the seas upon his speeding bark; he tops the crags of human loneliness and leaves you desolate. His songs are of the rollicking wine of life with its excitements, its depressions, its sentiments of hatred, beauty, joy. For youth he is the poet of liberty, of intense individualism; for age the poet of thwarted desires, for everyone he has a chestnut bur to put beneath dull content; his mockery is for stupidity, dryness, stagnation. Get under the crust of his effusive egotism and you will meet a somber, lonely, sensitive friend and who will be to you a hypodermic stimulative."

Books, Mr. Ingersoll says, are the great "openers of doors," they represent the cumulative wisdom of mankind; they are to be taken earnestly—as friends. His essays, some nine of them, are all "bookish," if a derogatory adjective may respectfully be applied to high purpose; and their value should be immense to fictionites.

SPANISH INFLUENCES.

OUR HISTORIC SOUTHWEST. By Ernest Peixotto. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

Mr. Peixotto has gone over the old Spanish trails and visited the old missions of the Southwest, excluding California, and his numerous illustrations are an attractive feature of the book.

He begins with New Orleans (the one non-Spanish touch in the book) a city whose charm lies in the old French Quarter. Old San Antonio, the ancient capital of Texas, he finds, has improved so rapidly that landmarks are being wiped out; and El Paso, of recent importance in the news dispatches, which was named after a ford—"El Paso del Rio"—has grown so fast that it now boasts of skyscrapers higher than those found needful in Paris or London.

The old Mission Church of San Xavier del Bac is called "the handsomest, the most complete and extensive Spanish mission within the land," though it has repeatedly suffered from the depredations of savages. He describes the pueblos, "sleeping away their hoary age in the solitude of the desert," and Taos, the "sketching grounds for those who depict the Indians and frontiersmen," and mentions some of the artists and their work.

Mr. Peixotto sketches the history of the early conquerors that pushed into the Southwest and who have been signally ignored by historians until the present day. Their exploits are now, as he points out, being given serious attention, and archives of Spain are searched for records of early explorations through Texas, Arizona and New Mexico.

"Our Hispanic Southwest" is an artist's note and sketch book with very little that is sketchy about the subjects that have attracted his attention, and he has brought to his work obvious familiarity and sympathy with the traditions and records of the land.

"BOY OF MY HEART."

The life-story of a young Englishman recently killed at the front forms the basis of a remarkable book the George H. Doran Company is publishing under the title of "Boy of My Heart." The book has aroused so much comment in England that the publishers have had difficulty in maintaining the anonymity of the author. Extra interest has been aroused in the public mind by the author's statement in the introduction that every incident in the book is literally true—even down to the remarkable coincidence related in the last chapter (how the news of the boy's death was brought to the family on the very night that he was expected home on furlough.)

"If there had never been a war," writes an admirer of this book, "this story would find its way inevitably to the heart of every parent who has lost a son."

FANNIE HURST AND "COPY."

Fannie Hurst, whose second book, "Every Soul Hath Its Song," is just published, says that "aside from a deep interest in Labor legislation, Suffrage, and dancing, I find it possible and necessary to devote six hours a day to my writing. In my zeal for verisimilitude, I have gone on the stage, into department stores, sweat shops, lunchrooms, etc., in various capacities of salesgirl, waitress, etc. But after various experiences am convinced that, after all, propinquity is not necessarily essential to understanding."

The More Excellent Way

BY CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY

All Booksellers.

A tale of modern society and the divorce question, with the scenes laid in New York, Sorrento, Bermuda, and Reno. Rarely has an author, without attempt at preaching, written a story so subtly influential, so provocative of thought, even while it seems to leave no time for thought in the swift succession of its dramatic developments.

GORGEOUS FRENCH ERA IN HISTORY.

Stern Searcher After Facts Ignores and Discredits in His "Crowned" Book Many Fascinating Features of Du Barry Days.

THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. By Casimir Stryienski. Translated by H. N. Dickinson. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

Casimir Stryienski is the author of "The Eighteenth Century," the fourth volume in the National History of France series. The translation is by H. N. Dickinson. The history has been crowned by the Academie Des Sciences Morales et Politiques.

There is no period of French history that is not dramatic; but this volume which begins with the death of Louis XIV and closes with the dawn of the Revolution covers an era at once magnificent and wretched, one pervaded with intrigues and counterplots; one when favorites in a pique decided the fate of statesmen and so the destiny of nations. It was the era of Pompadour and Du Barry, of Cagliostro and Choiseul, of Frederick the Great and Maria Theresa, of Louis the Well Beloved, who was nothing of the kind. It was the era when the Thirteen Colonies became a nation and the simple dignity of Benjamin Franklin very nearly awed the luxuriant courtiers of Versailles; when a streetwalker might—and did—impersonate a queen before a duped Cardinal, and when the queen herself impersonated a dairy maid at Trianon.

But M. Stryienski has been a rigorous historian. For the most part he has avoided details, which is always one of the requirements—we may almost say "penalties"—exacted of those historians who essay to compress a century (or even, as in this case, three-quarters of a century) into one volume; although M. Batiffol to a wonderful degree circumvented that requirement in "The Century of the Renaissance," the previous volume published in this series.

Mr. Stryienski evades the lure of Madame de Pompadour, of Madame du Barry, of the Comtesse de la Motte, and refers to only the most significant incidents in the multitudinous affairs of these strange characters. He permits no gossip to creep into his stern text, and so by omission discredits the fascinating story that Louis XV came by the smallpox through kissing a maiden by the roadside; and sends another fascinating story into exile by briefly saying that Choiseul was dismissed because of expensive failures to colonize Guiana, whereas dramatic impulse is more ready to believe the story (unmentioned by the historian) that Du Barry trapped him before the suspicious king over a letter to Spain.

Frederick, because of the great part he had in war and politics, and Maria Theresa, because she was not only the dominant woman of Europe (Russia's Catherine being more concerned with internal affairs,) as well as the mother of Marie Antoinette, played large parts in the affairs of France during that period. And now that Austria and Prussia have linked battlefronts, and Poland as well as France is the battlefield, it is interesting to remark the sardonic comment of Frederick over the partition of Poland. Maria Theresa allowed herself to be persuaded that she ought to join with Prussia and Russia "for the good of her soul." "Thereupon," wrote Frederick, "she began to weep terribly. Meanwhile the troops of the three powers entered Poland and took possession of their shares, the Empress weeping all the while. But of a sudden we discovered, to our great surprise, that she had taken far more than the portion allotted to her, for she wept and took the while, and we had much difficulty in persuading her to be contented with her share of the cake."

As an instance of how little altruism there is among nations, we find the historian setting it down that France came to the aid of the American revolutionists "in the hope of avenging the disasters of the Seven Years' War"—which may be true as far as Louis XVI, who represented the French government, was concerned; but the army that came was largely officered by men who did not care a trooper's damn about the Seven Years' War, but who were inspired with zeal for such constitutional freedom as Franklin had explained as the cause for which the colonists were fighting.

Franklin was a notable figure at the court. M. Stryienski records that "his pleasant manners and dignity helped to conciliate the scientists, the men of letters, the philosophers, the great nobles, the court and the king. . . . Franklin was presented at Versailles on March 20. The handsome old man made a picturesque figure, with his spectacles, his bald head, and his patriarchal appearance. People pressed about his path as though he were some strange novelty. It was not usual at the courtly ceremonies to see the homely honesty, the simple dress, and the absence of luxury characteristic of Franklin. The worthy American wore a brown coat and carried a stick in place of a sword."

M. Stryienski's history covers but seventy-four years of the century, but they were pregnant as two usual centuries. He is not a Frenchman by birth, which may somewhat explain his coldness toward picturesque details and absence of dramatic presentation. He does not sustain and carry forward the rumbling motif of national discontent that finally burst into the cacophonic revolution. He has set in place, as it were, with great precision the skeleton of French history during the eighteenth century; but he has not clothed those bones with flesh. He has written pure history; whereas the ideal historian is a great novelist dealing with facts.

BOLD CONFESSIONS.

Don Marquis, author of "The Cruise of the Jasper B," who presides over a daily column in the New York Evening Sun, has recently engaged in nailing literary insincerities, and makes the following confession:

"We have for our own part a greater sin than that on our conscience. There are a number of books that we habitually pretend that we have read which we have never read at all. They are great books, we suppose. At least we've heard a lot about them and read a lot about them and people who assume to know say they are great books. Some of them we have tried to read and couldn't read, but we have pretended at one time or another to have read all of them. Here is our list of shame:

"'Tom Jones.' We have tried to read it four times and could never get five pages into it.

"'The Vicar of Wakefield.' We have attempted it at least six times and taken the count in the first round every time.

"'Dante's Divine Comedy.' We have been going against the Cary translation, which we hear is a good one, at least once a year for twenty years and we can't get interested in it. Yet up to the present moment we have always pretended that we had read all of it and liked it.

"'Don Quixote.' We have read a little of it and we know all the usual things that are said about it, and we even wrote some stuff about it one time, saying all the things that are usually said about it, for which we got $25, but we don't really like it, it puts us to sleep; it seems long drawn out and clumsy to us.

"'Boswell's Life of Johnson.' We never read any of it. But we have pretended to, and have pretended at times to quote incidents from it and have got away with the incidents. . . .

"We have always pretended that we were familiar with Walt Whitman's poetry, but as a matter of fact we never read anything through excepting 'When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloomed.'"

TAGORE'S STORIES BETTER THAN POEMS

First English Edition Shows that He has Fully Developed the Narrative Qualities Prized by the Occidental.

THE HUNGRY STONES AND OTHER STORIES. By Rabindranath Tagore. The Macmillan Company, New York.

The first English edition of Rabindranath Tagore's short stories are in "The Hungry Stones and Other Stories" all of which were translated under his personal supervision. They differ from his verse and plays to the extent that they are concrete. They are stories that Americans can appreciate without being first overwhelmed by the knowledge that he is a Nobel Prize winner, an English Knight and the "rage" in London; but the average American that spells culture with capitals, which is quite the fashionable way, prefers to admire the vague abstractions and ecstatically "feel things" that she cannot "express."

Of the stories in this collection we prefer "Vision," which is not only an excellent story structurally but gives an illumined picture of the selfless adoration of the young Hindu wife who allows herself to go blind rather than wound the feelings of her husband, a medical student, by letting him know that his treatment is ineffective. When her brother protests she says: "It seemed to me very unfair that, when my family had given me in marriage, they should interfere afterwards. After all, my pleasure and pain are my husband's concern, not theirs."

Her brother forces upon her medicine from a reputable physician which she throws into the well and vows that she has taken; and when her eyes grow worse, to protect her husband, she tells her brother that in reality she was treating herself with the medicine he had procured. When a friend tries to make her indignant against her husband because he waited until it was too late to call in an experienced physician, the wife answers: "My blindness was itself a sufficient evil. Why should I make it worse by allowing hatred to grow up against my husband?"

But the day comes when her husband wishes to take a new wife, and says to her "Your blindness has enclosed you in its fortress, and I have now no entrance. To me you are no longer a woman;" and the girl that he wishes to marry is brought into the house.

Then, evading tragedy and brightening the end with a touch deft as O. Henry's, the story shows how the husband is brought to his senses. It is beautifully sustained and developed.

The titular story, "The Hungry Stones," is fantastic and gets a strong weird effect by describing the dreams of a man who is irresistibly drawn night after night to an old palace, once the scene of passionate and splendid orgies.

"Victory," the only story translated by Tagore himself, seems to have a strong allegorical significance. A young poet worships the Princess Ajita; but people think that "the poems Shekhar wrote were absurdly simple, and it must be a mere accident that they did not write them themselves." In a great contest before the court against a popular poet, Shekhar loses; and in despair returns to his room, destroys his song and drinks poison. Then "golden anklets tinkled in the passage outside the door, and a subtle perfume came into the room with the breeze." The Princess Ajita had come to see that the prize had not been awarded with justice and that she had come to crown him with the crown of victory. "She took the garland of flowers from her own neck, and put it on his hair, and the poet fell down upon his bed stricken by death."

"My Lord, the Baby" is also a striking story, subtly dramatic in revealing the simplicity, loyalty and courage of an old servant who believes that because a child of his master died at the same time one was born unto himself that he had stolen his master's child.

"The Kingdom of Cards" is obviously allegorical, presenting a realm of socialism where initiative is forbidden, and showing how the traditions are overthrown by the arrival of a shipwrecked prince. "The Renunciation" is of a Brahmin that renounces caste for love; "The Cabuliwallah" is of the sympathy between two fathers of widely different castes.

A few other stories are in the book, but they have less of the story form, being, as "Once There Was a King," studies of childhood, or, rather trivial incidents.

ISLANDS OF THE PACIFIC.

THE SPELL OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS AND THE PHILIPPINES. By Isabel Anderson. The Page Company, Boston.

In Mrs. Anderson's third book of the Spell series she follows at an interval of more than a quarter of a century on the footsteps of her father, who as a naval officer visited Hawaii and the Philippines long before the United States dreamed of possessing them; and Mrs. Anderson makes interesting material of his notes and letters written at that time.

She tells much of the history of both groups of islands, describes the customs, the changes that recent years have brought, the economic factors influencing the people, and unmercifully "roasts" the Democratic administration for its parsimonious retrenchments and political blunders in the Philippines.

She sketches the history of Hawaii from the coming of white men, through the reign of the five Kamehamehas, and under American protection; describes the more striking scenic effects of the islands, and tells much about the industries.

The larger portion of the book is given over to the Philippines, which, with its more turbulent history, and anthropological variety, is much the larger subject. With some detail she describes Manila (but neglects Cavite—as most travelers do,) and has a great deal to relate of her tour in the islands, which was taken in the party of the then Secretary of War. The chapters on the Igorots and Ifugaos and Moros, who are far more picturesque than the Tagalogs, have much interesting information.

Considering the small amount of space given to the subject, Mrs. Anderson has quite comprehensively reviewed the American occupation and the Philippine insurrection; and one paragraph in particular throws light on the stubborn resistance and repeated attacks of the Filipinos: "Uniformly the Filipinos lost, but when their courage waned their officers would announce that they had won a big victory somewhere else. In one day, they reported, we had lost twenty-eight thousand men in a region where in the entire month we lost but fifty-six. On another occasion they announced that two thousand colonels had been killed." She adds, "They must have thought our troops were all from Kentucky."

ANIMAL STORIES.

Charles G. D. Roberts contributes a new book to his series of animal stories. It is entitled "The Secret Trails" and deals, as in the case of all of its author's writings, with the creatures of field and stream. The egret, the bear, the rabbit, the boar, the moose, the dog—around these and others Mr. Roberts's themes are woven. As one reads of the great bird with the gorgeous plumes sacrificed to the greed of the hunter, or of the war dog that made a valiant fight and ran a brave race amid shot and shell, or the fight for very existence waged between "Cock-Crow," a thoroughbred black-breasted, red game-cock and a foraging hawk, one not only finds his emotions stirred but gains, at the same time, a new and very true insight into the forest drama that is played each day.

"The Secret Trails" is illustrated with eight pictures reproduced from drawings by Paul Bransom. There are also decorated end papers.

A glowing tale of Anglo-Indian life, including the true story of the Tirah Campaign.

"Kipling at his best never peopled Anglo-India better than has Maud Diver in this book."
—Boston Advertiser.

"As a story it is perfect, as a literary triumph it is worthy of the writer."
—Phila. Record.

"An extremely well written novel . . Mrs. Diver has attained a place in the higher rank of English novelists."
—Providence Journal.

"Any one who knew Capt. Desmond, V. C., as powerfully portrayed by the same author, in a novel of strength, power of word painting and portrayal of character and soul, knows what to expect of 'Desmond's Daughter,' and never does she fail. . . Much more real than ordinary history, for it is written not only on inside information, but there is the heart interest of the writer, which is the key to all history. . . There has been evolved a masterpiece that is a classic."

FOR THE BIRD LOVER.

For the general reader who wants to know something about birds without becoming a special student, Mr. Gilbert Trafton's new book, "Bird Friends," (Houghton Mifflin Company) fills a long felt want. Mr. T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary of the National Association of Audubon Societies, says of the volume:

"I have been reading it with the servation it is an epoch-making volume. You have done a notable work."

Samuel Merwin, whose novel, "The Trufflers," was published in October, has had the distinction of having a tearoom down in New York's Bohemian quarter named after the new story. Recently he invited a friend to lunch with him

DEVIL'S ADVOCATE IN GERMAN'S WAR.

Treitschke's Teachings Translated for the First Time Show Deadly Urge for the Use of the Sword.

POLITICS. By Heinrich von Treitschke. The Macmillan Company, New York.

Heinrich von Treitschke preached what Bismarck practiced, and the influence of the historian was so extensive that many of the allies' publicists seem to regard him as the leading devil's advocate. His name has been anathema since the war began; his lectures have not been available, a condition, however, that has not in the least minimized the cursings upon his head.

An edition of Prof. Treitschke's lectures on "Politics" (two volumes) translated by Blanche Dugale and Torben de Bille, with an introduction by Arthur James Balfour and a foreword by President Lowell of Harvard, presents what is probably most significant and vital of Treitschke's teachings. But Treitschke seems to have been more the spokesman of his day, a dervisher historian haranguing those who already believed, than a fierce prophet inspiring a simple people with zeal for martial destiny. Had he been unpopular he would not have been privileged to teach. But he was Prussian through and through. He justified the might with which Prussia dominated Germany, and remarks that the Emperor William I was "crude but correct" in saying: "The empire after all is only an extension of Prussia."

He believed in war, called it "nothing but foreign policy expressed in terms of force," and poured scorn upon degenerates that "rave of everlasting peace," for "heroism, bodily strength and chivalrous spirit is essential to the character of a noble people" and the highly cultured man realizes indeed that he must slay the antagonists whose bravery he honors."

Germans, he says, have "too little rugged pride," but the Prussians are more reasonable and call up more "moral force" than the French, and he prays that Germany be spared from "the corroding influence of peace;" and though "modern wars are not fought for booty, but for a high moral ideal," yet, "up to the present Germany has always had too small a share of the spoils" and "the outcome of our next successful war must be the acquisition of colonies by any possible means."

The state, he tells us, "can acknowledge no arbiter above it," and "weakness must always be condemned as the most disastrous and despicable of crimes, the unforgivable sin of politics;" and still farther we are told that altruism on the part of the state is an anomaly: "We praise the state which draws the sword to fend off ruin from itself but sacrifice for an alien nation is not only unmoral, but contradictory to the idea of self-maintenance, which is the highest content of the state." But "without war no state could be," and he glories in "the unquenchable love of war in the martial German race."

Treitschke despises republics and democracies; and he asks proudly: "Will anyone seriously contend that the sovereign people's wisdom has raised better men to the Presidency of the United States than destiny has placed upon the Prussian throne?" and "in spite of their great material progress Americans have hitherto failed to contribute anything to the great ideal possessions of the human race." The Germans, he says, are so far superior to America, that further study of American political conditions will profit nothing; and he also tells us that a democracy is more expensive than a monarchy, for "A single Presidential election, with all the agitations which accompany it in business circles and in the press, costs far more than the civil lists of all our princes put together. The expense is voluntarily borne by the American people and no mention is made of it."

Treitschke is vigorous and blunt, as the exponent of arrogance and force should be; and no doubt his was a great influence. But he was only one of a group, one with Lamprecht and Nietzsche, Bernhardi, Von der Goltz and Bismarck, the protagonists of "blood and iron."

CHARLES FROHMAN.

CHARLES FROHMAN: Manager and Man. By Isaac F. Marcosson and Daniel Frohman. With an Appreciation by Sir James M. Barrie. Harper & Brothers, New York.

It has been said that Charles Frohman's "star" system harmed the stage. Shortly before his death he remarked that it had injured his judgment. The stage can stand a lot of the kind of harming that was done by Maude Adams, Ethel Barrymore, E. H. Sothern—and the score of others whose names Frohman emblazoned before the theaters. The theatrical manager whose "stars" would not accept a scrap of paper to show their $100,000 contract for a season's work is not the sort of man who would harm anybody or anything. Practically all of his contracts were verbals.

No character of all the multitude that he put on the boards had a more dramatic role than Frohman in his lifetime. From the time he saw a theater, and as a boy began shuffling thick pasteboards so as to be more adept in handling tickets, until he went down on the Lusitania with the magnificent words: "Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure of life," he was literally a dramatic figure. His courage and his humor were irrepressible. Whether precariously hustling a troop of minstrels about the country and cajoling an audience by telegraph to wait until the delayed train arrived, or, as in his later days, directing the tours of his "stars," he was the same resourceful, reliable, genial man.

Perhaps one reason that failures scarcely touched him was due to his indifference to money. His biographers instance times when the memorable production of "Joan of Arc" because he felt that pictures could not do the great spectacle justice. The Germans were responsible for his death, and the irony of it is that he produced Schiller's poetic drama ("Joan of Arc") and turned over the proceeds to the Germanic Museum at Harvard, and sent to the Kaiser a magnificent vellum album containing the complete photographic records of the play.

James Barrie begins his appreciation of Frohman with: "The man who never broke his word. There was a great deal more to him, but every one in any land who had dealings with Charles Frohman will sign that." There is also a luminating paragraph in this Appreciation which explains why Barrie has written so few novels. He says of Frohman: "He was very dogged. I had only one quarrel with him, but it lasted all the sixteen years I knew him. He wanted me to be a playwright and I wanted to be a novelist. All those years I fought him on that. He always won, but not because of his doggedness; only because he was so lovable that one had to do as he wanted. He also threatened, if I stopped, to produce the old plays and print my name in large electric letters over the entrance of the theater." Barrie continues: "For money he did not care at all; it was to him but pieces of paper with which he could make practical the enterprises that teemed in his brain. They were all enterprises of the theater. Having once seen a theater, he never afterwards saw anything else except sites for theaters."

"LOVE'S INFERNO."

"Love's Inferno" by Dr. Edward Stilgebauer, translated by C. Thieme, (Brentano's) is a novel of the war, intended to be gripping and strong, and, according to the publishers, has had its merit certified by censorship in Germany. A "merit" readily explained by its uncomplimentary presentation of certain German officers and stress upon the brutal invasion of Belgium. It is much stronger than many war books, which is a negligible compliment; but as a novel it is not remarkable except perhaps for the positively freakish twist given the story in the fourth and last part.

The first three parts of the story are taken up with a very old though ever-new theme: The young wife of a German major loves guiltlessly a young captain, Adolf, who serves under him. The characters of both officers are ably and sympathetically drawn, particularly that of Maj. Berkesburg who has the more difficult part. They campaign together, Adolf untroubled in conscience and the major anguished and humiliated by what he has learned. Though Adolf is sent into danger it is the Major who is wounded; though later tragedy marks both men for her own.

After that Melanie changes her name to Nurse Irene and goes into the hospital corps and in Belgium rescues from the field a desperately wounded Belgium soldier, a great poet, who though in great pain gives her his latest poem and requires that she read it. Both perish together dramatically in the flood that follows the cutting away of the dykes to drive out the invaders. All of which makes a sensationally tragic and quite unreal ending—Ossa gratuitously heaped on Pelion to crush the heart of the reader.

DENATIONALIZATION.

THE TIDE OF IMMIGRATION. By Frank Julian Warne. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

In the United States there are fourteen million foreign born residents, or enough to make six cities the size of Chicago. The influx has vastly outstripped the assimilative powers of the country, and the incoming hordes lower the standard of living, cheapen wages, increase crime and threaten to denationalize the American people.

Mr. Warne, special expert on foreign-born population for the United States government, exhaustively considers the immigration problem in this book. He believes in immigration, but only to the extent of allowing those to come who will likely benefit the country; he scorns the cant phrases with which three Presidents, Cleveland, Taft and Wilson, have vetoed the illiteracy test because "it violated the traditions of noble America which is a haven of refuge for the oppressed of all the earth"—Chinese excepted. Mr. Warne says that for all that cant we are rejecting the "oppressed" if they are known to be diseased or immoral (33,000 were rejected in 1914,) and shows that most of those we are accepting have been lured from "oppression" by steamship agents and manufacturers looking for cheap labor, and that practically one half of the immigrants come for only temporary employment. "They do not come to this country to become a responsible part of society; they seldom are affected by those communal influences which would tend to improve their standard of living, and they retain for the greater part those Old World notions and habits of thought which unfit them to become members of our democratic society and to fit into our republican institutions."

He says that the "illiteracy test" should not be judged by whether it kept some out that deserved to come in, or admitted others who should be kept out, but by whether it would as a whole be of decided benefit to America. He seems to think that it would; and he is emphatically of the opinion that some definite measures for decreasing immigration must be taken soon. The internal situation is not only now alarming, but by all the signs of history and the precedents or previous wars in Europe, there will be a tidal rush to America when the present war is ended . . . and we now have enough foreign born to make six cities the size of Chicago!

MASK RIPPED OFF WILY IRISHMAN.

Bernard Shaw Declared to be a Serious-minded Individual Who is Intent Upon Doing the World Great Good.

BERNARD SHAW: The Man and the Mask. By Richard Burton, Henry Holt & Co., New York.

Prof. Burton is as enthusiastic over Bernard Shaw as though he had just discovered him. The professor will have it that Shaw is a great dramatist, a master of technique, a thinker, a poet and a mystic; or in other words, that Shaw is just the sort of a dramatist that he has impudently declared himself to be. Anyone thinking so must disagree with H. G. Wells, who—perhaps with the wish father to the thought—assumes that Shaw has ruined himself by his attitude toward the war. Mr. Wells takes precautionary measures never to ruin himself by telling his audiences anything that is likely to be unpopular.

Referring to the typically British uproar over Shaw's diatribe on the war, Prof. Burton says: "One may, if one wishes, assume with Mr. Wells that the playwright is demolished; or one may receive from the pious hands of Mr. John Palmer the epitaph of the once popular maker of intellectual drama. . . . But, aside from all this, the main point is that Shaw is still the author of 'Candida', 'Man and Superman', 'Mrs. Warren's Profession,' and sundry other plays—with their prefaces."

Prof. Burton does not believe Shaw has been duly appreciated as a dramatist. "In the critical treatment of Shaw up to the present time, emphasis has been laid, upon the whole, too much upon Shaw the thinker, at the expense of Shaw the artist," but "it happens, however, that the contemporary world is finding out, with more or less naive surprise, that Shaw meets the theater test and in fact is turning out to be one of the best acting dramatists of the British theater. He nicely fooled many of us in this way."

Shaw is called the frankest, boldest and purest minded of British dramatists; and Prof. Burton's operation in removing the "mask" from the "man" is no more intricate than removing the sugar coating of comedy from the bitter plays which Shaw would like society to swallow so that the reforms he advocates would get their work.

"Shaw began play-writing confronted by the historical attitude which declares that the playhouse is a secular indulgence; it belongs to Saturday afternoon, and Sunday is just ahead when we can put on sober clothes of repentance, purge, leave sack and live cleanly. And he met it by sufficiently hiding his seriousness within a framework of interesting fable and then so spicing his sermon with condiment of wit and satire and comic scene and character, that the pleasure of the playhouse was preserved even for the light-minded, and the mourners became like unto those who rejoice."

Prof. Burton thinks that Shaw's method of emphasizing by over-statement is "congenital," but acknowledges that the dramatist must "substitute heat for light" to drive home his points because to stop and explain would be tedious.

All of Shaw's published plays are briefly discussed chronologically, and the verdict is that he is a maturer, stronger, and even more promising dramatist at sixty than in 1892 when he wrote "Widowers' Houses."

Prof. Burton ridicules (and Shaw does too) those ardent admirers who find esoteric significance in the plays; and the author thinks that Shaw is disconcerting to two classes only: Those who have insufficient humor to be capable of taking his wit other than literally, and those who seek to "interpretate" the plays as though they were a kind of comic mysticism.

Shaw's success has been, and continues to be, astonishing—and to most people, gratifying. He has recorded that the first nine years in London his pen earned for him six pounds, and five of those were a medical advertisement.

Though Prof. Burton has rather heavily loaded Shaw's head with a variety of laurels, and has written a book that seems designed to overwhelm those numerous individuals that seem a little skeptical about admiring the man, yet it is good to read such a whole-hearted appreciation, one devoid of the touches of superciliousness that plagues the text of Shaw's commentators. And it is certain that Prof. Burton's concluding estimate is not immoderate: "A challenging, vital thinker, a keen and fascinating wielder of words, a skilled shaper of story in dramatic mould, a modern critic with passion for social betterment."

PROLIFIC AUTHOR.

E. V. Lucas, poet, essayist, novelist and "wanderer," is one of the most industrious of all living authors. Born in 1868, his first book of poems appeared in 1891. Since then, he states, he "has been so indecently industrious that the number of entries to his name in the British Museum catalogue, essays, novels, prefaced books, anthologies and works of travel run up to 108. For two years Mr. Lucas was employed by provincial papers, writing police reports, reviews, theater notices, inquests, etc. In 1893, at the age of 25, he joined the London Evening Globe. In 1894 he joined the staff of Punch, and has been reserve editor for some years whenever Sir Owen Seaman was away. His first serious book was a life of Lam's friend, Bernard Barton.

He is best known in America for his collection of verse, "The Open Road." Four books from his pen are published by the George H. Doran Company this fall—"The Vermilion Box," a jolly novel full of characteristic Lucas charm and optimism; "More Wanderings in London" (A delightfully illustrated guide book, a sequel to "A Wanderer in London;") "Cloud and Silver," a charming group of essays and Promethean qualities of the Russian giants.

In neither case am I just to either. America has great novelists today and great poets and great short story writers, architects and sculptors. They are American. What we lack is a few more critics to climb down from the garden wall, where they stare longingly into other people's yards, and revel in the glorious gardens flourishing at home.

NO SPEED LAWS IN WIT.

From "Peeps at a Propagandist's Desk" in the Los Angeles World comes the following tribute to "The Motorist's Almanac" for 1917:

"My motor evolution has been from a Hoosier-bred Ohio pony to the precarious flights of a California jitney. Hence my personal knowledge of the innards of a machine—a machine to me always signified an Underwood—verges perilously close to nil. So I farmed out my copy of 'The Motorist's Almanac for 1917' (Houghton Mifflin Co.) to a man who owns and loves one of the California pets. (Some proletarians put an extra 's' into the last word.) Here is what I got next day concerning William Leavitt Stoddard's collection of 'Much entertainment and not a few facts' and of Gluyas Williams's appropriate pictures: 'Well he knows what he is talking about. I'm going to buy that book. Look at "On Buying Things," "On Making Repairs," etc. "That just hits my experience," etc., through more space than will be allowed me to appropriate. Hence I place my official O. K. on this little almanac. There are no speed laws in mirth and wit.'"

GILBERT'S JOKE.

Mrs. Alec-Tweedie, author of "My tablecloths: A Few Reminiscences," just published by the George H. Doran Company, has the following story to tell of Sir W. S. Gilbert, coauthor with Sullivan in the famous Gilbert and Sullivan operas:

"Gilbert was once talking of Sir Francis Burnand, and how he scored off Johnny Toole, the actor. The editor of Punch was giving a dinner party and the first to arrive was the jovial Johnny Toole. Voices were heard on the stairs.

"'Get under the table quick, Toole,' said Burnand; 'quick, man, quick!'

"And the somewhat surprised comedian did as he was bidden.

"The other gentleman entered the room, and somebody remarked:

"'I thought you were expecting Toole tonight?'

"'Yes, he is here,' replied the host.

"'Here?' interrupted the visitor; 'where?'

"'Under the table,' replied Burnand.

"'Under the table! Whatever for?'

"'Blessed if I know; better ask him,' was all Burnand's comment. And so emerged from beneath the snowy tablecloth the comically disconcerted face of Johnny Toole."

ELIZABETHAN JEWELS.

Here is a list of some of the finger rings owned by Good Queen Bess, and with which Shakespeare was doubtless familiar, as we learn in "Shakespeare and Precious Stones," Dr. George F. Kunz's new book on jewels (Lippincott's.) Heriot, the Queen's jeweler, describes them thus:

"A ring with a heart and serpent, all set about with diamonds; a ring with a single diamond, set in a heart betwixt two hands; a ring with a burning heart set with diamonds; one great ring, in form of a frog, all set with diamonds; a daisie ring set with a table diamond; a ring set with nine diamonds, and opening on the head with the King's picture in that."

A traveler who visited Elizabeth's court "tells us that the Queen's right hand was fairly sparkling with jeweled rings." At her court Shakespeare became familiar with "The diamond, topaz, amethyst, the emerald mild, the ruby gay," and all the rest of the "Orient list" with which he gemmed his poetry.

VARIETY OF NEW BOOKS.

"Ireland's Literary Renaissance," by Ernest A. Boyd, an exhaustive account of the literature produced in Ireland during the last thirty years, under the impulse of the Celtic Renaissance; "A Diary of the Great War," by Samuel Pepys, Jr., the most up-to-date and amusing history of the times; "Aerial Russia," the romance of the Giant Aeroplane, by Lieut.-Col. Roustam Bek, which gives the reader full particulars of the progress of the science of aviation in Russia and of the production of the giant aeroplanes designed by Sikorsky. Also the novels; "The Redemption of Grace Milroy," by Carlton Dawe, author of "The Super-Barbarians," etc., and "House Room," by Ida Wild, author of "Zoe the Dancer;" the former is the history of a girl's struggle to rehabilitate herself after a term in prison; the latter is a tale fascinating in its setting, in its hardy-like characters, in its bold abandonment of some of the ordinary conventions. All are books recently published by John Lane Company.

PRESIDENT WILSON IN MOVIES.

President Wilson will be shown on the screen in the capacity of a motion picture actor when "The Man Who Forgot" is released by William A. Brady of the World Film Corporation. The film story is based on the temperance novel of that name by James Hay, Jr., recently published by Doubleday, Page & Co., and which has been widely circulated by prohibition organizations. The President consented to aid the motion picture people in several scenes, that lead to the "happy ever after" ending. The part of the play in which the President acts was made at Shadow Lawn.

PRUSSIANS IN POLAND.

"How the Prussians Came to Poland" is an account of the horrors of war during the invasion of the Russian province. The author, the Marquise Laura de Gozdawa de Turczynowicz, is by birth an American (she was Miss Laura Blackwell) and by virtue of her former citizenship was able to escape to America with her children. Her husband is a Polish agricultural scientist, now In-

Season's Fictions.

"Brown Mare" (Alfred A. Knopf) will not disappoint the lovers of that classic.

But it does. "The Brown Mare" is a short story of no particular charm or distinction except that it was written by Mr. Olivant, and describes an officer's love for a horse that dies after being poisoned by nibbling bark "somewhere in France."

The remaining chapters in the book are, apparently, observations (rather than stories) on wartime conditions in England, and touch upon Belgian refugees, the bombardment of Scarborough, the fear of Zeppelins, the interference of military duties with social amenities, the care of the wounded in hospitals, and the efforts of women to manage homes and estates while the men are at the front. These chapters are valuable enough, interesting enough in themselves, though not particularly noteworthy, but they certainly have no rightful place in a book that is represented on the title page as the story of "The Brown Mare" and nothing else.

"Richard Richard."

Hughes Mearns has used familiar and rather shabby fictional properties for "Richard Richard" (The Penn Company,) presenting our old friend the young millionaire incognito and the sweet girl with the drunken brother that needs regeneration. The man called Richard Richard with rare perspicuity sees that he will be able to borrow money from Geraldine Wells the first time they meet on board the ship Naples; but Richard is far from being an adventurer, though he is something of a poseur, and after becoming intimate with the Wells family introduces a garrulous Irish friend who says witty things and makes witty limericks, but regrettably the witty remarks and limericks must be taken on faith—they are talked of, but not recorded.

The story has many incidents to keep the plot unsettled, varying from delirium tremens of Geraldine's father to the bankruptcy of her family, but Richard Richard, aided a little by the phenomenal Phoebe, whose idea of humor seems to be confined to impudent remarks and an attitude of false ferocity, never fails to play the role expected of this Fortunatus, incognito.

"Richard Richard" is a hybrid novel, planned for light reading but eager for a little "high brow" color, and the result is not interesting, except perhaps as a curiosity.

"A Slav Soul."

Stephen Graham has selected and translated fifteen stories by Alexander Kuprin for "A Slav Soul" (G. P. Putman's Sons.) On the whole they are not typical Russian stories, or at least not what has been served to English readers as "typical." The titular story is, however, being morbid and futile and having a dense atmosphere of melancholic torpidity.

Mr. Graham says, "Perhaps the greatest of living novelists is [illegible]—exalted, hysterical, sentimental, Rabelaisian Kuprin;" and that is very high praise to be based on the stories in this volume (though "The Duel," and one or two other novels, is not unknown in English.) However, "The Last Word" is excellent though tragic satire, giving the defense of a lunatic that has killed a bourgeois pest; and "Mechanical Justice" is also satire, amusing but not volatile. A story of an entirely different kind is "The Elephant," describing how a real elephant is brought into her home to please a little girl ill with fever. "Hamlet" describes how a famous actor comes to the end of his success on the same stage and night that an unknown student becomes a star.

"The Klondike Clan."

S. Hall Young spent some thirty years in and around Alaska. He was after men's souls rather than gold. He wrote "Alaskan Days with John Muir," and was the owner of the dog Stickeen, of which Muir has written a classic.

"The Klondike Clan" (Fleming H. Revell) is Dr. Young's effort to portray through the medium of a very slender plot the days of the gold rush," the hardships of the trail, the dangers and agonies experienced by the men and women that went scrambling through the snows and over mountains. The book has an annoying affliction of [illegible] (that is, it repeatedly comes into the present tense,) it is episodical, the average reader is likely to shy at the religious tone, the plot is too frail to be seductive—but otherwise it is a striking book, and presents more intimately than Mr. Beach or Mr. London has ever done the truly epical stampede for gold. As we have said, it is episodical, but many of the chapters are complete enough in themselves—as "Lovin' Jim," whom his "pardner" calls with reason "the greatest man the Almighty ever made."

The Parson, with his muscular fists that are used when occasion seems to warrant, and irrepressible good cheer; Scotty, Sandy, and other veterans of the trail; the college boys, making a lark of hardships; who do not forget his friends; the Lucky Bill, who strikes it rich but loses Viva, who searches for her father and finds him too late—all are characters that are interesting to meet and watch. They have upon them the stamp of reality.

"Cupid in Oilskins."

J. J. Bell in "Cupid in Oilskins" (Fleming H. Revell,) is concerned with the common—to distinguish them from officers—sailors of England's fleet that put into Lilport when not scouring the sea for submarines. His fidelity to dialect may puzzle a few Americans who, however, do not flinch at the rustic jargon our native scribes put into the mouths of farmers and the mountaineers of Kentucky and Tennessee. Mr. Bell finds it necessary to use Cockney and Scotch, because the sailors aboard the Lapwing are a mixed lot, and all of them are interested in Lydia, the niece of Mr. Buckle.

Charlie Darling Moore is Lydia's favorite. He is a gunner on the Lapwing; but when his big chance comes he gets what is known to hunters as the "buck fever," and funks with the submarine in full view. Mr. Buckle, as becomes a patriotic Englishman, thinks Charlie scarcely better than a traitor and will not let him come into the house. But Lydia's heart is loyal, and it is the letter she writes him that is really responsible for the heroic feat with which he redeems himself and the honor of his ship, even after the Lapwing has been torpedoed.

"The Whale and the Grasshopper."

Here is something entirely new and enjoyable; "The Whale and the Grasshopper," by Sheumas O'Brien (Little, Brown & Co.) The stories are not fiction, having neither a tinge of plausibility nor scarcely a trace of a plot; but they are bright with merry, kindly humor, and studded with such comments as: "When a man falls into love he falls into trouble likewise, and when a woman isn't in trouble you may be sure that there's something wrong with her"—"A work of art is like a flower; it grows, it happens. That's all. And unless you charge the devil's own price for it, people will think you are cheating them"—"Every man is entitled to his own opinion until he gets married"—"People who have pluck enough to commit suicide usually have too much pride to boast of it beforehand"—and the poor sailor with the wooden leg says: "I'll take all I can get for nothing and give as little as I can help in return. I'm a capitalist by temperament, but being poor I didn't get a chance to exercise my talents."

Many is the merry tale that Padna Dan tells to his good friend, Micus Pat, and once in a while 'tis Micus Pat that tells the yarn to Padna Pan; though the latter seems the poorer listener, or rather the greater talker. And never a yarn but is comic, as the sad story of "The Dilemma of Matty, the Goat," who wanted to commit suicide because, through no fault of his own, he got himself two wives and knew that if he lived with them he would get himself arrested for bigamy, and if he left them he would get arrested for desertion.

Also there is the merry colloquy between the grasshopper and the whale, and the tragic tale of the Irishman who became "The King of Montobewlo" and turned cannibal; also the fearful fish story of "The Man with the Wooden Leg," as well as nearly a score more, and all of them sprightly and amusing.

"Miss Theodosia's Heartstrings."

The season has been signally free of regenerating children in fiction, but Annie Hamilton Donnell has a houseful of youngsters who tug at Miss Theodosia's heartstrings until they pull her—inadvertently, of course—into marital bliss. Miss Theodosia is a world-wanderer who returns to her village to rest, but upon finding that the poor family needs her washing she turns over the "whites," then secretly washes them herself to help the temporary orphan who is trying so hard to hold down the laundry work until her mother returns. Through the children the "nice" man appears and reappears until he becomes well enough acquainted with Miss Theodosia, who is aged 36, but doesn't show it, to ask her to marry him. He, too, is a world-wanderer, and a writer of romances, and believes he has been in love with Miss Theodosia since the world began—which is what every man says when he proposes, for such is the hallucination of love.

The children are a noisy, ejaculating lot, and present the belabored exuberance of a pollyannish household; so it is that "Miss Theodosia's Heartstrings" (Little, Brown & Co.,) is a "cheerful," a "sweet" story of the kind that seems to be especially designed as a gift to spinsters.

"Damaris."

Lucas Malet, the daughter of Charles Kingsley, in "Damaris" (Dodd, Mead & Co.,) tells, and tells it well, in the psychological fashion, a story of India in 1864, which reveals the love of Col. Verity, a widower, for Mrs. Pereira, who has married twice since those younger days when she and Verity missed what both think would have been a happier destiny had he not married the mother of Damaris.

The action of "Damaris" takes but a short time. Mrs. Pereira comes on a visit to the garrison where the colonel is stationed and mingles in the social life, where, though the truth of the old romance is not known, the tongues of gossips are busy. The book takes its title from the little girl who instantly falls in love with Mrs. Pereira and insists upon being loved by her; and it is in the child's name that Col. Verity at last calls the woman he loves back to him—after abandoning certain primitive and reckless emotions that were urging him into a course that would have ruined his career.

English life in India, when India was a dangerous country and the Sepoy rebellion was vividly remembered, is described—or rather is sketched in between incidents; and the author conveys very strongly the Indian "atmosphere."

"Unfinished Portraits."

In "Unfinished Portraits" (Charles Scribner's Sons) Jennette Lees embellished with romantic imagism certain accredited episodes in the lives of famous artists and musicians: Schubert, Chopin, Bach, Titian, Giorgione, Leonardo and Albrecht Durer.

The chapter on Chopin is said to have created a controversy in Europe, where some people, misunderstanding her method, have taken the Chopin letters as authentic. And the chapter on Chopin is the one that most strongly tries to convey the personality of the artist (not to be confused with "painter") instead of merely to tell a story around some actual or legendary event in the lives of the distinguished characters.

It is a severe strain on any author's art to make even "unfinished portraits" of so many of the greatest of men, putting the colorful periods in which they lived into the background, and that may explain why these are hardly noteworthy.

"The Impossible Mrs. Bellew."

"The Impossible Mrs. Bellew" (Frederick A. Stokes & Co.) has a great deal of the false glamour which astute authors throw over dull stories. First, it is laid at Monte Carlo, which is a glamourous place that everyone is eager to read about; second, Mrs. Bellew is a beautiful woman with a reputation for really bad escapades, and such creatures are fascinating; thirdly, she is strenuously wooed by a Russian nobleman, and of all the picturesque characters that may be dragged by the ears into a story, Russian noblemen, with tempestuous passions and somber handsomeness, are the choicest; fourthly, Mrs. Bellew is also loved by a famous young novelist, and for some easily perceived reason the people who write think that the people who read are intensely interested in authors.

Mrs. Bellew was, like all girls are said to be, at one time in her life quite innocent; but a Satanic wooer came along and in six months (sic) taught her all the wizardry of sin so that she was able to hold her own even among the polite and finished sinners of London society. At Monte Carlo she plays her fascinating game, but really loves the young novelist and puts over a number of ruses to show the reader that she isn't such a bad woman, after all, and is worthy of the happiness that comes to her.

The book is by David Lisle—a woman.

"A Circuit Rider's Widow."

The memoirs of Mary Thompson, relating her experiences in the small town of Berton with preachers and their wives, with elders and their pig-headedness, with revival and societies, all under the austere auspicies of Methodism, which does not allow a woman to open her mouth louder than a whisper in church, make up "A Circuit Rider's Widow" by Cora Harris (Doubleday, Page & Co.)

For more than half a century Mary Thompson has been among the people of Berton, and much of that time, as the pastor's wife, she was mother confessor, comforter, nurse and mentor. Her natural craving for the joyous phases of life is repressed but shows itself in flashes of mercurial wit that usually baffles or shocks the good people of the town.

The book may seem a bit dull and tedious because it accurately presents small town religion, accentuates the precious trivialities of old fashioned, orthodox faith (though the story comes right down to even the war in Europe.) "The Circuit Rider's Widow" is satirical on many of its pages, but is nevertheless written with strong sympathy and deep understanding of the provincial Christians, who, sincere and intense, are entirely incapable of understanding the new, broad spirit of utilitarianism brought to them by the strange, not to say slightly mysterious, pastor.

"Peace and Quiet."

The author of "The Squaw Man," Edwin Milton Royle, has clapped an antithetical title onto this novel which is fairly seething with turbulency.

"Peace and Quiet" (Harper & Brothers) opens with Thaddeus Castleman reposing in a Mexican jail under sentence to be shot at dawn because he adhered to the cause of Madero and came near saving the unfortunate President from assassination. But Miss Tranquility Buck, daughter of Col. Buck, bothers all enjoyment of golf out of President Wilson until he intervenes. So it is that Thaddeus barely escapes the firing squad.

He returns to Washington, and though nearly penniless stops at an expensive hotel, affiliates with a movement for Universal Peace, and is almost at once floundering about in a kettle of hot water. But he and President Wilson sing together over the telephone Princeton's college song, and Thaddeus is persuaded to join in the search for valuable documents pertaining to the Mexican situation, lost by the President's personal representative. About the same time he is begged by a United States Senator to take charge of smuggling operations into Mexico from which he hopes to supplement the presumably inadequate salary paid by his country for faithful service. And all this happens at about the same time that Col. Buck is sent to the border to suppress smuggling.

Thaddeus, as though the complications arising from such situations were not enough, is also beset by a sense of humor which frequently takes the form of impudent and flippant comment addressed to those with whom he has dealings—excepting, of course, Miss Tranquility Buck.

"The Range Boss."

Charles Alden Seltzer has told another story of the wild and woolly West in "The Range Boss" (A. C. McClurg & Co.) in which appear the old familiar beautiful girl from the East, the Virginian-like cowpuncher of fine integrity and deadly aim, a handful of ruffians, and the whelp of an easterner who is loved by the girl. The easterner wears "funny" clothes, carries a small caliber revolver, and makes a farcial ass of himself as the foil for the gigantic manhood of the cool, deadly Randerson, range boss of the Flying W ranch, which the girl has inherited.

Mastin, the easterner, is laboriously shown to be an unconscionable cur ho seduces an innocent prairie maiden, makes love to a waitress, plots melodramatically against the ranch owner who loves him, and hires "killers" to do away with Randerson; yet with a simple twist of the author's wrist in the concluding chapters this despicable creature is put through a hasty regeneration and does the "honorable thing" by the simple prairie maiden.

Though Mr. Seltzer has ability in depicting the legendary cowpuncher, his plot is scarcely more than a series of incidents each calculated to show off Randerson's courage and manhood.

"The Woman of Mystery."

"The Woman of Mystery" seems designed to exorcise the devil of ennui from blase readers. Maurice Leblanc is the master of the concentrated thriller, and the first chapter of this fervid—perfervid perhaps—war mystery concludes with a crash that sends dramatic echoes reverberating through the entire story.

On the night of his wedding, Paul Delroze is shown a portrait in the home of his bride, and is horrified to recognize that it is the picture of the woman who murdered his father some years before in the presence of Kaiser Wilhelm—while the Emperor was surreptitiously on French soil. The bride is outraged and protests that it is the portrait of her saintly and dead mother.

A few days later war is declared. Paul meets both a man and a woman (or at least he thinks so for a time) whose face is the original of the portrait; and dangers beset both him and his wife at every turn. His wife is kidnaped because Prince Conrad, son of the Kaiser, has become infatuated with her. But the kidnaping does not stop there; and by virtue of a master stroke, Paul is able to confront the Kaiser and give orders to the War Lord himself. Eventually he destroys the head of the German secret service department—but not until he has unraveled the seemingly impenetrable mystery.

"The Woman of Mystery" (The Macauley Company) is a strenuous story, and for one so complicated, so melodramatic, is put together with skill.

"The Romance of a Christmas Card."

In "The Romance of a Christmas Card" (Houghton Mifflin Company) Kate Douglas Wiggin tells of what happened when the minister's wife, who has an interest in drawing, sold a Christmas card to a manufacturer that put it on the market. The card was designed as greeting for "the folks back home." Two men who had been long away from the village were inspired by it to return home. A nurse brought one man his card in the hospital and the other saw his in the office of a dentist while waiting for an appointment. One man came home to his neglected twins, and the other (the stepson of the minister's son) came home—presumably—to a neglected girl.

It is a "cheery" little Christmas story, brightly illustrated to serve as a "gift" book.

"The Turtles of Tasman."

Jack London presents eight stories of various complexions in "The Turtles of Tasman" (The Macmillan Company.) The first, from which the book takes its title, shows how much more the man gets from life if he goes knocking about the world than his studious and careful brother who keeps to business and generously provides the thriftless adventurer with money.

The last two stories "Finis" and "The End of the Story" are Alaskan, full of the red blood that Mr. London once sedulously spilled on his pages. The first is of a murderer who freezes to death and the second is of a famous surgeon who preforms incredible operations in the Far North upon the man that has run off with his wife.

"The Prodigal Father" is one of Mr. London's rare attempts at humor; "Told in the Drooling Ward" presents the monologue of a feebleminded attendant in the paralytic ward, offering a rare bit of "real life;" "The First Poet" is in dramatic form (the best of the collection) and shows why discreet poets among the cave men would not sing of useless things; "The Eternity of Form" is designed as a story of psychological horror; "The Hobo and the Fairy" is a variation of what kindness will do to criminals.

"Rainbow's End."

In "Rainbow's End" (Harper & Brothers) Rex Beach goes back to the Spanish occupation of Cuba for his setting and liberally helps himself to the conventional trappings of melodrama as furnishings for his story.

In the background—or rather in the well — lie buried treasures, which the cruel step-mother goes to her death searching for in her sleep. In the foreground is the beautiful Spanish maiden and her brother, who despite their blood are loyal to the cause of Cuba; also in the foreground is the thrice cruel and detested guerrilla chieftain who desires the beautiful maiden. And then there is Johnnie O'Reilly, who represents an Importing Company. O'Reilly takes matters in hand and though he doesn't quite save Cuba all by himself, he protects the maiden, rescues the treasure and is present when the guerrilla chieftain meets his long deserved death—though 'tisn't O'Reilly that kills him.

"Rainbow's End" is about as good as other of Mr. Beach's later books, and a little better in spots. He tries to show the insurrectos in arms, the wretchedness and courage of the patriots, the way they are harassed and fight, and all that is much more interesting than the "leading man" heroism of O'Reilly.

"The Five-Barred Gate."

E. Temple Thurston has in "The Five-Barred Gate" (D. Appleton & Co.,) written a romance for married people—and for those who hope to be. Technically, it is a problem novel; but in about the same way that "Beauty and the Beast" is technically a moral story to teach children to be kind to animals. "The Five-Barred Gate" is delicate as gossamer, and its humor glistens like dew on a spider's web; and a novelty of the story is that Mr. Thurston shows, without being cynical, that he knows a lot about women.

The "five-barred gate" symbolizes the five years that Mr. and Mrs. Nairn are married, and how those years seem to have shut out adventure from him and romance from her. They live in the ancient mansion at Farthings, which has stood for two centuries and a half. He is a historian—and she a wife. Their servants are chosen, not so much because Mrs. Beavers can cook or Mr. Beavers can act as butler, but because they have been married just the same number of years as the Nairns. That was when the Nairns had been married but two years, and romance was not barred out then.

There is not much plot to the story as plots go; but Mr. Thurston's dexterous accentuation of incidents supplies the story's structural needs, as in the wife's love of dogs and the manner in which Nairn's opposition is overcome; as when each thinks the other has forgotten the fifth wedding anniversary, and neither has, but a present marked "Mizpah" goes from Nairn to the cook; and particularly as when the widow and the handsome brother come to visit at Farthings. Mr. Thurston's protrayal of the widow, her subtlety, is fine, indeed; and the manner in which he weaves the marital troubles of the servants into those of the mistress and master of Farthings is as delicate, as amusing and as interesting as anything this very capable author has written.

"Captain Fricasse."

A new edition of Theophile Gautier's "Captain Fricasse." (The Page Company,) translated by Ellen Murray Beam, again calls attention to the famed historical romance which, with incomparable description, reconstructs the society and manners of France under Louis XIII. The opening chapters, describing the ruined chateau of the impoverished young baron, have long been considered a masterpiece.

The young baron gives shelter on a furious night to a party of strolling players, and being attracted by one of their number who is beautiful and of mysterious origin, he joins with the company and takes the role of "Captain Fricasse" in one of the plays.

The story is thrilling; it is literally crammed and jammed with adventures that present fights and duels, abductions and attempted seductions, and the major action is furnished by the rivalry of Capt. Fricasse and the proud Duke of Vallombreuse — who is eventually "white washed" by becoming a brother to the girl whom he has so long annoyed as a lover.

The young baron, because of his honorable family and courage, finds friends at court and retains the lofty place once held by the members of his house.

The story is far too romantic for the realistic taste of this age; but as a study of the times and manner into which it is cast, there are few, if any, books of fiction that equal it.

"At the Sign of the Three Birches."

Sylvia Durant, who has been raised in luxury by an aunt that married for money and who insists that Sylvia do likewise, finds herself required by the terms of another aunt's will to live a year and a day in the dilapidated and remote house known as "the three birches."

Amy Brooks in "At the Sign of the Three Birches" (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co.,) shows why Sylvia, who is in love with a comparatively poor man, does this. Accompanied by an old lady of nervous temperament and a capable tongue, Sylvia takes up her residence in the haunted house, which has a closed room from where come strange and ghostly noises. The women are beset by a crazy prophet that predicts all manner of disasters, including the approach of the crack of doom; and, as though this were not enough to try their nerves, Sylvia is wooed by a wealthy farmer in the neighborhood for whom she has an intense dislike. But all her troubles have not been told: a girl of her own set in the city also loves the man to whom Sylvia is devoted, and makes it her business to spy and carry false reports.

But Sylvia sticks to the letter of the will, and in the end the mysterious noises are explained, the prophet is chased off by a dog, the villainous young lady is baffled, and the young man for whom Sylvia has pined discovers the whole truth.

"Filling His Own Shoes."

When Ruggles (not to be identified with "Ruggles of Red Gap,") finds that he has been double-crossed by the manager of the Paris branch of the Walkeasy Shoe Company and cheated out of the managership of the Vienna branch, the young American rises in unexpected wrath and punches the manager and his fellow-conspirator while Miss Ruth Downing, daughter of the Walkeasy manufacturer, is in the store—then begin Ruggles's adventures as chronicled in "Filling His Own Shoes" (Houghton Mifflin Company,) by Henry C. Rowland.

Ruth, among her many fascinations, none of which is lost on Ruggles, has a marvelous nose: "A Grecian nose, the classic purity of which was made seductive by the suggestion of an upward tilt." Ruggles is opportunely taken in tow by a British lord and carried off to the turbulent regions of Turkey, where he becomes the adopted son of a Turk, who, upon dying, bequeaths Ruggles immense wealth and the care of four beautiful daughters.

Adventures and complications stir the text to the frothing point; but Ruggles, whose father before him served the Walkeasy shoes, does not lose his allegiance to the firm—nor to Miss Ruth. Eventually he is in a position superior to that of the conspirators whose noses he has punched, but he is to good a business man to allow personal feelings to interfere with the profits of his beloved shoes.

NEXT TO BIBLE IN POPULARITY.

The Louis Rhead illustrated edition of "The Arabian Nights," which was brought out a few days ago, is the latest addition to the book which, next to the Bible, is the most popular in the world. For more than two centuries now these Oriental tales have been known to European readers. They were translated by a Frenchman, Galland (1646-1715,) from the Arabic. It is not known when these tales, that in their oral form go back into the mists of the past, were first put into printing.

Mark Twain's Novel

could have made every one of them happy, yet never made a single happy one; who made them prize their bitter life, yet stingily cut it short; who gave his angels eternal happiness unearned, yet required his other children to earn it; who gave his angels painless lives, yet cursed his other children with biting miseries and maladies of mind and body; who mouths justice and invented hell—mouths mercy and invented hell—mouths Golden Rules, and forgiveness multiplied by seventy times seven, and invented hell; who mouths morals to other people and has none himself; who frowns upon crimes, yet commits them all; who created man without invitation, then trys to shuffle the responsibility for man's acts upon man, instead of honorably placing it where it belongs, upon himself; and finally, with altogether divine obtuseness, invites this poor, abused slave to worship him! . . . It is true, that which I have revealed to you: there is no God, no universe, no human race, no earthly life, no heaven, no hell. It is all a dream—a grotesque and foolish dream. Nothing exists but you. And you are but a thought — a vagrant thought, a useless thought, a homeless thought, wandering forlorn among the empty eternities!"

Such is the last message, which comes after his death—from beyond the grave, as it were—borne by the voice of one whose race loved him for his mirth and endearing humor.

PLAY-MAKING LABORATORIES.

In the introduction to his handbook, "Play-Making: A Manual of Craftsmanship," William Archer makes the statement that there are no rules for writing a play. Rules or no rules, his method must be fairly successful, judging by the number of editions of his book. With five printings exhausted and a sixth one just delivered from the press, "Workshop 47" and other laboratories of play-making must be drawing heavily on Mr. Archer's wisdom and experience. The value of "Play-Making" (published by Small, Maynard and Company) lies in the fact that it is addressed to students of play-making who sincerely desire to do sound, artistic work under the conditions and limitations of the actual living playhouse.

COTTON
WORLD POWER
BY JAMES A. B. SCHERER
Author of "The Japanese Crisis."
A work of sound scholarship, giving the history of cotton, with special stress on its influence on the entire industries of any nation or period. Professor Scherer shows that just a few Southern States have annually maintained the balance of trade in favor of the United States, and that this single staple product has had the power for centuries largely to control the character and the degree of the world's civilization.
WITTE ARRIVES
BY ELIAS TOBENKIN
Professor William Lyon Phelps, of Yale, compares this novel by an immigrant with Mary Antin's brilliant book, and says: "We Americans ought to be heartily grateful for both books."

THE CAREER OF KATHERINE BUSH
By ELINOR GLYN
A Love Story of High Society Life.
As carefully and as thoroughly as a soldier plans a campaign, so does Katherine Bush plan her career. She determines upon her goal—her supreme aim in life—and in her struggles to attain her ideal she sacrifices her personal desires and gives up much that is worth while. The girl makes mistakes. Temptations come her way. Natural weaknesses almost tear her from her course. But she learns and grows, and as the battle progresses she gains in strength and will power. "The Career of Katherine Bush" is a splendid novel of a woman who mastered her own destiny. It is an absorbing love story of high society life and is certain to be one of the season's most widely read novels. By the author of "The Reason Why," "The Man and the Moment," etc.

Two Good Stories
"Contraband"
by RANDALL PARRISH

A romance, a tragedy, and an adventure that moves from a pleasure yacht to a big freighter loaded with munitions of war, thence to a gruesome death ship.
It is as full of mishap as Friday-the-13th. There are hair-raising escapes; plans that miscarry; mutiny, disloyalty, deception. But somehow it all comes out right.
The Range Boss
By Charles Alden Seltzer
"The Range Boss" presents the contrast between the laws and social usages of the conventional East and those of the plains of the Far West.
The hardihood of the Range Boss' life and philosophy is reflected in every page of the story. There is shock after shock to the conventionalized man of civilized communities, and there are exciting adventures aplenty for the most jaded appetite. The story is one of this year's best.

The Breath of the Dragon
By A. H. Fitch
12°. Color Frontis. $1.35
A faithful and fascinating picture of life in China, from that in the Empress Dowager's palace to that in the House of the Hen's Feathers—the court of the King of the Beggars; and, better than this, a remarkably interesting and stirring tale of romance and adventure.
"The author has proved an admirable story-teller. The interest is kept at white heat page after page."—Troy Record.
The Cab of the Sleeping Horse
By John Reed Scott
Author of "The Colonel of the Red Hussars," etc. 12°. Color Frontis. $1.35
"Diplomatic intrigue at Washington is the theme upon which the amazing story is based, and it's a somnolent person who could or would sleep before closing the book. Mystery has its maximum in this novel, and clever indeed the reader who solves any of the several situations. 'Detective stories' are boresomely trite as a rule, but John Reed Scott is dependably original always."

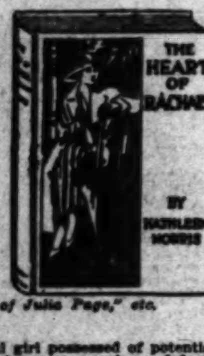
THE BEST BOOKS OF THE YEAR

The Heart of Rachael



By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Author of "Mother," "Saturday's Child," "The Story of Julia Page," etc.

$1.35

A beautiful girl possessed of potential strength of character marries and faces some of the hardest problems that a woman is called upon to solve. All the elements of romance and of tragedy are in the situation, and it is the final wresting of victory from a cumulation of errors and entanglements that shows the growth in strength and beauty of Rachael's soul.

The Rising Tide

By MARGARET DELAND

Author of "Old Chester Tales," "Dr. Lavendar's People," "The Iron Woman," etc.

$1.35

Frederica Payton hated the old conventions, her mother's tidy-surrounded existence and the boredom of a merely fashionable life. Perhaps she did take an impish delight in shocking the easily shockable. But no matter what "Freddy" did, her circle could never forget her, she was "as stimulating as a cocktail," as one of her friends declared.

The Wonderful Year

By WILLIAM J. LOCKE

Author of "Jaffery," "The Beloved Vagabond," "The Fortunate Youth," etc.

$1.40

A likable young Englishman, a whimsical Parisian philosopher, a dashing American girl, and a brave little daughter of France combine to make "The Wonderful Year" an engaging period. It is a book that is full of the joy of youth, the thrill of adventure, and the spell of romance.

Dabney Todd

A Blood Relation to "David Harum" and "Hepsey Burke."

By F. N. WESTCOTT

$1.35

Like his brother, who wrote "David Harum," the author of this book lived in the "lake country" of New York state, and the faithful characterizations, quaint aphorisms and wealth of sympathy put into the mouth of Dabney Todd portray with accuracy the sayings and doings of communities that are sufficient unto themselves.

The Border Legion

By ZANE GREY

Author of "Light of the Western Stars," "Desert Gold," "The Rainbow Trail," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

The lust of gold, the lawless spirit of the border half a century ago, a man who was driven to the outlaws and a brave woman who won him back by her love—here is the theme, the setting and the heroine. There was danger on every side. Yet through it all the presence of a brave, good woman made itself felt.

When a Man's a Man

By HAROLD BELL WRIGHT

Author of "Barbara Worth," "Shepherd of the Hills," "Eyes of the World,"

Illustrated. $1.35

Hamburger's

Broadway, Eighth and Hill Sts.

From the House-tops

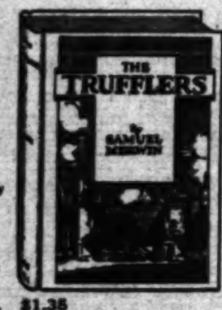
By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON

Author of "Graustark," "The Hollow of Her Hand," "Brewster's Millions," etc.

Illustrated. $1.40.

The book will inspire the reader to a discussion of a number of important questions of modern life. A novel of New York, the modern Bagdad of wealth, luxury, ambition and reckless, restless passion. The story is built about this startling question: Has society the right to take the final step in alleviating hopeless human suffering?

The Trufflers



By SAMUEL MERWIN

Author of "The Honey Bee," "The Charmed Life of Miss Austin," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

A novel of the New York Latin Quarter, the bachelor girls and bachelor men who seek only the "truffles," the delicacies and pleasures, in the sober game of life, and yet must find that life is a discipline after all. A drama of the conflict of new ideas against old, freedom against restraint, and beauty against duty.

The Lion's Share

By ARNOLD BENNETT

Author of "Old Wives' Tale," "Buried Alive," "Clayhanger," etc.

$1.50

Audrey Moze had an "appetite for life." She wanted the "lion's share," and she got it—in the shape of a successful violinist husband, after a series of startling experiences with suffragists, detectives, Parisian artists, musical agents and other delightful fry. A deft mixing of amusing situations and quaint characters, and a good story.

Mary-'Gusta

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Author of "Thankful's Inheritance," "The Rise of Roscoe Paine," "The Postmaster," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

A little girl who mothers her two Cape Cod guardians, in spite of their attempts to bring her up. When Mary-'Gusta is left an orphan, two old sea captains assume charge of her, and the story of their efforts to care for her, and her absolute control of the situation, is told in a genial, whimsical fashion.

Tish

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Author of "K," "Street of the Seven Stars," "When a Man Marries," etc.

Illustrated. $1.50

The story of the excursions of three spinsters from Maine to Canada and in the national reservations of the West, and of the amusing adventures with which they meet in the course of their wanderings has been hailed everywhere as "the book of a thousand smiles."

Eat and Grow Thin

By VANCE THOMPSON

Author of "Drink and Be Sober," etc.

$1.00

The Mahdah Menus, showing what the Fat Man may eat—and grow thin. Most of your friends tell you what not to eat, but this book shows how you can, little by little, shed twenty to twenty-five pounds in three months without starving or sacrificing table joys. Half menus, quarter general regimen and quarter unadulterated Vance Thompson humor.

Our Natupski Neighbors

By EDITH MINITER

$1.35

An ambitious, ignorant family, fresh from Poland, buy a worn-out farm in the backwoods corner of a New England town. In the mutual exasperation, disgust and gradual assimilation of the Polanders and the New Englanders the author has found characters humorous, and incidents symbolic of what is happening all over the land.

Slaves of Freedom

By CONINGSBY DAWSON

Author of "The Garden Without Walls," "The Raft," etc.

$1.40

The slaves of freedom are the people who can but won't marry—the entirely "moral" people, both men and women, who think that they can get more out of life by remaining single. The setting is New York and London, with an episode in France; the hero, a young Englishman; the heroine, a typical "Helen of Fifth Avenue."

Nobody's Boy (Sans Famille)

By HECTOR MALOT

Translated by Florence Crewe-Jones.

Illustrated. $1.25

"Sans Famille" was crowned in its early popularity as a literary classic by L'Academie Francaise. The homeless boy's experience is a human document that grips the interest of young and old, and is justly known as one of the supreme heart-interest stories of the world—an ennobling example of boy character.

Nan of Music Mountain

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

Author of "Whispering Smith," "Robert Kimberly," "Merrilie Dawes," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

Nan is a member of an outlaw family—a band whose daring exploits of lawlessness have held all the valley in subjection and terror for years. Henry de Spain is given a position in order that he may subdue the Morgans. The intensely exciting events that follow, interwoven with his growing love for Nan, make a romance of interest.

Mr. Britling Sees It Through

By H. G. WELLS

Author of "The Research Magnificent," "The Wife of Sir Isaac Harman," "Bealby," etc.

$1.50

Rainbow's End

By REX BEACH

Author of "Heart of the Sunset," "The Net," "The Spoilers," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

A romance of the Cuban War of Independence. All the flavor of Cuba, its struggles against the Spaniards, the cruelty and bravery of the contest, a lost treasure, Southern beauty and love, fighting and filibustering and an Irish-American hero who was not the kind of man to leave any of it untasted.

Green Mansions

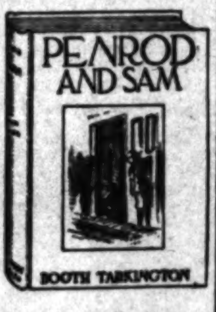
By W. H. HUDSON

Author of "Tales of the Pampas," "Birds and Man," etc.

$1.50

A charming love story with which is combined a thrilling description of life and adventure in the tropical forests of Venezuela. A story exceptionally rich in fascinating interest, even to the inveterate novel reader. The love story it contains has as much lyric nobility as any that history and imagined romance has given us.

Penrod and Sam



By BOOTH TARKINGTON

Author of "The Gentleman From Indiana," "The Turmoil," "Penrod," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

Penrod is the same young irrepressible—he has not changed a hair. The reader becomes acquainted with a remarkable cat, "Part panther or something." There is a severe outbreak of cavalry in the Schofield neighborhood, an outbreak which rivals the great war. At times Penrod's heart is embittered with critical disapproval of the Creator's methods—but why go on?

Emmy Lou's Road to Grace

By GEORGE MADDEN MARTIN

Author of "Emmy Lou," "Selina," "Warwickshire Lad," etc.

Illustrated. $1.30.

Enoch Crane

Chas. Scribners Sons, Publishers

By F. HOPKINSON SMITH

Author of "Colonel Carter of Cartersville," "Felix O'Day," "The Arm Chair at the Inn," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

A story of New York City, planned and begun by the author and completed, from an elaborate synopsis, by the novelist's son, F. Berkeley Smith. A story of very great charm about a true New Yorker of an older generation, who is the life and soul of the book, being a delightfully odd, old-fashioned gentleman.

The Little Hunchback Zia

By FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT

Author of "The Lost Prince," "T. Tembarom," "The Secret Garden," etc.

Illustrated. 75c

An exquisitely written story of the birth of the Christ-child and the restoration of the little hunchback Zia to his birthright. Zia is an orphan living with an old woman who makes him beg. How he is driven forth an outcast, how he falls in with Joseph and Mary and later with the Christ-child, and what happens is told with a very sympathetic pen.

Seventeen

By BOOTH TARKINGTON

Author of "Penrod," "The Turmoil," "The Gentleman From Indiana," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

A tale of the Baxter family—especially William. Romance invaded the untroubled life of William Sylvanus Baxter, age seventeen. Little Sister Jane, her mouth always greasy with bread and butter, and her inquisitive mind always searching into William's affairs, is as much of a creation as Penrod himself. And, of course, there is a dog.

The Wall Street Girl

By FREDERICK ORIN BARTLETT

Illustrated. $1.35

The Romance of a Christmas Card

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN

Author of "Mother Carey's Chickens," "Birds' Christmas Carol," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Illustrated. $1.00

The story of two young men who went forth from their village, one to prosper, one to fall upon evil ways. Two Christmas cards written by the minister's wife brought them back to the village, one to find peace and new courage in the scenes of his childhood, the other to take up a charming romance that his departure had broken off.

The Mark of the Beast

By REGINALD WRIGHT KAUFFMAN

Author of "The House of Bondage," "The Spider's Web," "Sentence of Silence," etc.

Illustrated. $1.25

One sees the descendant of "Black Devil" Ridgley, with his heritage of violence and passion:

The conflict between the prejudiced Southerner, the prejudiced Northerner, and the unprejudiced American of Southern blood:

The lynching and—The Expiation.

The Thirteenth Commandment

By RUPERT HUGHES

Author of "What Will People Say," "Empty Pockets," "Clipped Wings," etc.

Illustrated. $1.40

The eternal conflict between finance and romance is the subject of this new novel. An absorbing story of a beautiful, lovable, modern girl, who, having discovered how often the checkbook's groan drowns the love-song, made up her mind to give up love or make money herself.

Contraband

By RANDALL PARRISH

Author of "Beyond the Frontier," "The Red Mist," "My Lady of the South," etc.

Illustrated. $1.35

The Girl Philippa

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Author of "The Common Law," "The Business of Life," "Athalie," etc.

Illustrated. $1.40

Yesterday the girl Philippa was a cashier in a cafe in Northern France. Today she is the center of a whirlwind of exciting events. An American artist, a British army officer and a Sister of Charity are her companions in a series of adventures, wherein the secret service systems of the warring countries endeavor to secure control of the Harkness shell.

Lady Connie

By MRS. HUMPHRY WARD

Author of "Eleanor," "Eltham House," "Delia Blanchflower," etc.

Illustrated. $1.50

Consumed with jealousy because Lady Connie, the girl he loves, has danced all evening with Otto, a young Polish musician, Douglas Falloden subjects his rival to a hazing, with disastrous results to the musician's career. Around these three the author has woven a novel dealing with the passions, longings and bigness of the human heart.

Cappy Ricks

By PETER B. KYNE

Author of "The Long Chance."

Illustrated. $1.35

The style of this book is crisp and racy, its humor persuasive, and its characters alive and human. We read with absorbed interest. It is not a sea story. It is about men who make the sea pay, of the big navigation companies, of the fortunes that are made and lost in charters. A book that will appeal to men.

The World for Sale

By SIR GILBERT PARKER

Author of "The Right of Way," "Seats of the Mighty," "Judgment House," etc.

$1.35

A vivid story of the Canadian Northwest. In the midst of a northern world just emerging from a lawless frontier existence, is the heroine—southern and of the world's oldest race—a gypsy. When the builder held her in his arms after saving her life he knew that he would be willing to sell the world for her.

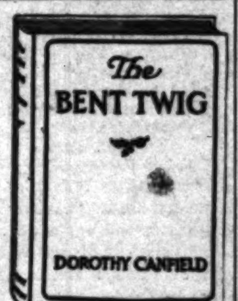
Witte Arrives

By ELIAS TOBENKIN

$1.25

A powerfully written novel based on real life and actual experiences of a family of Jewish immigrants, especially of the youngest, Emil. Seldom has Jewish family life been so sympathetically and truthfully portrayed.

The Bent Twig



By DOROTHY CANFIELD

Author of "The Squirrel Cage," "Hillsboro People," etc.

$1.35

The "Twig" is Sylvia Marshall, a lovely typical American girl, bent by the customs, traditions, ideals of her western home, and by the integrity of her mother's character. The story is of the influence on Sylvia of her mother's personality, of her girlhood environment and of her personal beauty and charm.

Cecily and the Wide World

By ELIZABETH CORBETT

$1.40

At home beautiful Cecily sticks and makes a fight gallant and witty. Incidentally she looks after her children, too, when the doctor, her well-meaning husband, goes to New York and Chicago in pursuit of the larger service. His Spartan habits come to the doctor's rescue in an unexpected way, as does the conclusion of the novel, which "makes for righteousness."

Georgina of the Rainbows

By ANNIE FELLOWS JOHNSTON

Author of "The Little Colonel," "The Desert of Waiting," "Two Little Knights of Kentucky," etc.

$1.25

The strangest chapters in life are enacted in the presence of unknowing childhood, and often it is given to some blessed child of hope, faith and cheer to hold together that which is good and best for all. Georgina, peering through the prisms of life, sees the rainbows and all else that is lovable and worth while.

Just David

By ELEANOR H. PORTER

Author of "Pollyanna," "Miss Billy," "The Story of Marco," etc.

Illustrated. $1.25

How David brought true happiness to the matter-of-fact farmer folk among whom his father's death had thrown him, how he helped along a beautiful love affair, how he made his great sacrifice and received his great reward, are all told in a way that really makes you feel as though the story was part of your own life.

The Daredevil

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

Author of "The Melting of Molly," "Over Paradise Ridge," etc.

$1.35

Her father had called her "Daredevil"—her tresses clipped, the appearance of a young man secured—and Roberta the Marquise, becomes Robert Carruthers, a gay, stout-hearted masquerader. And then romance, intrigue, plots of enemies, dancing under the Southern moon, rides in the mountains, and in the end love that comes in the guise of friendship.

Marion

By the author of "ME"

$1.35

This is the story of a girl who goes from Montreal, Boston, New York, "Bohemia," clinging to her ideals as artist, model, friend of men, wife of one. The story is amusing, tragic, thrilling, yet realistic, and holds the reader's interest to the end. Every woman will wonder what she would do in Marion's place.

The Old Blood

By FREDERICK PALMER

Author of "My Year of the Great War," "The Last Shot," etc.

$1.40

A Romance of the Great War. Th[e] American hero and two interesting French girls begin the story with their life in a beautiful old French chateau. Caught in the turmoil of the great world conflict, the story is carried through a series of vivid adventures depicting in the most striking fashion life in the European war zone.

A POLITICAL POST-MORTEM.

BY FRANK H. SHORT,
In the "Fresno Morning Republican."

IT IS not only entertaining but amusing to read the comments in the eastern papers on the recent election, especially with reference to the vote of the Western States. Quite naturally the editors and writers get all of the dramatic effect they can out of the situation and so indulge in some very unreal assumptions.

For instance, frequent reference is made to "a New Political Alignment" and, "The Scepter of Power is Passing to the West in conjunction with the South." Quotations along these lines are extremely numerous and more or less radical and graphic.

To any one familiar with the situation, the undoubted truth is that the recent election is the least significant of real party strength of any that has occurred in this country since the Civil War. And express little of the real strength of any that has occurred in this country since the Civil War. And express little of the real strength of either of the parties in the country at large or in the different sections of the country, but the determining vote was largely nonpartisan, and with respect to questions that never existed at any previous election, and that in all human probability will never be important at any succeeding election.

Many of the Western States that went for Wilson this year, are and will be in future, whenever a division occurs along real party lines, far more safely Republican than the Northeastern States that went Republican this year.

While the Republican party and Republican policies figured somewhat in the campaign, the Democratic party as such did not appear to figure in the campaign at all. Who heard any discussion of the party of Jefferson and Jackson or of its principles or policies in any part of the country during any part of the last campaign?

There can also be found a strong disposition to exaggerate the triumph of the Democratic candidates. Frequent reference is made to the large popular vote cast for the Democratic candidates, and the victory is referred to as very sweeping.

In fact, there has rarely, if ever been an election where a few thousand votes, and a very few thousand, sometimes a few hundred, changed from one side to the other would have changed the result in a large number of States and the entire aspect of the election and the increased popular vote frequently referred to with dramatic effect, merely represents the natural increase in the vote of the country, augmented by the giving of the ballot in several States to the women where they have never voted before. So that naturally the popular vote was very large but it expressed nothing as to either candidate except the changed conditions referred to.

Undeniably three years ago the Democratic party was headed to direct complete and ignominous defeat. The events that have occurred since that resulted in the re-election of the President, after giving him credit for considerable political tact and resourcefulness, where wholly and obviously entirely beyond the control of any political party or any administrative or legislative action or influence.

To illustrate how transient the reasons for the defeat of Gov. Hughes and the re-election of President Wilson are, and how little partisan party significance they express, it is only necessary to consider what those influences undeniably were. Although an indefinite number of contrary views are expressed, the final consensus of opinion fully warrants the conclusion that the reasons later stated were the controlling ones that shifted the election so that the Republicans were defeated and the Democrats were successful.

First: It is only four years since the Republican party was split in the center and torn apart. It is true that we have gone through the surgical operation of reuniting the body, but in the campaign it developed considerable soreness and incapacity for unified effort. This is illustrated by the fact that President Wilson carried nearly all of the prominently populistic and definitely Progressive states although upon the register of voters they appear to be verw strongly Republican. The regular Republicans as a matter of course and obviously very generally voted for Hughes, but the Progressives, although of Republican antecedents, very generally voted for Wilson. This is obvious from the returns. No doubt at all Gov. Hughes secured as many of these votes as any other Republican nominee could have polled. His record along progressive lines is probably more uniform and consistent than that of President Wilson, although less spectacular, as to certain so-called progressive or human welfare matters. If the soreness had not existed, Gov. Hughes would have received their votes, but the soreness was there and Wilson's spectacular progressiveism carried them away from their old party allegiance for the time being, but for the time being only.

Second: Probably the next most important influence favoring President Wilson was the slogan, "He kept us out of war," and the fact that the women voted for him in a percentage largely in excess of what they would have done if this argument had not been made. This situation is very well demonstrated by the fact that in the twelve suffrage States the votes of ten of them were cast for Wilson and only two, Illinois and Oregon, for Hughes; and of the ten suffrage States that went Wilson, California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Utah, Washington and Wyoming are definitely Republican States, and only Arizona, Montana and Nevada would be rated as doubtful, and none of them would be rated as definitely Democratic.

Third: The old Mark Hanna slogan in the McKinley campaign, "Let well enough alone," coupled with existing prosperity, worked very well, especially in the farming States. In the manufacturing States they apparently understood better where their prosperity was coming from, but in many of the agricultural States, although naturally Republican, with wheat at $2 a hundred and hogs at $10 a hundred, "Let well enough alone" was a very persuasive argument.

Fourth: While the labor vote according to returns was not absolutely reliable, it is very clear that it was so far diverted away from the Republican party in several States as to be an important factor, and was sufficient to carry several States, without which the Democratic candidates could not have been elected.

Clearly, the national suffrage argument carried few if any votes away from Wilson, and it is therefore very clear that the circumstances were fortunate and the conditions temporarily propitious for Democratic success, and it seems quite obvious that as a mere matter of party choice, and as a mere choice between candidates, other things being equal, there would have been no question at all of an overwhelming Republican victory or of the election of its candidates.

It is very clear that an entirely fair and nonpartisan review of the situation would demonstrate that the results in the different sections of the country, whether they went Republican or went Democratic, expressed little if anything in the way of permanent significance as to party strength or future party success. Probably in the next election the Republicans will win in the States where they lost heavily this time, and probably the Democrats will regain some of the States they lost in this election.

Doubtless as to the preceding suggestions there will be many divergent views as to their correctness, however I shall now proceed to state certain considerations upon which, upon reflection, there would be nearly unanimous agreement. I notice in some of the papers, it is stated that the election signifies the permanent re-establishment of the Democratic party and an end of what has been heretofore referred to as its continuing bad luck. The truth is, that nothing more unlucky in all probability ever happened to the Democratic party or any other party than its victory in the last election. Particularly is the result fortunate also to the Republican party for reasons which I shall later endeavor to point out.

As already stated, the Democratic party was three years ago headed toward obvious defeat, but up out of the ocean, so to speak, and from abroad and afar, there came events and occurrences that in a minor way gave the President an opportunity to make himself popular with the voters, and in a major way as applied to the final result, developed conditions of exceptional and unlimited prosperity, and afforded an argument for the Democratic party and its continuing in power that therefore had not existed and could not therefore have been thought of, therefore, on account of reasons and conditions entirely beyond its control and outside of the powers of any political party, the Democratic party now continues in office.

Upon the other hand, the prevailing prosperity and the conditions conducive of success that now exists are equally phenomenal, equally temporary and equally beyond the control of any political party or any government so far as their continuance is concerned.

To put it moderately, there are nine chances out of ten that the war will end within one or two years, and that with its ending, or possibly before it is ended, circumstances and conditions of adversity and difficulty will arise and intervene to such an extent that neither the Democratic party nor the Democratic administration or any other party or any other administration could possibly so manage or control the situation as to satisfy or stand well with the voters.

Just as the Democratic party was swept forward and carried into power by events beyond its control, will it be drug into the whirlpool of adverse circumstances and thus carried out of power beyond any reasonable doubt.

This is not mere solace in the presence of existing defeat, but it is a situation that is very definite, actual and undeniable.

MEN AND EVENTS.

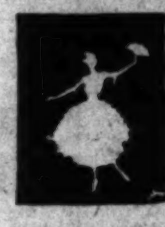
When John Tscherneawski was asked by Judge Carl Runge during his marriage to Adelia Moll, in Milwaukee, "Do you take this woman to be your lawful wedded wife?" he looked blankly at His Honor, not understanding English. After an embarrassing silence, his bride said, reassuringly, "Yes, Judge, he takes me."

Capt. Wright Bisbee of Norway, Me., threw his sixtieth consecutive straight Republican ticket in the recent State election, the first one being for Fremont and Dayton. He has never missed an election, and, being more than 80 years old, is proud of his record.

Stephen Lovejoy, who has been a blacksmith in Auburn, Me., since 1876, is believed to hold the record for speed in shoeing horses. He has shod three horses in thirty-seven minutes—one in twenty, one in nine and one in eight. Half an hour is regarded as quick time to shoe one horse by most blacksmiths.

Jerome J. Hayes, a farmer of Sutter county, was in Marysville recently on business, and purchased a 10-cent plug of chewing tobacco. Hayes took a big bite off the plug and his teeth came in contact with a hard substance. He investigated and discovered a solitaire diamond in the center of the chew of tobacco. The diamond is said to be valued at $100. It is presumed that a southern maid working in the tobacco factory accidentally lost the diamond from her ring.

Dusty and travel-worn, but with his long strides retaining the vigor of all his eighteen years of backwoods life, Clarence Barton trudged into Clinton, Mo., after covering 130 miles from Turner, Mo. He came in the heat and dust over the miles of hills afoot to attend the Missouri conference of the Seventh Day Adventists. And this youth has lived a strange life in the very modern and up-to-date State of Missouri. In all his 18 years he never tasted a mouthful of meat. Never has a drink of tea or coffee passed his lips. His meager fare of daily food has never been seasoned with pepper. He never has tasted a drop of alcohol in any form and does not know the twang of tobacco smoke. And he is a perfect specimen — a young backwoods giant. Barton excelled in all the sports of the camp.



The Spirit of Enjoyment

naturally suggests freedom, and full freedom comes only through perfect corseting.

A wearer of REDFERN CORSETS remarked recently:

> "Unless I can forget my corset and concentrate upon my game, I cannot win. This is why I always wear a REDFERN."

Yes, we advise a Redfern for all occasions—outdoor or indoor. When we are given full sway in selections, fitting and selling, we always advise three types of corsets—one for dress occasions, one for general wear; and for the woman who is given to active sports of any kind—dancing, tennis, golf or what-not, we advise a third pair.

As a matter of fact, the woman can stand around in graceful attitude better in a

than any model we know.

SCREEN.

Film Favorites.

GALAXY IS ATTRACTIVE.

UNUSUAL CLUSTER OF STARS HERE THIS WEEK.

An unusual array of stars will shine on the picture Rialto this week, including, besides those of "Intolerance," Theda Bara, Ethel Clayton, Carlyle Blackwell, Wallace Reid, Cleo Ridgley, Charles Ray, Dorothy Gish, May Allison and Harold Lockwood, Fay Tincher, Mary Nash, Edith Storey, E. H. Southern and others.

Alhambra.

Ethel Clayton and Carlyle Blackwell are featured in Emmet Campbell Hall's story, "The Madness of Helen," to be shown at Miller's Alhambra Theater, beginning today. This is a big, vital story with an unexpected ending. It is said to be entirely different from any five-reel production ever conceived and so mysterious that to tell any part of it would be robbing the spectator of a surprise. The photography of this Brady-made masterpiece is said to be extraordinary.

Miss Clayton lends her splendid personality and beauty to happy advantage in her role, while Mr. Blackwell plays his part with strength and skill.

The added attraction this week will be two reels of pure joy called "Where Is My Wife?" Billie Richie is starred.

Miller's.

Theda Bara will appear at Miller's in her latest picture, "The Vixen,' beginning today. This is the famous star's first vampire role in many months, and she is said to play the part with zest.

The story, it is asserted, is one of the best of its kind, portraying vividly the wiles of a fascinating woman who is determined to have the man she wants, regardless of the fact that he belongs to another.

The supporting cast of Fox players includes Hebert Heyes, who appeared in "Under Two Flags," Mary Martin and A. H. Van Buren.

The added features will be the News film and Hans and Fritz Katzenjammer animated drawings.

Woodley.

"The Yellow Pawn," with Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely in the stellar roles, will be the attraction at the Woodey Theater, beginning Monday. Miss Ridgely and Mr. Reid have appeared together in other productions with remarkable success, and it is said their work in this thrilling drama is better than anything they have done before.

Another surprise awaits those who may see this photoplay, it is asserted. Mr. Kuwa, a Japanese actor, who is a close rival of Sessue Hayakawa, has an important role in the production and is also said to give a fine portrayal.

There are any number of swift dramatic scenes and a tensity of action that grips and fascinates in this story. The ending is logical and pleasing.

Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid are too well known to theatergoers to need much mention other than that they are given exceptional opportunities in "The Yellow Pawn," of which they most splendidly avail themselves.

The stars are surrounded by a good company.

Garrick.

Starting with the matinee today at the Garrick Theater, "The Ordeal," the five-reel drama that caused a world of comment when it was shown in New York recently, will be given its first showing in Los Angeles. Anna Laughlin, one of the most popular photoplay stars of the East, plays the leading role. She is practically unknown hereabouts, but she will not be after this picture is seen, it is said.

Should love of sweetheart, family and life, be placed above duty to one's country? That is the question that is asked and answered in this thrilling twentieth century screen melodrama.

Everywhere this unusual drama has been shown it is said to have created intense interest. It advances a reason against war, and, while a number of the scenes are military in character, it cannot be termed a war picture in the ordinary sense of the word.

A brand new Charlie Chaplin comedy, "The Rink," will follow the engagement of "The Ordeal."

Tally's Broadway.

Mary Nash one of David Belasco's most prominent stars, who is now playing in New York in "The Man Who Came Back," will make her screen debut at Tally's Broadway tomorrow in a picturization of Ouida Bergere's great story, "Arms and the Woman."

The story deals with questions of international importance. The picture is said to be full of thrilling action, and the announcement of the heroine's name, it is believed, alone will be sufficient to assure its drawing power.

The Alaskan travelogue scenes will be the added feature.

Superba.

E. H. Sothern and Edith Storey, two names to conjure with, appear on the Superba bill for this week. They are featured in a picturization of that famous stage success, "An Enemy to the King." A notable cast supports them. All the thrills of the original vivid drama are retained, it is said. The filmization gives opportunity for many beautiful scenic settings, which add greatly to the effectiveness of the production.

Earle Williams in "The Scarlet Runner" serial is the added attraction.

Majestic.

Farewell presentation of the big travel picture, "A Trip Through China," which has been playing to crowded houses at the Majestic for the past three weeks, will be given tonight. The film shows the Forbidden City, the Great Wall of China and hundreds of other mysteries and curiosities of the oriental land.

A special matinee will be given this afternoon at 2:15.

Clune's Broadway.

Kolb and Dill, those popular comedians of the stage and screen, have put their musical comedy success "A Peck o' Pickles" into pictures, and this will be the attraction at Clune's Broadway, commencing today. The story tells of two Germans living in Walpole, Mass. One, a shoemaker, while ripping up an old shoe, finds a lottery ticket of the value of $1,300,313. The other buys a share in the ticket and together they begin to weave dreams around their fortune. They have many amazing ideas, resulting from drinking an oversupply of cider and medicine water, in which, after being transported back to Civil War times, they are blown by a cyclone forward into the year 1960.

In addition there will be a Keystone and a news film.

Palace.

"Children of the Feud," based on the thrilling attack of the Allen brothers on the Hillside Courthouse in Virginia, will be the dramatic feature at the Palace for the coming week. It has the Fine Arts favorite, Dorothy Gish. Fay Tincher, commedienne extraordinary, will furnish laughs galore in the comedy, "The Lady Drummer," the added attraction.

In "Children of the Feud," Miss Gish has the part of the eldest of six motherless children of a moonshining mountaineer. She falls in love with the son of the judge who is later killed by one of the girl's own clan. The feature is full of action. An emotional role of rare power is afforded Dorothy Gish. Her quick transitions from comedy to tragedy and back again are said to transcend any histrionic work she has previously undertaken.

The supporting cast includes Sam de Grasse, who lately appeared as leading man with Lillian Gish in "Diane of the Follies;" A. D. Sears, Charles Gorman, Alberta Lee, F. A. Turner, Elmo Lincoln and the Triangle Fine Arts kiddies, Violet Radcliffe, Beulah Burns, Thelma Burns, Tina Rossi and the inimitable Georgie Stone.

Symphony.

Harold Lockwood and May Allison will be the reigning dramatic stars of the week at the Symphony beginning today. They will appear in a story of love, money and politics entitled, "Big Tremaine," an adaptation from Marie Van Vorst's well known novel of the same name.

The plot of the drama is woven around the adventures of John Tremaine, who is robbed by his own brother of a sum of money which has been intrusted to him. The brother, David, also wins the girl John loves. Brokenhearted the jilted suitor leaves his home, remaining away for seven years, and then returns to find his brother dead, and himself suspected by his mother of having stolen the money. How "Big Tremaine" wins his battle and is finally himself conquered by Dan Cupid's art, makes one of the best pictures that has been released on the Metro programme in many months.

Clune's Auditorium.

"Intolerance" or "The Mother and The Law," D. W. Griffith's mighty photo spectacle, will continue the attraction at Clune's Auditorium. This big picture drama will start upon its eighth big week with a matinee tomorrow.

Mr. Griffith was so highly pleased at the enthusiastic reception that has greeted his play in Los Angeles he took a large number of additional scenes, particularly of Babylon, which are now incorporated in the film. These new scenes add much to the beauty of the spectacle.

Four periods in time are dwelt upon in "Intolerance"—Babylon, when the ancient city was conquered by Cyrus the Great, medieval France in the reign of Charles IX, Judea at the time of Christ and a modern city of the present day period.

The annual meeting of the Interlake Yachting Association will be held at Sandusky, O., Saturday, December 2. Delegates representing twenty-four clubs are expected to have delegates present.

CAMERA CLICKS.

Stanhope Wheatcrof has rejoined the William Fox forces.

William V. Mong, of the Universal, has just finished "The Youth Market." Mong plays the leading role, with Gretchen Lederer opposite.

Gladys Brockwell has completed the photoplay in which she was appearing for Director Frank Lloyd. The Fox company is now busy on a new production for her, which Richard Stanton is to direct.

Bessie Love, the Triangle Fine Arts star, puts in a great deal of her spare time, while at the studio, between scenes, in making Mexican baskets. She is an adept in the art.

In doing a running jump of fifteen feet from the roof of one of the exposition buildings at San Diego, Douglas Fairbanks grabbed hold of a small-sized eucalyptus tree which bent almost double under his weight. His hands and legs were lacerated, but he retained possession of the famous Fairbanks smile until the camera stopped turning.

Lew Bartholomew, head cameraman for the Yogue studio, has invented a new color process for films. The principle by which American dyes can be manufactured as easily as those produced in Germany is said to be involved in this process.

Kathleen Kirkham, the popular Morosco leading lady, is a crack shot with both rifle and shotgun. In a contest with two men at Hollywood this week, Miss Kirkham broke 205 clay pigeons out of 250, beating her two male rivals.

Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude are writing J. Warren Kerrigan's first feature, which will be done by the J. Warren Kerrigan Film Company.

Wilfred Lucas, the well-known Fine Arts star, has consented to appear at the Mason, December 12, as interlocutor in the minstrel part of the "Movie Revue of 1916."

Eileen "Babe" Sedgwick, the clever little leading lady of the Universal, is learning to operate the motion-picture camera, and is spending her evenings studying photography and the technical part of camera work.

DOESN'T LIKE EM.

Universal Leading Man No Longer Speaks to Lions.

"Hereafter I want to limit my associates to the actors and actresses at Universal City and nothing doing on lions and leopards," yesterday declared Jack Mulhall, leading man for Raymond Wells's Universal company which recently produced "Constantinople by the Sixth," featuring Ruth Stonehouse.

In a number of the scenes of the five-reel production, several of the Universal lions were used and during one of the waits between scenes Mulhall was asked to guard one end of the enclosure containing the beasts. Something outside interested these denizens of the jungle, and they started. So did Mulhall in the same direction. By the time the keepers of the lions came, the young actor had sought safety in a tree. He declares it is the first time in his life he knew he had any simian attributes.

forgot to bring the proper shoes from her Hollywood home. The dainty little actress was wearing the suit of clothes, so she jumped into her machine and started on a dash for the missing shoes. She was bowling down Hollywood boulevard at the rate of thirty-seven miles an hour when a motor policeman dashed up alongside, and she found herself enmeshed in the demands of the law. The officer asked her the name, and she replied, "Ruth Stonehouse," but she had a hard time convincing the policeman she was really a girl.

The following morning, while working at Universal City, she recalled she was due in the Police Court to answer the summons, and she started away to court wearing the boy's clothes, so at the Police Station the officer was waiting and escorted her to the women's court. There she created another sensation as the woman judge insisted she should go to the other court. After additional explanations by Art Flavia, her assistant director, "Her Honor" took the whole matter as a joke and dismissed the actress.

Hart's Hardest.

A leap through a window, glass and all, while seated a-horseback, is the latest high-power stunt performed by William Hart in "Tulliver," a picture soon to be released. By patient training Hart got his horse to do the trick. First, the horse leaped through a window containing no glass. Next cheesecloth was placed in the window, and the horse leaped through that. Lastly, when the picture was to be taken, Hart drove his horse straight up to the window and then sent his spurs into the animal's sides. The horse gave a snort of rage and pain and took a clean jump through the window.

Balboa Gets Peacocke.

Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke has left the Universal and is now at the Balboa. He is writing a five-reel drama to feature Jackie Saunders.

Emancipated Doves.

"Harmless as a dove" was a simile invented before motion pictures came into being, take it from Lois Weber, Universal director. In one of the artistic scenes designed for Miss Weber's production of the big allegorical feature, "Even As You and I," doves play an important part. Outside the window of the sculptor's studio the beautiful birds fly about and alight on the eaves of the house. However, one day last week a dove flew through a broken window into the set. It knocked against a piece of statuary, which went crashing to the floor. It took two days to replace this bit of property, which played an important part in the making of the picture.

Power's Kind Heart.

Robbed by death of his mother and with his father missing, little Gerald Ward, grandson of the late Mother Benson, who was a well-known Universal actress, has been provided with a home by Tyrone Power, noted actor.

Gerald, who is but 11 years old, had been cared for since the death of Mother Benson by his uncle, but the latter was injured and the boy was thrown on his own resources. Gerald had played in a number of notable productions, but he was ambitious for an education and spent his savings for tuition in a private school, and when Mother Benson fell ill he went into his little bank account cheerfully to aid her. Power sees a great deal of promise in the boy and proposes to educate him so as to assure his future.

Myrtle Must Swim.

Director Lynn Reynolds of Universal City has written a five-reel photoplay, "The Cruise of the Alden Besse," in which he will direct Myrtle Gonzales and the others of his capable company. The Alden Besse, an old-time sailing vessel, was procured for this picture and taken to San Pedro harbor, where her rigging and general lines were changed to a period of some seventy years ago.

The photoplay requires Miss Gonzales to do some exceptionally difficult work on the open sea.

So Near Yet So Far.

A number of the Lasky company are now chortling gleefully over the fate which befell Tommy Meighan when he arrived in New York City. For several weeks prior to his departure from California, Mr. Meighan dwelt at great length on what a perfectly lovely time he was going to have when he reached the big city and the Lambs' Club—how he was going to see all the plays and just have a regular time.

When Mr. Meighan landed at the Grand Central station, a representative of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was there to meet him, hurled him into a taxicab and just succeeded in making a boat bound for Cuba, where Tommy is now hard at work. The only glimpse Mr. Meighan caught of New York, therefore, was the traffic cop on the corner of Forty-second street and Broadway, as the taxicab whirled down that thoroughfare in its dive fo rthe dock.

Billie's Coming Joy Feast.

Billie Rhodes of the Christie Film Company is looking forward with a great deal of pleasure to the holidays. Her Christmas present from Mr. Christie is a leave of absence for three weeks, which she will spend in New York. With her sister, she will leave for the East in time to be there Christmas Day, after a short stop in Kansas City. This is the first time Miss Rhodes has found time to visit that other Broadway in four or five years. Wherefore she will take a refreshing peep at the Goddess of Liberty, learn the latest dance steps, and replenish her wardrobe. And if she has time, after performing the necessary rites, such as seeing the new plays, and partying with friends, she will take a peek at the Metropolitan Museum and entertain a few high-brows.

Neal is Charitable.

Neal Burns of the Christie Comedy Company will appear in the benefit to be given at the Mason Operahouse on December 12, and give his w. k. song-and-dance act as a "single." The proceeds of the benefit are to go toward a fund to build an armory in Hollywood for the Coast Artillery Reserve, recently organized, which contains many motion-picture players and studio employees.

Cold for May.

A number of the exterior scenes in the Metro version of James B. Hendryx's novel, "The Promise," take place during the snow season in the great Northwest, where lumbering is the chief occupation. These scenes will very likely be staged in Truckee, Cal., where, at present, the snow is four feet deep. Harold Lockwood and May Allison are starred in the production. Jay Hunt will direct.

Among the first actors engaged to support Harold Lockwood and May Alison in the feature is Paul Willis, well known as the result of his recent work in "The Fall of the Nation."

Lockwood will have the role of "Broadway Bill" Carmody, the millionaire's son, who leads a hectic life in the metropolis.

K. and D. Still Funny.

Kolb and Dill, the comedians with the American company, are playing in Aaron Hoffman's five-reel comedy, "Beloved Rogues." Al Santell is the director and Tom Chatterton and May Cloy are in support.

Realism Note.

Watch the checker players in Gladys Rockwell's next screen drama for William Fox. There is a real game in progress, and that accounts for the expressions on the actors' faces. The two men who figure in the game got so interested in the contest while the cameras were grinding that they moved the board to one corner of the studio and kept right on playing after the director had finished the scene.

All for Art.

A bit of additional business impulsively inserted by Director Walter Edwards into the script of the play he was engaged in filming, resulted in a comedy of errors recently at the Ince-Triangle studios in Culver City. The play in question is "A Gamble in Souls," the Triangle-Kay Bee drama by Lanier Bartlett, in which Thomas H. Ince presents Dorothy Dalton and William Desmond as stars.

In this subject Miss Dalton plays the part of a dance-hall girl from San Francisco's "Barbary Coast." During the production of some scenes on one of the studio stages, Director Edwards sudenly hit upon the idea of providing Miss Dalton with a stick of gum to chew, to add to the "atmosphere" of her part. A property man dispatched to the commissary returned with the information that the stock of gum was exhausted. Not one employee on the premises was able to furnish the "prop."

Edwards, intent, however, upon carrying his idea into effect, sent several aides scurrying about outside the studio in an effort to apprehend some one with a stick of gum in his pocket. As he was crossing the street in pursuit of a pedestrian, one of the aides stumbled and fell. The driver of an approaching automobile in evading the prostrate man, struck a dog. Frightened at the yelp of the canine, a woman dropped her handbag. The catch sprang open, and out fell—a whole package of gum!

Then Edwards picked up the lady's handbag, begged the gum, and proceeded with his scenes.

DOUGLAS DOES STUNTS.

Fairbanks Company Returns From Location Work at Fair.

Director John Emerson, Douglas Fairbanks, and other members of the Triangle Fine Arts Company, in "The Pet of Patagonia," have returned from San Diego, where a number of scenes of this production were staged. The exposition grounds furnished the location for a number of the scenes. Fairbanks raced over the roofs of the exposition buildings, and in one episode made a jump from one building to a tree and then to the ground.

Some of the scenes were also staged on the roof garden of the U. S. Grant Hotel. This garden was made into a Spanish type of cafe. A number of prominent society women of San Diego appeared in this scene.

Among those making the trip to San Diego were Spottiswoode Aitken, Tote du Crow, Charlie Stevens, Alma Reubens, Lillian Langdon, Douglas Fairbanks, and Director John Emerson.

INTERESTING SONG RECITAL.

An interesting song recital will be given at Symphony Hall Monday evening by the pupils of Alice Lohr McDaniel. Selections will range from a somewhat popular variety like the "Kiss Waltz" by Arditi to arias from operas such as "Lakme" and "Mme. Butterfly."

Pupils taking part in the programme will include Mildred Hughey, Virginia Kelsey, Reta Breem, Gertrude Du Paquette, and Adelaide Manlove. Miss Ludlow will play a flute obligato, and Miss Ruth McBride will be the pianiste for the recital.

PLAN STUDIO ON HISTORIC SITE.

CLEO MADISON TO STAR IN HER OWN COMPANY.

Location of Interesting Film Project is Only Short Distance from Broadway—Deal is Closed for Property Involving Reported Consideration of $100,000.

That an ideal motion-picture site may be found within seven minutes' ride from Broadway is the interesting fact brought to light in the purchase of a studio location at Boyle and Stephenson avenues during the past week. This is to be the home of the new Cleo Madison Film Corporation, starring the popular actress of that name. The property comprises eight acres of remarkably varied scenic possibilities, and formerly was the residence of the late W. H. Perry, pioneer lumberman and capitalist. It is one of the historic mansions of the city.

The purchase is said to involve about $100,000. Isadore Bernstein, president and general manager of the Cleo Madison Film Corporation and the Bernstein Productions Corporation, selected the historic site as the location for the studio shortly after his arrival in this city a week ago. The title was held in trust by Mary Turner, and the purchase was made from her.

A wide variety of scenic locations can be obtained right on the property. The grounds were planted to rare trees of diversified type by the original owner. There is a heavy thicket of sugar cane in one part of the property. Groups of willows, pepper trees, cedars, pines, orange trees, magnolia, a thicket of bamboo, rare trees of Asia and Africa fill the grounds.

The general background is unusually accommodating. There is a factory district at the foot of the hill. Beyond is the skyline of the downtown district. The Los Angeles Orphanage, immediately adjoining the property, will probably become famous in a thousand scenes or more, as will Hollenbeck Park and its environs.

The first picture that will be staged is "The Maid of Niagara." To the rear of the house on the acreage there is a cliff nearly 200 feet in height. A huge flow of water will be released over this cliff in the staging of the projected film.

Mr. Bernstein has a big force of men at work clearing the grounds and preparing for the work which he plans to begin the first of the year. "We are here to stay," he said yesterday. "We have no leases of any kind. We own this place, and it is remarkably adapted for moving-picture purposes.

"I intend to feature Miss Madison in plays of the sort that people want. I intend to make pictures for the clean-minded millions, and will never lose sight of the fact."

Mr. Bernstein was one of the pioneers in the motion-picture business and for a number of years was connected with the Universal company. This is his first venture in the starring of a single actress, now a popular procedure in the film world.

Cleo Madison has starred in many notable productions with the Universal, the most recent having been "The Chalice of Courage," a film version of "Tosca." "Damon and Pythias" and "The Trey of Hearts" are other features in which she has had a leading part. She is a dramatic actress of the emotional type.

DIAGHILEFF BALLET.

Famous Russian Terpsichorean Stars to Provide Rare Esthetic Enjoyment in Performances Here During the Holiday Week.

The Serge de Diaghileff Ballet Russe, which will appear in this city Christmas week, promises great delight to lovers of classic and esthetic dancing. There are a dozen ballets to be given, but each performance is limited to three or four.

Interest will naturally center on the ballets of a sensational nature which have helped to establish a reputation of the Diaghileff organization as unique in its line. Of these "Scheherazade," the great oriental melodrama, heads the list. For sheer barbaric splendor and magnificence, the costumes and decorations for this ballet have never been equaled, and are considered masterpieces of Leon Bakst. The story relates in vivid pantomime what happens when the Shah Zeman quits his harem. The inmates immediately demand the release of the Nubian slaves, and just as the eunuchs accede to the uproarious request, the Shah returns. The action ends rather unhappily for the amorous wives.

Other famous ballets are "L'Apres Midi d'un Faune," which Nijinsky himself conceived for Debussy's music; "Cleopatre," arranged from one of Gautier's exotic tales, and "Le Spectre de la Rose," founded on another of Gautier's poems. These are but a few of the exquisitely beautiful and sensational ballets which go to make up the artistic programmes of these artists.

JAPAN AS SETTING.

Unique Film Production to be Made in Far East by Nipponese Company, Starring Former Ince and Lasky Actor—Will Start Trip Soon.

The Fuji Yama Feature Films Company will shortly feature Matsu Matsumoto, formerly with Lasky and Ince, in a big ten-reel Japanese classic. This production will be made entirely in Japan, the name of same being "Nami-Ko." It is a realistic story of knighthood in Nippon.

The director will be Frank A. Thorne, who recently severed his connections with the American Film Company. The camera work will be under the supervision of Frank Takata.

Other members of the company who will go are W. E. Macarton, president; Mrs. E. L. Greer, secretary; George Y. Matsumoto, interpreting director. Mr. L. Herrling, vice-president, will remain in Los Angeles to look after the affairs of the company in this country.

The interiors of the photoplay will be made in the studio of the Tokio Cinema Company, at Tokio.

The company expects to sail December 22 on the steamer China.

Great Reductions on Millinery

—If the price concessions were quoted—which Bullock's policy forbids—you would be astounded. The new markings give no idea of the richness and up-to-dateness of the hats. You simply cannot associate in your mind's eye such millinery beauty with such low prices—

Trimmed Hats $3.75, $4.95, $7.45, $9.75 and $10

—At $4.95 there are clever little turbans and large floppy brim beavers that are simply trimmed with flowers—hats that help wonderfully in giving a youthful appearance.

—At $7.45 there are chic tailored hats in both large and small models—extremely rich materials in black and Winter suit colors.

—At $9.75—Dressy hats for afternoon wear—clever shapes of Lyon's silk velvet trimmed with fur, or metal flowers, or ornaments.

—At $10.00—Those wonderful velour hats with silk faced brims and beautifully embroidered crowns that you have been admiring at a much higher price.

Sports Hats, too, at Ridiculous Reductions

—Absurdly low prices on scores of clever creations.

—At $2.75—Sailors of hatter's plush, close fitting hats of velvet, large sailors of felt with velvet facings, and several styles of velour hats.

—At $3.75—$5.00 and more are many styles in sports hats, duplicates of which have been bringing ever so much more.

Winter's Untrimmed Hats Repriced

—"Repriced"—what a weak word to express the importance of this offering!
—Silk velvet hat shapes in the styles of the hour

At $1.75, $3.75, $5.00 and $7.50

—Those at $3.75 and higher being of all silk velvet—hats so rich in material and clever in design that very, very little trimming is required—and in no instance does the price come anywhere near expressing the early season value.
—Whatever your millinery needs may be this great Bullock event offers you a chance to make a surprising saving—Monday—3rd floor.

Give Gifts of Silks

—Dress, blouse and skirt patterns of silks, now that prices are soaring so rapidly, will be doubly appreciated as gifts.
—These offerings are not at all likely to be equaled after present stocks are exhausted——36-inch black taffetas of high quality, $1.50, $1.75.
—27-inch plaid and stripe taffetas—bright colors, suitable for blouses and misses' dresses—$1.50 a yard.
—40-inch crepe de chines of the weight wanted for undergarments, party frocks, etc.—evening and dark shades—$1.50 a yard.
—32-inch washable satin—soft, lustrous weave in white, pink, blue, etc., $1.75.
—35-inch satin de cygne in fully a hundred shades, $1.35.
—36-inch Faille matinee, the silk superb for party and street wear—$2.50.—2nd floor.

Silk Petticoats $3.95

—and others to $12.50. Even those at $3.95 have circular ruffled flounces and elastic waist bands; black, white and a wide choice of shades—both plain and changeable crepe de chine and washable satin petticoats, too, at $3.95.
At $6, $7.50 and $8.75 are petticoats of richer silks with more elaborate flounces in street and evening shades—Third Floor.

A Great Deal of Interest to Center Around Fashion
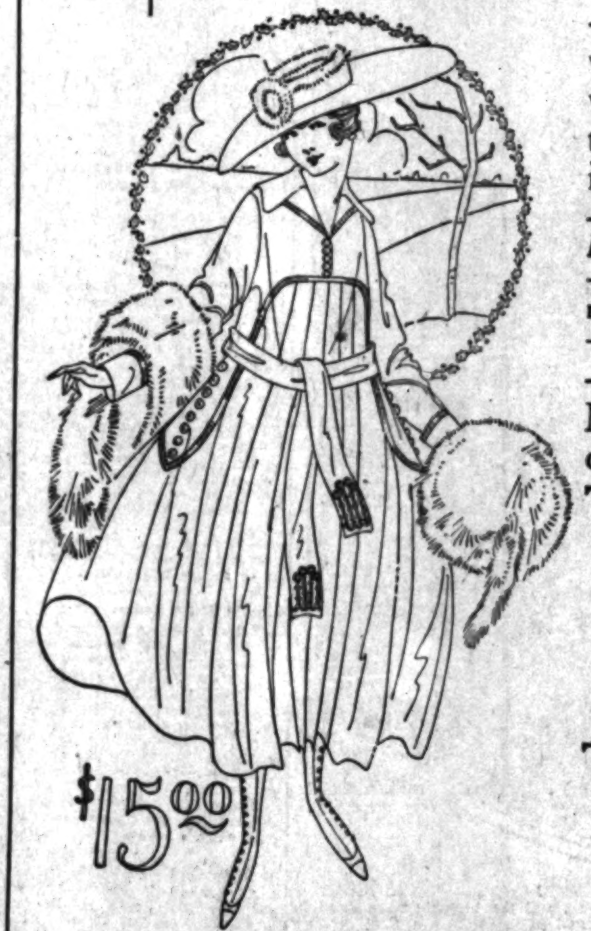
at Bullock's on Monday



—Because of the new styles that are here (the sports wear is creating a furore, the advance spring sports wear rich in the glamour of 1917—of the new patterns and colorings in Khaki-Kool—Brilliant and intensely individual)
—Because of the Values that are here, the strong values in Suits, Coats and Frocks that have been designed to be different and delightful.
—Because of the New Prices—that dot the sections with irresistible points of magnetism—among the Suits, and Coats, and Dresses you will find them—
—Because of Beautiful Waists—and Lingerie—and Negligees—
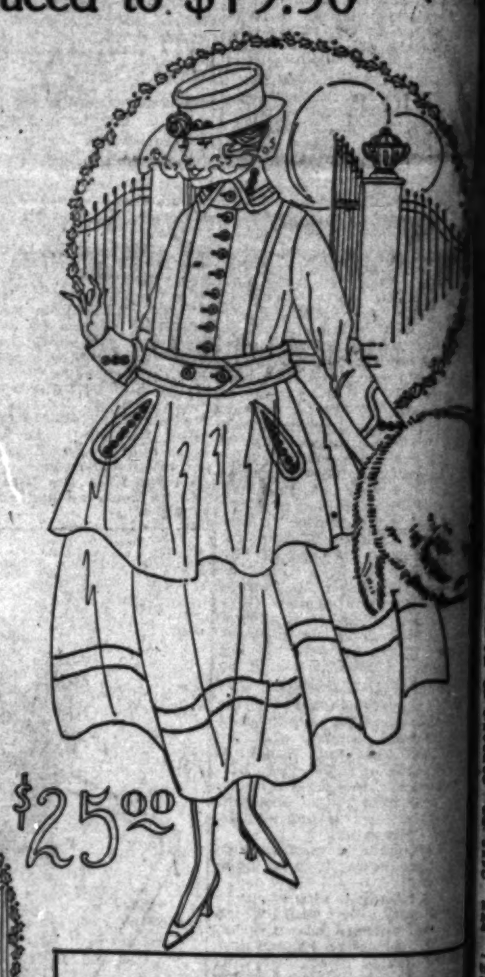
—But the very particular reason why this coming Monday will be distinguished from other Mondays of recent dates will be—

The Suits, Priced $25.00
The Silk and Serge Frocks
Reduced to $15.00
The Party Dresses at $25.00
The Splendid Coats at $25.00
The Coats Reduced to $15.00
The Coats Reduced to $19.50



And the Great Sale of all Winter Millinery at New Low Prices—that are very low indeed.

Classified Liners.

AGATE TYPE ONLY.

Accepted subject to the following rates and conditions: The rate for inserting Want Ads in the daily Times is 1c per word each insertion; Sunday issue, 1½c per word each insertion; minimum charge for each non-consecutive insertion, 25c; except under the following classifications, the rate for which is 2c per word daily, 2½c per word Sunday, minimum charge, applicable to a single insertion and to each non-consecutive insertion, 25c daily, 35c Sunday: "Society Meetings," "Special Notices," "Church Notices," "Miscellaneous," "Stocks and Bonds," "Money to Loan," "Salary and Chattels," "Personal," "Medical," "Detectives," "Business," and "Baths and Massage."

An extra charge of 25 per cent. is made for use of capital letters.

Minimum space for classified advertisements ordered more than one insertion, 14 words.

Figures and dashes are charged for on the basis of seven words to a line.

Ads set solid are counted strictly by the word. Ads paragraphed or lined-up matter set in caps, [illegible] be (5) average words to a line. Not [illegible] estimate five (5) average words to [illegible] line, and eight (8) average words to [illegible] following. In this kind of advertising [illegible] number of words set solid is counted, [illegible] (8) words added for each unfilled line. The Times reserves the right to classify all advertisements under appropriate headings.

The Times cannot guarantee accuracy or assume liability for errors of any kind occurring in classified advertisements.

The Times will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion of any advertisement ordered for more than one time.

When not the fault of the advertiser, which only lessens the value of an advertisement, will be corrected only by republication, without extra charge, on presentation of receipt within five days after insertion. No allowance will be made where the error does not materially affect the value or purpose of the advertisement.

No adjustment will be made for advertising matter affected by an error or errors which may occur in other items in the same advertisement.

Advertisers should retain receipts given by The Times in payment of "liners," as no mistake can be rectified without them.

The Times will not accept phone or verbal orders to discontinue or change "till forbid" advertisements.

All orders to discontinue advertising in The Times are numbered in the order of their receipt, and in each instance the number of the order is given to the advertiser, who should make a record thereof. In case of dispute no charge for advertising will be rebated unless the "stop order" number is presented to The Times by the advertiser.

Sunday real estate advertisements, to be classified properly, must be in The Times office before 6 o'clock Saturday night. Other classified ads, "To Let," etc., received over counter and by telephone until 11 p.m. Saturday. Ads received after closing hours for each division, will be inserted under heading "Too Late to Classify." Rate 1½ cents per word.

The Sunday circulation of The Times exceeds 100,000 copies, and more "liners" are regularly printed in its columns than in the five other Los Angeles newspapers combined.

Telephone your want advertisements. Ring up The Times, Main 8200; Home 10391, any hour of day or night, and secure prompt and careful attention.

The Times does not knowingly accept objectionable advertisements of any kind or character—medical, whiskey, turf, lottery, "get-rich-quick," etc.—and it uses every reasonable precaution to keep its advertising columns clean and wholesome. This is a guaranty of protection to its readers, as well as to its legitimate advertising patrons. To the end that all false and spurious advertisements may be rigidly excluded from the columns of The Times, information that will aid in the maintenance of this policy is solicited, and will be welcomed from Times readers and advertisers. Communications on the subject will be accepted in confidence.

BE QUICK TO KICK IF THINGS SEEM WRONG, BUT KICK TO US AND MAKE IT RIGHT.

SERVICE FOR TIMES PATRONS.

For the convenience of persons who may desire to reply to classified advertisements printed in The Times, send communications to this newspaper, and have "liners" and other advertisements, Times letter boxes have been placed in these downtown buildings for the purpose indicated.

Collections will be made from these boxes each hour.

Each piece of advertising copy must contain the name and address of the advertiser, number of insertions and heading under which it is desired that the announcement be printed.

The boxes are located as follows:

PROF. J. A. MURDOCK,

COR. 8TH AVENUE AND WEST 54TH ST.

THE GREATEST PSYCHIC AND YOGI MEDIATOR IN AMERICA.

READINGS, 50 CENTS AND ONE DOLLAR.

WITHOUT ASKING A QUESTION, without any previous knowledge, and having no natural means of knowing who you are, whence or for what you come, he tells your name, names of friends and enemies—who are true and who are false. Tells whom and when you will marry, giving names, dates, facts and location, accepting no fee unless satisfaction is given.

Prof. Murdock is the highest authority in his honorable profession, his advice is sought by all who want to be successful in their undertakings; therefore, WAKE UP, THROW OFF THE CHAINS OF LETHARGY and consult this celebrated Psychic. His advice on SPECULATION AND INVESTMENT is sought by thousands, and he is ever ready to help and advise those with capital to find a safe and

GOOD-PAYING INVESTMENT.

This he can positively do and demands no fee until the investment has paid a handsome profit to his client. Can you expect anything fairer?

Prof. Murdock's extraordinary psychic power, combined with his superior knowledge of psychic forces, enables him to read human life with unerring accuracy from infancy to old age. His powers are wonderful and indisputable; his advice is reliable, his information clear, concise and to the point in Love, Courtship, Marriage, Divorce, Sales, Wills, Patents, Journeys, Investment, Speculations, Property, Insurance, Mortgages, Oil and Mining Claims, etc., etc.

SECRET INFLUENCE.

He will teach you how to fascinate any one you desire; how to make your enemies your friends, cause a speedy marriage with the one of your choice.

(POWER OF CONTROL.)

The all-wise Creator did not endow you with high ideals, noble inspirations, desire for happiness and return for that great love-craving within your heart and breast, without at the same time placing within your reach the means for attaining those desires and wishes. PROF. MURDOCK knows how to control that POWER for your success. In this line of work PROF. MURDOCK recognizes no competitors.

He will make you

SUCCESSFUL IN YOUR BUSINESS and all other affairs pertaining to human welfare.

Permanently located at his own

RESIDENCE.

PERSONAL—
MRS. MASSON,
the noted palmist, of London, England, may be consulted at 322 SOUTH SPRING STREET, by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS, FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.
The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.
PALMISTRY HONESTLY PRACTICED WILL NOT tell your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.
Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry. WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.
MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.
HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

PERSONAL—TIRED OF POVERTY?
If you are tired of slaving for wages or salary while others around you are growing rich and independent, if you are tired of poverty, and have the ambition that every American ought to have, the determination not to stay poor in this great land of opportunity, the determination to rise above poorly paid toil and social obscurity, write me now, today. Let me tell you of a great opportunity for you to start on the road to wealth. No work for you to do. Plan backed by best men and women of entire community. Don't pass this by. Tear this advertisement out right now, this minute. Send name and address and get interesting illustrated book and full information, all absolutely free. Do it right now, for this opportunity won't last. CHARLES W. SAUNDERS, 776 Broadway, Denver, Colo.

TO LET—

The BELMONT Apts., The BELCAMP Apts.
Figueroa at Tenth st. 2407 West Ninth st.

If you want the greatest value for every dollar you pay, earn what the BELMONT and BELCAMP have to offer you. "Not how little, but how much we can give our guests" is what we are constantly striving to ascertain.

We do not operate under general rules applying to all en masse. We aim to meet and fulfill the needs and desires of the individual. We try to anticipate your desires. No reasonable request is ever refused; many unreasonable ones are granted. We aim to please, and to that end we do all in our power to make each of our houses, in every sense of the word,

"the place like home."

It may interest you to know that no similar institution in Los Angeles maintains as elaborate or novel an amusement programme as the BELMONT and the BELCAMP. Billiards, pool, music, cards, dancing, picnics, excursions, swimming parties, entertainers—"something doin' all the while."

If you are not perfectly satisfied where you are would it not be well worth your time to call and learn just what we have to offer you? Talk with our guests and learn what they think.

The BELMONT, $25 and up.
The BELCAMP, $20 and up.

"DO YOU REALIZE"
THE PRICES OF
NEW CARS ARE GOING UP
ALL THE TIME?

This will naturally make the used car in greater demand as fewer people will trade their old cars in on new ones. It is our advice that you take this little tip in for what it means to you.

DON'T DELAY UNTIL PRICES GO UP.

Now is the time of the year to buy a closed car. WE have just overhauled two Overland coupes—a 1914 and a 1913; prices $575 and $375, respectively. These cars will be painted to suit and will carry our standard service guarantee. If you are considering a coupe it will be to your advantage to investigate these at once. We will give terms if desired.

Think of an opportunity to buy a six-cylinder seven-passenger automobile slightly used that has been completely gone over, painted maroon and carrying a guarantee from the largest automobile manufacturer in the world—THE WILLYS OVERLAND COMPANY. This is a 1916 car, was sold originally for $1275—now $850. Think this over before you buy a cheap six, then pay us a visit.

1916 Ford touring	$500
1916 Ford roadster	$275
1914 Ford roadster, Gray & Davis electric lights and starter	$275
1912 Ford touring	$200
1914 Ford touring, A-1 shape	$275

$150—SPECIALS—$150

Dandy little Hupmobile 20 roadster. The car you're always looking for but seldom find.

Flanders 20 touring car, subject to your inspection.

Overland roadster in very good mechanical condition, that we consider a snap.
Any of the above cars sold on terms to suit.

VERY SPECIAL.

A 1915 Marmon, 7-passenger, special job, car cost new $4500. Is now equipped with brand new set of 45) Fisk red top casings.
This beautiful car has been run 8000 miles, just enough to break it in good, by a private party who has just joined the Overland company.
Now, if you are in the market for this style of automobile, come into our main branch and see it, as we have been ordered to sell it quick.
For $400 we have one of the best little Hupmobile, Model 32, touring cars in town.

IT IS BETTER

TO BUY A HIGH-GRADE USED CAR

THAN A CHEAP NEW ONE.

For Sale—1916 model touring cars below their actual market value. I have four of them of different popular models and were I a speculator in used cars I would be asking from a hundred to a hundred and fifty dollars more for each one of them. But as they were taken in trade on the new Chandler and as we have made our profit in the new car sale and as I want to move these cars at once so as to make room for future trades on new cars, I am selling them at prices that are right and adding a guarantee and service to convince you that I know them to be in good condition and can, therefore, afford to guarantee them.

MISS BIRNEY MARRIED BY ANOTHER RECTOR.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The Rev. Dr. Randolph H. McKim of the Church of Epiphany, did not officiate, as had been expected, at the marriage at noon today of the Baron von Schoen, secretary of the German embassy, and Miss Catherine Birney of this city, because the German embassy decided he had disqualified himself by his Thanksgiving Day sermon in which he assailed Germany for deportation of Belgians.

In his sermon the doctor declared "to all their outrages against civilization the Teutonic powers now have added the infamous crime of enslaving a whole population."

The wedding was attended by Count von Bernstorff, Countess von Bernstorff and members of the embassy staff. Baron von Schoen is about to be transferred to Mexico.

MRS. BOISSEVAIN'S BODY REACHES HOME.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WESTPORT (N. Y.) Dec. 2.—Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain, the suffragist who died in Los Angeles, will be buried at Meadow Mound, the family homestead near here, next Tuesday afternoon. Her body was brought here from California by her father, John E. Milholland. The coffin was wrapped in an American flag and covered with flowers.

BRITISH STEAMER EGGESFORD IS SUNK.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The sinking of the British steamship Eggesford by a submarine is reported by Lloyd's. The crew was landed.

The Eggesford, 3566 tons gross and 362 feet long, was built in 1910 and owned in Cardiff. She was last reported on her arrival October 31 at Bordeaux from New Orleans.

IRON MINERS TO RECEIVE INCREASE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DULUTH, Dec. 2.—At least 2700 miners employed by independent companies in the iron fields of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan will receive a 10 per cent. raise in their wages. The raise goes into effect December 15, it was announced here today, and follows similar action by the United States Steel Corporation.

VIEWS OF JAPS HINGE ON CHINA

Varying Articles on Sentiment in Tokio Press.

Wave of Satisfaction Over Empire's Prosperity.

Desire to Co-operate with American Promoters.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOKIO, Oct. 31.—That the relations between Japan and the United States occupy the minds of the Japanese people has been especially evidenced during the last six weeks, when a large number of articles concerning that subject have appeared in newspapers and magazines. The authors have addressed themselves with considerable freedom and frankness to the question. Most of them have been prudent and amicable, seeking to find a solution of matters at issue; others, "jingoistic" in tone, have voiced pessimism as to the future. The discussion has hinged largely on China. It is to be noted, however, that more eminent and representative writers have placed themselves in the first class, while the lesser known and more sensational Japanese commentators belong to the second.

Japan's present unprecedented prosperity, which is chiefly due to the European war, has swept through the empire a wave of satisfaction that the nation should be attaining such great material progress, and it has awakened all minds to the vast possibilities of continued and constantly-augmenting advance in finance, industry and commerce. Developments are to be noted in all directions, and if the war continues for a long period Japan's position will be greatly enhanced. She will reduce her national debt; she will expand her already immense shipping; she will strengthen her industries and, above all, she will extend her commerce. It is the great nation of China to which Japan looks with eager eye for commercial growth, and China is the crux of the relations between Japan and the United States in the immediate future.

BELIEF IN TOKIO.

At Tokio the belief prevails that Japan will continue her endeavor to increase her political influence in China. But Japanese business men are constantly clamoring for a political ascendency that will not be so abrupt or so imprudent as to endanger a peaceful, economic conquest of the neighboring republic. Put differently, conservative Japanese want to break down the barrier of distrust existing in China against things Japanese and replace it with a feeling of confidence which will establish free-trade relations based on business factors.

The readiness with which the Chinese recently granted American capitalists a concession to build a long railroad and their hesitation in making contracts with the Japanese has awakened Japanese to the fact that ascendancy in China, to be successful, must be accompanied by some measure of trust and confidence.

At this particular moment the Japanese idea is the desirability of co-operation with the United States in the development of China. The idea was suggested by Judge Albert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, during his recent visit to Tokio, and it is understood that some plan of co-operation along broad lines is now being tentatively elaborated by representative Japanese commercial leaders. Although the Russo-Japanese alliance, which calls for mutual co-operation in the defense of their special interests in China, is actively in operation, there is no present proof of prevailing fears that Japan will permit the alliance seriously to prove inimical to the economic interests of America.

CO-OPERATION IDEA.

The idea of co-operation finds favor both in governmental and non-official circles. It is especially emphasized by Viscount Kentaro Kaneko, member of the Privy Council, in the October number of Chuo Koron or Central Review. Viscount Kaneko, who knows the United States very well, and knows a good deal about the temperament of the American people, comes out flatly in favor of an economic alliance with the United States in respect to China. His reason is that a programme of harmony and understanding would avoid needless competition and work to the best interests of Japan, the United States and China. He said: "Japan might make temporary profits by dumping her commodities in China and driving away American goods from that market, but such an act would hardly improve the relations between Japan and America." As he saw the situation, they had much better define their respective spheres of economic activity. As an instance, he suggested that Japan might monopolize the small hardware trade in China and leave to Americans the market for nails, iron pipes, etc. In cotton spinning the Japanese might sell coarse threads and the Americans might sell fine threads. It is by such means that a conflict of interests could be avoided. And he added: "If such an effective economic alliance be concluded agitators may do what they like—there will be no fear of a conflict between the two countries."

IMMIGRATION QUESTION.

Turning to the question of immigration, Viscount Kaneko expressed the opinion that if the Japanese immigrants in the United States are misunderstood there it is largely their own fault. They are not inferior to European immigrants—they are thrifty and humane—but they should adopt American customs and manners and strive to harmonize with their white neighbors instead of living a life apart. If their cost of living is increased, they could overcome that by selling their products at the same prices as the American farmers and traders, instead of underselling them. Thus they would root out another cause of ill feeling.

To accomplish these reforms Viscount Kaneko suggests the formation of a Japanese association at San Francisco to oversee the immigrants. If they persist in their ways they should be transported back to Japan. With true assimilation, the writer believed, the Japanese immigrants could reasonably look forward to the right of citizenship and the right to vote. "In short," he said, "they will be treated by the white men as their equals."

Dr. Kazutami Ukita, the historian and well-known editor of the Taiyo Magazine, discusses American questions in a leading article on the effect of the Russo-Japanese alliance in the control or domination of the Pacific. He believes that by that alliance Japan has strengthened her position in the Asiatic continent.

AS TO PACIFIC.

Pointing out that during the war the Pacific Ocean will be exclusively dominated by Japan, Great Britain and the United States, Dr. Ukita says that the United States with its steady navol expansion will become the greatest naval power in the Pacific in the future. He added: "If Japan, Great Britain and the United States co-operate peacefully in the Pacific, and derive the common benefits accruing therefrom, tranquility will reign in the Pacific Ocean, but if a peaceful co-operation between there three powers should be found difficult, the Pacific may be turned into a hostile area and the world may witness another great war. At any rate the relations among these three powers in the Pacific are worthy of special study, and we have no doubt that the new Russo-Japanese agreement will have an important effect thereon."

But Dr. Ukita thinks it is either impossible or unnecessary for any of these three powers to monopolize the sea power in the Pacific. It will be sufficient for Japan, in his opinion, to maintain such a navy as will be competent to protect her from foreign aggression and insure the peace of the Far East.

Other writers participating in the forum include Prof. Shigeo Suyehiro of the Imperial University of Kioto; Shintaro Inagaki and Ejiro Hirano. Prof. Suyehiro is rather prominent from a trip he made to Mexico when he interviewed President Madero and was heartily welcomed. The other contributors are little known.

AMERICAN PROBLEM.

Writing in the Central Review, Dr. Suyehiro expresses gloomy forebodings for the future of the so-called American problems. He fears that after the war America, with her vast wealth, will prove a keen competitor for Japan in the markets of China, which may lead to political friction.

Also, he believes that the immigration question is a vital problem for the Japanese people, whose future expansion depends upon the manner in which it is solved. He insists that America's treatment of Japanese injures Japan's prestige with the Chinese, who will never regard Japan as an equal of the European powers. "To solve our Chinese questions completely," he concluded, "we must solve the American question."

To give an idea of the viewpoint of the sensational writers, there are the words of Mr. Inagaki, who says: "The chief motive of the new American militarism is first, to defend the United States against a possible attack from Germany and Japan, and second, to contend for supremacy in the Orient. In short, America has an uneasy conscience over the stopping of Japanese immigrants and is conjuring up fearful hobgoblins of all sorts from her own troubled conscience. Witness the ridiculous Magdalena Bay incident!"

And he concluded: "Let America's ambitious policy on the Pacific be a warning to us peoples of an oriental state. We, as well as the Chinese, should awake from our delusions, throw aside our petty quarrels and combine against the common enemy."

EVEN HIGH COST OF ELECTIONS GOES UP.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DENVER, Dec. 2.—The high cost of elections has hit Denver as shown by the election commission's budget for 1917. The sum of $54,470 is asked for election purposes next year against $37,627 in 1915. The increased cost in supplies is given for the need of extra appropriations.

GREGORY MAY QUIT HIS CABINET JOB.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 2. — Reports from Texas that United States Attorney-General Gregory plans to resign in the near future met with no denial from members of President Wilson's administration here with him today, but it was reiterated that the President was anxious to have Mr. Gregory, as well as the other members of the Cabinet, remain in office. It was said that nothing was known of Mr. Gregory's intentions.

John W. Davis, Solicitor-General is looked upon as the most likely successor to Mr. Gregory, if he does resign. In this event, it was said, Mr. Gregory, who, on a previous occasion, was offered a seat on the United States Supreme Court, will be very seriously considered by President Wilson if another vacancy occurs on that bench.

PASTOR'S DAUGHTER TO REFORM SCHOOL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN JOSE, Dec. 2.—Mrs. Edith Bristow Bevins, daughter of a Methodist missionary, the Rev. E. J. Bristow, was committed by Superior Judge Beasly, sitting in the Juvenile Court, to the Girls' Reform School at Ventura this morning.

The young woman was recently brought back from San Francisco by Mrs. Catherine F. Frattan, probation officer. Her husband, Wilbur Bevins, has been arrested for failure to provide.

HONOLULU WOMEN COMING.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE.]

HONOLULU (T. H.) Dec. 2. — Suspended sentences were given here today to 108 women of the restricted district, who were arraigned in the Circuit Court as the result of the recent anti-vice crusade. This was in accordance with the recommendations of the grand jury. Many of the women have booked passage for San Francisco.

BOARD COMMUTES DEATH SENTENCES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 2.—The death sentence of Harry Brewer and Frank de Pretto were commuted to life imprisonment by the State Board of Pardons today.

The two were condemned to die for the murder of Eugene Allen in the Highland Boy store at Bingham, Utah, April 10, 1914.

They were robbing the store. De Pretto was the outside man. Brewer shot and killed Allen when the latter surprised him as he was making preparations to blow the safe.

IDAHO OFFICIAL COUNT.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

BOISE (Idaho) Dec. 2.—The official election count gives Wilson 70,054; Hughes 55,560.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE ON ITALIAN FRONT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ROME (via London) Dec. 2.—Considerable artillery activity along the entire Austro-Italian front is reported today by the War Office, which also chronicles the repulse of an attack on the Italian lines in the Falia Valley.

SERBIAN ARMY GAINS ON HEIGHTS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

SALONIKI, Dec. 2 (via London.)—The official statement issued from Serbian army headquarters today says:

"Yesterday there were local actions at several points, especially at Kravitza and on the heights about Grunishte, where our troops advanced in spite of the enemy's strong resistance. We frustrated an enemy attempt to attack hill 1050."

BULGARIAN REPORT TELLS OF SUCCESSES.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

SOFIA, Dec. 1 (via London, Dec. 2, 4:34 p.m.)—The official announcement from the War Office today recounts the fighting on the Rumanian front in the last week and continues:

"On November 30 we closed the Tzomana-Branichtari-Singuerni line, twenty kilometers (twelve miles) from the ring of forts around Bucharest and broke the desperate resistance of the enemy, capturing two heavy mortars, six machine guns, four officers and 200 men. The enemy left a number of killed and wounded on the field.

"In the region of Monastir (Macedonian front) we repulsed without difficulty attacks against the village of Trnova, hill 1249, and hill 1050, east of the village of Paralova, were bombarded violently by our artillery."

ENTENTE MINISTERS ACCEPT SURRENDER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

ATHENS, Dec. 2, 10:55 a.m. (via London, Dec. 3, 12:25 a.m.)—The Crown Council sat until 2:30 o'clock this morning. Later the French, British, Russian and Italian Ministers made the following announcement:

"On the proposal of the Ministers of the four powers, at the instance of Admiral Du Fournet, the Greek government was informed that the Entente will accept six batteries of mountain artillery, instead of ten, whose surrender was demanded by December 1, waiving on their delivery all questions of the surrender of other armament.

"The Greek government accepted and agreed to proceed with the immediate delivery of the six batteries."

CRETANS HOLD VENIZELOS'S HOME.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—A Reuter dispatch from Athens, dated 4:30 p.m. Saturday, says:

"Twenty armed Cretans barricaded themselves in the house of Venizelos (the former Greek Premier,) and refused to evacuate it, firing from the roof upon all who approached. The Minister of War ordered machine guns brought into action. The Cretans surrendered after a consultation. They were conducted under a heavy guard to the Parliament building, which had been converted temporarily into a military prison.

"During the passage of the 100 yards from the house of Venizelos to the Parliament building the guard had the utmost difficulty in saving the Cretans from the mob which had assembled in the neighborhood when the siege of the house began.

"At 4 o'clock in the afternoon order seems fairly well restored. Street firing has ceased and strong cavalry patrols are guarding the city."

SUFFRAGISTS HOPE FOR WILSON'S AID.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Hope that President Wilson would see fit to aid the women in their campaign for a national suffrage amendment to the Constitution was expressed here today at a luncheon of the National Woman's Party. Delegates from many States were present. Miss Anne Martin of Reno, Nev., the national chairman, was the principal speaker.

"We approach the coming session of Congress full of hope and confidence," said Miss Martin. "The suffrage amendment has been made a national issue. We have every hope that Congress will submit the amendment to State Legislatures at the coming session."

GREEKS PERMIT SAFE DEPARTURE TO ALLIES.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 3, 1:35 a.m.—A Reuter dispatch from Athens timed 6:30 a.m., Saturday says:

"Anglo-French marines totalling 600 marched out of the Zappeion under a strong guard of Greeks with all their equipment, en route for Piraeus.

"All the streets in the neighborhood of the Zappeion previously had been cleared and every precaution had been taken to avoid anti-Entente demonstrations. A detachment of Italian marines, which took refuge yesterday in the Italian Archeological School, was permitted quietly to depart under Greek escort on the intervention of the Italian Minister."

DENTAL WEEK IN CHICAGO.

Big Parade and Free Clinic for Instruction of the People.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Seventeen hundred dental students from the Northwestern University, the Chicago College of Dental Surgery and the Illinois University will parade through the city Monday to a downtown mass meeting, at which dental week, proclaimed by Mayor Thompson, will formally be opened. Arrangements have been made to present 25,000 toothbrushes to needy school children. Dentists will hold public clinics for instruction in the care of teeth; teachers will direct special attention of school children to the needs of cleanliness, and many physicians are scheduled to make addresses.

SAY TWELVE MEN FIX FOOD PRICES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—A declaration of war on the butter and egg and mercantile exchanges was made today by John J. Dillon, State Commissioner of Foods and Markets, in his efforts to cut the high cost of food. The trading on some of the food exchanges here, he declared, is done merely among the members, not with outsiders, and less than twelve men make food prices for the entire country.

Mr. Dillon said he would try to close these exchanges by obtaining legislation opening them to the public, annulling their charters, or by establishing term markets to put them out of business. These methods would be tried successfully, the commissioner said.

TO CAUSE DEMAND FOR RABBIT MEAT.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

AUSTIN (Tex.) Dec. 2. — The Texas State Department of Agriculture has decided to take up the task of creating a country-wide demand for rabbit meat, it became known today. It is expected not less than 1,000,000 Texas-born and reared rabbits will be shipped to New England and eastern markets during the next few winter months. The department believes Texas revenues will be materially increased by the traffic in jack rabbits and cotton tails.

HOW GERMANY PROGRESSED.

Her Chemists and Manufacturers Utilized Their Waste Products.

[New York Commercial:] In the midst of the prosperity which the United States is enjoying many business men go around wringing their hands and bemoaning the fate in store for us when the war comes to an end in Europe and the arts of peace are once more cultivated. They fear most of all German competition, just as if the Germans are a race of supermen who can do things which others cannot attempt. Because German chemists have discovered methods of utilizing what was formerly wasted and German manufacturers have followed new methods of making by-products, their country has become pre-eminent in the manufacture of chemicals, dyestuffs and other important articles of commerce. By wasting nothing they are able to sell all products of a class cheaper than competitors who make only the chief product and throw the waste of that single process away.

Our frightened business men talk about German methods and German efficiency in making by-products as if they are beyond comparison or competition. The fact is that the Germans learned from us in the beginning. They studied the systems of our most efficient manufacturers and applied them to all their industries. They are not more efficient than our ablest manufacturers, but German manufacturers have attained a higher average of efficiency than we have though they fall far below the best in our country.

Chicago meat packers waste nothing. They put the best fresh meats on the market and also the best fertilizers. Germans went down to Argentina and manufactured meat products at Buenos Aires long before that field interested Americans, but when Americans did go down there German industry could not compete with American efficiency. The leading petroleum refiners of the United States waste nothing and the Germans who entered the Russian Galician and Rumanian oil fields never did attain the results that can be seen in the great refineries around New York City. In the chemical industry again, the manufacture of commercial sodas from common salt is as highly developed at Syracuse, N. Y., as in Germany, where it is a leading specialty. Our great steel manufacturers display much greater efficiency than the Germans in turning out standard merchant steel bars, shapes, plates, wire, etc., and they are now turning their wastes into valuable by-products, such as cement from slag and chemicals from coke oven fumes and tar just as is done in Germany. One American company produces more steel than all Germany and America now produces more than half of the world's output.

Americans are efficient enough when they give their minds to it. What the Germans know about standardizing machinery and products they learned from us. The trouble is that too many Americans take the easiest way and are content with part of what they might make under a more scientific system. The lumber trade of this country, for instance, has wasted one-third of its raw material for a hundred years and is only beginning to find out how much can be made out of what was burned or dumped into rivers and lakes to kill fish. We have worn out farms, denuded forests, "gophered" mines and a hundred other monuments of carelessness and extravagance. If all producers studied the methods of our meat packers and petroleum refiners they would not have to fear the competition of Germany. All that Germans can teach us we can learn at home as far as the principles involved are concerned.

TEST OF THE GRADUATE.

Many Things Have to Be Learned After Leaving School.

[Christian Register:] The children and youths who get their marks and leave school and college with the rank they give them have a disillusion awaiting them when they see how little such rank counts afterward. The indifference of a man who wants fresh blood in his business to distinctions of which college men feel proudest, and the difficulty the fresh blood feels in transfusing the vigor it had into a new career, give a shock to presumption. A good deal has to be learned for which no preparation was made, a good deal has to be unlearned which tears a little skin with it. The fact pinches, though when it had the shape of elderly advice it seemed loose, that the real test of school training is not what happens during school or at the end, but what happens afterward. Not how one recites, but how one talks, tells the value of an English course, not how one goes through an examination paper, but how one gets along in a foreign city shows where one stands in a language, not what one has got out of school training, but what one is after he gets out of school is the real final test. But everything is not disillusionized. Whatever school work puts into brain and character, and the aptitudes and mental force it trains, will stay by and show what it has done to make boys and girls clean and honest men and women, able to take their minds into all life's vicissitudes and make it tell and achieve their purpose. In the long run the youths who really excel in school and college will excel afterward.

WAR DIPLOMAS PLEASE WOMEN.

Attest Labors of Wives, and Daughters of France.

Soil has Repaid Efforts of the Agriculturalists.

German War Prisoners Have Helped in Harvest.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

MORET-SUR-LOING (Seine et Marne, France) Nov. 25.—Among the war recompenses that will be handed down with greatest pride from generation to generation in French families are the diplomas now framed and hanging on the walls of many a farmhouse, attesting how the peasant women and farmers' wives, widows and daughters overcome war difficulties. The soil has well repaid the effort and, thanks to them, France is sure of another year of ample living.

The actual cash returns will equal a record year in time of peace though, excepting oats and potatoes, the yield was below the average.

This country of the Brie, which is generally second only to the Beauce in wheat production and first of all for oats, stands at the head for both, yet this crop was sown almost entirely by women, girls, and boys too young, or men too old to shoulder a rifle. There is a good example of what was done on a little farm just outside the shade of the forest of Fountainebleau at Villeiner, where in a modest farmhouse hang the framed diplomas accorded by the Syndicat Central des Agriculteurs de France (Central Union of French Farmers) in the names of Madame Beaujouan and her daughters, Raymonde aged 12 and Jeanne aged 14.

Beaujouan was mobilized while the grain was still standing in 1914; Madame Beaujouan and her daughters have harvested three crops from that farm since. The third is the best of the three for they "lacked the twist of the wrist," as Jeanne Beaujouan puts it, until they had had the experience of two crops.

PROUD OF THE CROP.

They are proud of the crop for the crop's sake, but they don't seem to be aware of the remarkable effort it required of them to do the fertilizing, plowing, harrowing, seeding and harvesting. When one talks to them about it, they tell him to go and see the crop that Mademoiselle Martha Bon Feve got from a seventy-acre farm at Serrigny-en-Bresse, which promises to constitute the record for girl farming during the war when the yield is finally measured. Like the soldiers of France, these heroines of the rear take no praise individually; there are so many, they say, who have done as well.

Red tape, the paralyzing force that even the reawakening of this epic period has not yet vanquished, withheld from the farms the aid the government wished to supply, excepting in rare cases, in the seeding of the farm.

German prisoners of war, volunteers from the camps of interned civilian Austrians and Germans, Annamites imported from Indo China, Kabyles brought from the mountains of Algeria, Sengalese from the West African Coast, a few territorials on leave, a good many Parisian school boys and last, but not least, the American self binder helped with the harvest; but with the exception of the self binder, the help was available only in scattered spots.

PORTER BINDS WHEAT.

A majestic German porter of a Riviera palace hotel, who in time of peace wore more gold braid than any general in the war, and one of the head waiters of the best known restaurants in Paris, bound wheat side by side on a farm in Beauce. Instead of the gold braided uniform, the porter with his fellow prisoners wore a suit of blue overalls with the letters I. C. (standing for Interned Civilian) on their backs to identify them as Teutons in case of a disposition to escape. They earned the equivalent of 45 cents a day and were clothed, lodged and fed by the farmer. Their fare was exactly the same as that of the farmers hiring them and of the soldiers guarding them. That they were satisfied appears from the fact that, out of several thousand, only three of them tried to get away.

The several thousand German soldiers employed in the harvest gave no trouble at all. To the great majority of them French farm life was a revelation and a satisfaction that found expression in frequent inquiries as to whether there was any prospect that they might be allowed to establish themselves in France after the war.

Not all of these improvised farm hands make good harvesters though they did the best they could.

After all it was the American self-binder that saved the harvest; without it much of the brave effort of the women of France would have been lost. Every machine was utilized to its utmost capacity. In communities where there were none and where the farmers could not afford to buy one, the commune procured a machine for the common use of the farmers in turn.

TRACTION PLOWS.

Traction plows aided only slightly in the preparation of the soil. It is the recognized necessity of the future, but the outlay required is too much for the small farmer. Further organization of syndicates for the purchase of machines in common is necessary.

The elephants of a well-known circus played the leading role in an experiment at Lavilledieu-du-Temple, near Castel Sarrazin, which the people of the region confidently expect will revolutionize farming. Hitched to a plow, these animals replaced the horses and oxen that were requisitioned by the army, and proved by the regularity of their gait to be far superior to either the horse or ox; each animal did the work of three yoke of oxen; whether they ate more than six times as much the reports do not tell. It is only the meridional imagination of the region, however, that contemplates the practical extension to France of the working elephant.

MORE ALLIED SHIPS ARE SUNK BY GERMANS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The French brigantine Indiana has been sunk, according to an announcement made by Lloyd's tonight. The agency also says that the Swedish steamer Douglas and the French schooner St. Joseph are reported to have been sunk.

A dispatch from Falmouth to Lloyd's says that the British steamer Briardene was sunk on Friday. The crew was landed at Falmouth by the steamer Luna.

The agency announces that the Japanese steamer Nagata Maru has been sunk.

The British steamer Briardene, of 2701 tons gross, sailed from New York on November 16 for London. She was formerly the Clan MacDonald and was owned in Newcastle.

There are six Japanese steamers named Nagata Maru and all are owned in Osaka. They range in size from 748 to 1163 gross tons.

The French brigantine Indiana, 178 tons, was owned in La Houle. The Swedish steamer Douglas was formerly the steamer Isabel and measured 1177 tons gross. She was owned in Lanskrona. There are five French schooners named St. Joseph, ranging in size from 85 to 434 tons.

CLOSE ON BUCHAREST; GERMANS TAKE OUTPOSTS

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Although the Rumanians apparently are offering desperate resistance west and south of Bucharest, the enemy forces are rapidly closing in on their capital, and even the most optimistic military critics here admit that the situation is extremely critical.

Advices from Berlin report today that the Danube army already is menacing fortresses around Bucharest, having reached the Argeschu River, five miles from the forts. The Germans and Bulgarians also have gained ground northwest of the capital by working through the passes southeast of Campulung. Still another enemy force is reported to have broken through and defeated the First Rumanian Army southwest of Piteshti, enabling it to capture General Staff officers.

The Rumanian and Russian communiques are silent regarding this last claim, although both admit that the Rumanians under pressure were compelled to retire slightly in this sector. Further west, in Wallachia, the Rumanians assert that adverse weather conditions hampered their operations.

It is generally believed here that Russian pressure on Von Falkenhayn's army through Transylvania has come too late to offset the rapid gains of the Germans, or affect materially the German plan of encircling Bucharest. The Russians' latest success in capturing a series of heights south of Kirlibaba gives them an entering wedge into Transylvania, and proves a most encouraging counter-move on the part of the allies.

That the Russian forces, in conjunction with Rumanians, are making progress in Dobrudja, is indicated by the latest communications, which report that the allies have regained part of the Tchernavoda bridge, compelling the opposing forces to retire southward from several heights.

ARTILLERY BATTLE ON BELGIAN FRONT.

[BY WIRELESS AND A. P.]

BERLIN, Dec. 2 (via Sayville.)—Only artillery engagements on the Franco-Belgian front are reported in today's official statement, which reads:

"Western front: On both banks of the Ancre and near St. Pierre Vaast wood (north of the Somme) and south of the Somme, near Chaulnes, heavy artillery duels prevailed for a time."

BOY KILLED.

Fatal Automobile Accident Ends in Crushing Skull of Eleven-year-old Marion Moss When Uncle's Auto Skids and Turns Turtle.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ONTARIO, Dec. 2.—"Two hurt and one killed" was the laconic message which whisked over the wires this afternoon at 3 o'clock from Puente, followed by the details of an automobile accident, which took place upon the Valley boulevard.

It seems that W. J. Trueblood, manager of the Ontario sewer farm, was driving with his sister, Mrs. Will Kendrick, and their 11-year-old nephew, Marion Moss, from Whittier, where they had been spending their Thanksgiving season, to Ontario. When two miles out from Puente it began raining. The Ford machine in which they were riding began to skid and in putting down the clamps, Trueblood, it is believed, used too much force.

The effect, whatever the cause, was to make the machine turn turtle. The nephew was seated on the hind seat and was found with his head crushed between the top of the seat and the hard ground. Trueblood is suffering from a concussion of the brain, while Mrs. Kendrick was painfully jolted.

The body was taken to Ontario and the injured were brought to their home. Trueblood, while dangerously hurt, will recover, according to the attending physician.

ASK CITY TO PROHIBIT THE CUTTING OF KELP

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA BARBARA, Dec. 2.—Following the announcement of the plan of the government to establish an experimental kelp cutting and treating station on the coast of this county and the announcement of two private concerns that they would place plants here if allowed, the Chamber of Commerce passed a resolution urging the Supervisors to prohibit cutting in front of the city.

The resolution mentions all that part of the coast between Goleta point and the Ventura county line. One of the private companies plans to cut outside this limit, but it is understood that one of the private plants and the government will ask permission to cut inside these points.

DEATHS OF VETERANS AT SOLDIERS' HOME.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SOLDIERS' HOME, Dec. 2.—Capt. P. T. Hagne, adjutant, and N. C. Clark, druggist at the Home, have just returned from a week's "absence with leave," which they enjoyed, together, in an auto trip to San Francisco. Condition of roads throughout the trip and fine weather combined, they say, to make their vacation agreeable.

DEATHS OF VETERANS.

Alfred Boothman, formerly of Co. F, Seventh Missouri Cavalry, a native of England, admitted from Los Angeles, in 1913, died November 29, aged 78.

Eleazer Robbins, formerly of Co. G, Unattached Maine Infantry, a native of Maine, admitted from Los Angeles in 1904, died November 29, aged 71.

Henry S. Grant, formerly of Co. F, Seventh Missouri Cavalry, a native of Vermont, admitted from San Diego, Cal., in 1909, died November 30, aged 81.

William Lack, formerly of Co. B, Fourth Illinois Cavalry, a native of Ohio, admitted from Nevada City, Cal., in 1915, died December 1, aged 79.

SANE SPEED LAW ENFORCEMENT ASKED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SANTA BARBARA, Dec. 2.—The Chamber of Commerce of this city has entered a vigorous protest against what is termed a "legal hold-up" in the rigid enforcement of the speed laws in this county. Officers are urged to be sane and sensible in their work of holding autoists in check and asked to make a division line between the reckless speeder and the safe driver whose car may be going a fraction over the speed limit, which has a low minimum in this county, and is as low as fifteen miles an hour in the city. The protest follows several arrests recently, which the chamber directors say were uncalled for. Motorists were held whose driving was considered very safe by the automobilists generally.

SANTA ANA LOTS CHANGE OWNERSHIP.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, Dec. 2.—Today L. D. Mercereau bought additional frontage on Sycamore street, between Fourth and Fifth. Three years ago he bought 100 feet at the southwest corner. Last week he paid $22,000 to the estates of Dina and H. A. Czarske for 100x125 feet on the east side of the street, and today he paid about the same amount to W. B. Hervery of Los Angeles for the corner, 100x125, just north of the Czarske purchase. Mercereau will wreck and carry away three pioneer buildings, one a blacksmith shop, another what was once a winery, and the other what was once a saloon. Mercereau will put up a brick block. The property is in the central part of the city.

DEATH CALLS ON A WALNUT GROWER.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, Dec. 2.—The funeral of W. G. Reichling, a well-known walnut grower of the West Whittier district, was held today under Masonic auspices from Masonic Hall. The ceremonies were in charge of Whittier Lodge, F.&A.M., and the Royal Arch and Commandery acted as escorts. The floral decorations of the hall were in charge of the Eastern Star. Reichling was a member of all of these orders. He had been a Whittier resident for the past eighteen years, and leaves a widow, two sons and two daughters.

OPPONENTS WIN OUT IN ELECTION.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ORANGE, Dec. 2.—The opponents of the Santiago storm water district effectively headed off the activities of that district by electing three of their number, H. A. Graber, Edward Moore and H. G. Moberly, as Trustees. The district was organized to do protective work on the edge of the Santiago Creek. Those who wanted their lands excluded, won by a vote of 105 to 70.

DEBATERS VICTORIOUS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, Dec. 2.—The first interscholastic debate of Whittier High for this year occurred at Alhambra last evening, Alhambra High being the opponents. The Whittier debaters defeated the Alhambra talkers, upholding the affirmative of the question, "Resolved, that England's present policy toward the United States commerce is unjustifiable." Whittier was represented by Eugene Warner and Lulu Purser, and Alhambra by James Abby and Katherine Wessler.

MEXICANS FIGHT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

VAN NUYS, Dec. 2.—About 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon Lenon Corare and Pallilo Pluiz adjourned to the new City Hall, now building, and engaged in an altercation. During the melee Pluiz pulled a gun and tried three times to fire the same at his antagonist. The only thing that saved Corare's life was the fact that the gun was loaded with 32 caliber automatic cartridges, and built for 32 caliber rim fire shells.

Officer Girard promptly appeared on the scene, disarmed Pluiz, separated the combatants and arrested the aggressor on the charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

ORANGE PICKING MONTH AHEAD OF FORMER YEARS

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

POMONA, Dec. 2.—Forty-five days in advance of former years, three out of seven of the co-operative growing and marketing associations had the citrus growers of the valley scatter their boxes in the orchards Friday afternoon and begin picking navel oranges today. The move establishes a precedent here. The harvest is fully a month ahead of any former record in recent years, and a month and a half ahead of last year, because the San Antonio Fruit Exchange did not advise picking in 1915 until January 15th, although a little fruit was gathered about five days earlier.

Today the two orange houses and the lemon house of the Pomona Fruit Growers' Association, the orange house of the Mutual Growers' Association, the orange house of the Pomona Packing Company of this city, the orange and lemon house of the LaVerne Orange Growers' Association, and the orange house of the Claremont Citrus Association were at work.

ACTIVITY CONTAGIOUS.

Both of the independent fruit houses in this city have already begun shipping navels, and H. E. Walcott, manager of the Pomona Fruit Growers' Association, figures that he will have a car on the way east by the middle of next week, and that his association will ship at least ten cars of oranges before Christmas. The lemon house is unusually active and the citrus harvest from one side of the valley to the other appears to be gathering considerable momentum.

Fruit which is being gathered now is absolutely ripe. Along the foothills the navels are much riper than on the flats, but nearly every tree has a certain per cent. of mature fruit upon it, and the growers figure that by removing such fruit as is marketable at this time they will give the green fruit an opportunity to develop and ripen more rapidly.

MILKING THEIR TREES.

Packers are quite generally agreed that more tonnage will develop upon a tree if it is "milked" of its ripe fruit as early as possible, and that is the main point for which the growers are striving—more fruit—heavier tonnage. The struggle of the growers in recent years has been to make two oranges grow where only one used to grow, or to get the big ones off the tree and give the little ones an opportunity to become big ones.

It is claimed that the activity of the independent shippers this winter has hastened the gathering of oranges to a considerable degree. The independents in this city have been picking fruit for two weeks, and today they were offering $1.75 per hundred weight for unculled fruit delivered at the packing-house. The prospect of spot cash in hand for Christmas money appealed strongly to the growers, and the co-operative growers caught the fever from the independents, so they prevailed upon the association packing-house managers to begin gathering and packing in order to drop a few cars into the eastern market for the Christmas trade. As a matter of fact the exchange managers do not advise early picking because, while a few early carloads sell at fancy prices in the East, too many carloads are said to meet a slumped price about holiday time. However, the harvest is on, and there will be only a slight lull in activities from now on.

TAKING NO CHANCES.

The cold up in the Porterville district recently is supposed to have hastened the harvest in the Southern California citrus belt. Many of the growers assert that they had rather have a bird in the hand than two in the tree on a cold night. No one disputes the fact that fruit which is packed and shipped ahead of a cold wave gives the grower a mighty secure and comfortable feeling. The fact that there was no rain in November made it appear that cold weather would likely come, but the fog and rain of the past few days changes the outlook. If a few good showers should come and soak up the ground the likelihood of extreme cold would be slight.

TO AVOID CAR SHORTAGE.

One reason why the growers are hastening the harvest this year is the likelihood of refrigerator car shortage. The managers are grabbing the cars while they can get them and loading them to the limit. In recent years, under the icing system, some of the shippers have only been putting six rows of orange and lemon boxes in each car, making a load of 396 boxes, but this year the big exchange has agreed to load every car seven rows wide with a total of 462 boxes. Practically all of the shippers have agreed to this arrangement and the result is that each car will carry an additional sixty-six boxes of fruit. The cold-air alleys between the rows of boxes will be eliminated, at least until further orders. This measure has been adopted as a means of co-operating with the railroads and perhaps staving off a car famine.

The fruit harvest here is estimated at about 8 per cent. above normal production this year. Oranges were never better, both as to quality and size. The cold nights of November caused them to color beautifully, and if the entire crop is moved to market at reasonably good prices the returns to this valley alone will probably be little less than $6,000,000.

Fatal.

SKIDDING AUTOS KILL ONE AND HURT THREE.

ONE man was killed, one other and two were painfully hurt, and dtwo were painfully hurt, all within an hour early last night as the result of three automobile accidents, all due to the wet pavements and skidding automobiles.

The dead man, believed by the police to have been William Harrison Taylor, address unknown, was struck by an automobile owned and driven by J. R. Taylor of No. 1327 Tamarind street, Hollywood. The accident occurred in front of the residence of Dr. E. M. Wardon of No. 2138 Sunset boulevard. The injured man was carried into the surgeon's home, but died before he could be treated.

Investigation made by police detectives showed that Mr. Taylor stepped from the curb in front of J. R. Taylor's automobile, and although the latter put on all his brakes, the wheels failed to hold on account of the wet pavement. The pedestrian was run down and his skull fractured. The body was taken to the Heath, Gamash and Edwards morgue.

Efforts made by the police to established the dead man's identity failed. From papers in his clothing they learned that his mother, Mrs. E. A. Wheelton, lives at No. 525 North Washington avenue, New Yory City. She will be notified. No address for the dead manwas found by the police, and no indications as to his business. The investigation will be continued today.

Shortly following the first accident an automobile driven by William H. Prince of No. 6127 Edmund street, and occupied by Charles W. Leonard of No. 971½ West Sixth street, skidded at Sunset boulevard and New High street and overturned. Mr. Leonard was thrown through the glass windshield and painfully cut and bruised about the head and face. His nose was fractured. Mr. Prince was only painfully bruised. The automobile was wrecked.

The last accident to be reported to the police station occurred at Sunset boulevard and Beaudry avenue, where an automobile driven by S. P. Griswold of Tropico, skidded and hurled Lewis Horowitz 17 years of age, a messenger boy, from his motorcycle. The boy was taken to the Receiving Hospital and treated for a fracture of the skull. According to Police Surgeon Hiller he may not live. The accident, according to the police, was unavoidable.

TRANSMISSION LINE TO IMPERIAL COUNTY

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

RIVERSIDE, Dec. 2.—The South-Sierras Power Company has contracted to build a high-tension transmission line from either Niland or El Centro, Imperial county, to Hanlon Heading, according to a statement made by A. B. West, vice-president of the company, here tonight. This is part of the power system being built to irrigate half-million acres in Imperial Valley by water taken from the Colorado River.

Mr. West said he expected service will be in operation April 1. The cost is estimated at $200,000.

RAINMAKER SUES.

Demands Ten Thousand Dollars For Filling Reservoir Which He Contracted to Do—Now Officials Say It Was Filled by Natural Causes.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 2.—Charles M. Hatfield, rainmaker, brought suit in the Superior Court in San Diego, today, to recover from the city $10,000 what he claims he earned by filling the Morena reservoir to overflowing, under a contract with the City Council.

Hatfield asserts that he agreed to fill the Morena reservoir between December 9, 1915 and December 20, 1916. He claims the proposition was formally accepted December 13 by the Council and that he installed a rain-precipitating plant the 1st of January and continued his operations until January 13, when the reservoir was filled.

The number thirteen plays an important part in the transaction. The contract was made December 13. It took thirteen days for Hatfield to fill the reservoir as he claims and the dam became full on January 13.

The officials refuse to pay the $10,000 for the reason, they assert, the reservoir was filled by natural causes and that the rainmaker had nothing to do with the matter.

In case Hatfield should be borne out by the courts in his contention, the question of his liability for the damage done by the floods last January may come up, say some of the officials.

COUNTERFEIT SILVER DOLLARS NUMEROUS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL CENTRO, Dec. 2.—Counterfeit silver dollars have been freely circulated in Calexico and Mexicali recently, and the discovery is causing no end of worry to local officials.

In the last two days a large number of the bogus coins have made their appearance along the border.

Calexico bankers declare the counterfeits to be the best imitations of the genuine coin that they have seen.

A noticeable percentage of silver is contained in the counterfeits, which fact has enabled their extensive circulation, especially among the Mexicans. The counterfeits bear the date 1879 and the mark of the San Francisco mint.

TOLL OF AUTO KEEPS ON WITHOUT END.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, Dec. 2.—While riding his motorcycle last night between Villa Park and Orange, Fred Heitschusen collided with the rear end of a wagon driven by a Japanese rancher. The motorcyclist was taken to the Anaheim Sanatorium. He has a broken jaw and possibly a fracture at the base of the skull. He may die.

At about the same hour last night, Martin Danner, aged 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee J. Danner of Orange, was badly injured when he was run over by a machine driven by W. D. Foster of Orange. The boy was at the edge of the road fixing a motor wheel when he was hit. No bones were broken, but he may have internal injuries.

WOMAN LOST ON DESERT IS DYING

Party Leaves El Centro, Overtaken by Storm.

Exhausted Through Exposure and Lack of Food.

Searching Crew at Last Comes Upon Sufferers.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ONTARIO, Dec. 2.—Lost for four days in the desert stretches of the Imperial Valley without food or water, after they could not find their way in a terrific sandstorm Wednesday, while en route to this city to spend Thanksgiving, Mrs. Frank J. Manning of Brawley is believed dying; Mrs. W. H. Parmon, No. 317 North Palm avenue, Ontrio, is in a serious condition as a result of the exposure and Melvin Schultz, Mrs. Manning's son, is in a state of collapse following their rescue late this afternoon, according to word received by relatives here.

The party left El Centro by automobile early Wednesday morning, planning to join Mrs. Schultz, who is a guest at the home of her father, W. H. Parmon, here, for Thanksgiving, and Mrs. Manning intending to go on to Pasadena to visit a daughter, Miss May Manning.

When the party failed to arrive Thursday relatives here became uneasy and telephoned relatives at El Centro. Searching parties have been out ever since and only found the motor party this afternoon.

FACT AND COMMENT.

The Second-street tunnel project, many times agitated by property owners and taxpayers on both sides of Bunker Hill and as many times delayed, is once more about to be presented for official adoption by the City Council of Los Angeles. Representative citizens, including prominent business men, members of civic and commercial organizations, property holders and individuals whose interest is merely that of seeing Los Angeles provided with traffic and travel arteries in keeping with a city of its size and importance, will be at the City Hall on Tuesday morning to urge upon the Council the necessity for immediate and definite action on the tunnel enterprise.

On hand, also, will be the kickers, chronic and otherwise, who have sought and are seeking to block the hill outlet, foolishly persisting in combatting an improvement that cannot but benefit them in a measure all out of proportion to the amount they will be asked to pay toward the project and which in the case of many is the only thing that can possibly prevent a disastrous depreciation in the value of their properties. With them in spirit, if not in person, will be their friends, the real estate speculators, who fear that even the belated creation of an outlet by which West and Northwest Los Angeles and its vast outlying territory can get directly into the principal downtown business streets will interfere with carefully-laid plans for building up new business centers elsewhere.

It will be for the City Council to decide whether the ordinance of intention for the tunnel project shall at last, after a decade or more of inexcusable delay, be passed and allowed to go to legal protest. The legal requirements in such improvement proceedings have all been fully complied with by the proponents of the plan and, with an overwhelming sentiment for the tunnel clearly revealed by those who will be actually called upon to pay for it, there would seem to be nothing else for the City Council to do but adopt the ordinance. All the indications are that this will be done, several of the members having frankly expressed themselves as in favor of disposing once and for all of the intolerable situation forced upon downtown Los Angeles and a fourth of the residence area of the city by the traffic-blocking barrier of Bunker Hill, and Mayor Woodman having repeatedly called atention to the necessity for action in the same connection.

Fair to All.

The second-street tunnel proponents have shown a degree of fairness in their proceedings that of itself commends their proposition to the favorable consideration of the City Council. Profiting by the experience of the advocates of various tunnel and open-cut projects in past years, the Second-street people themselves asked that their assessment district should not overlap with any that might reasonably be outlined for similar bores at First, Fourth and Fifth streets. They have recognized the fact that outlets through the hill at other points are necessary and in carrying out their own plan are avoiding proceedings calculated to interfere with any other project.

Time after time in years gone by the conflict of interests between those wanting a bore at Second street and those seeking an outlet at First has resulted in both projects being held up. One of the favorite methods employed by those interested in keeping Bunker Hill a barrier to ingress to and egress from the established business district has been the stirring up of controversy between the First and Second-street-tunnel crowds. Whenever either the First-street or Second-street-tunnel advocates have appeared to have the ascendency and to have a chance of getting their plans adopted by the Council, "sympathetic" persons with outside interests have always been ready to lend a helping hand to the other side or to lead in the fight against "iniquitous special assessments." There have been instances in which attorneys retained by such outsiders have actually thrust themselves into the proceedings.

There is evidence that under-cover opposition is now being brought to bear in an effort to halt the Second-street-tunnel project still longer. An attempt will undoubtedly be made to mix up the whole proceedings by further "discussion." Selfish interests will seek to have the thing dragged through an endless series of hearings to a final resting-place in one of the numerous municipal pigeonholes. This effort, of course, is hardly likely to be made in the open, but it will undeniably be made.

No Argument Needed.

There is no possible argument against the Second-street tunnel as now proposed. It is not a question as to whether it would be as serviceable as some other tunnel or open cut that might be built. Its proponents want it and are willing to pay for it. It will in itself be a tremendous factor in the upbuilding of the enormous residential area west of Bunker Hill and will give new stability to property values on Hill street, Broadway, Spring and Main streets. It will relieve the almost hopeless traffic congestion at Seventh and Broadway by letting much of the travel that is now forced into the former thoroughfare into the business district at a point far to the north of the present maelstrom.

It is unthinkable that the City Council as an intelligent body of thinking beings should put any obstacle in the way of a project that will shorten the traveling distance to the downtown shopping district for practically every resident of Los Angeles west of Figueroa and north of Sixth street. The Second-street tunnel will be worth untold millions to the city of Los Angeles. Were the barrier between the business district and the west and northwest residence districts a river instead of a hill, the city would long ago have bridged it on every cross-street. There is just as much reason why the city as a whole should build tunnels through the hill that cuts its streets in two. The city, however, is not being asked to pay for the Second-street tunnel. This $800,000 project is to be paid for by those who will most directly benefit by it and if they want it bad enough to pay for it, they are certainly entitled to have it.

SITE ROUNDED OUT.

Olive-street Lot Leased by Projectors of New Dry Goods Store.

The final step in the negotiations for the erection of the new home of the Coulter Dry Goods store at the southwest corner of Seventh and Olive streets, was taken during the past week, when the West Seventh Street Development Company closed a ninety-nine-year ground lease on a lot of forty-five feet front by 165 feet in depth on the west side of Olive, 111 feet south of Seventh. The property is at Nos. 711 and 713 South Olive and is owned by William Stewart Young and Adele Nichols Young. It is understood that a total rental consideration of $1,500,000 will be paid for its use during the century term.

The deal was handled by Shirley C. Ward and W. P. Jeffries, president and secretary, respectively, of the West Seventh Street Development Company and leaders in the new West Seventh-street business movement. The ground secured will constitute a part of the large site to be covered by the new dry goods establishment.

BIG HOTEL LEASED.

H. Jerome Toy & Co., hotel brokers of this city, report having closed a deal whereby the St. James Hotel in San Diego will come under the management of E. A. Cole, former lessee and proprietor of the Alhambra Hotel, Los Angeles. The lease calls for a seven-year term at a given total rental of $130,200, the furniture and furnishings being also transferred. The St. James Hotel is a twelve-story concrete structure of 150 rooms.

FLATS SPRINGING UP ALL OVER THE CITY.

Big Duplex House Court Begun in Westlake District—Novel Project for Normandie Avenue. Hollywood Apartments to Have Illuminated Front.

Perspective drawings of three attractive new rental properties now rising in different parts of the city are reproduced on this page.

The largest of the three, a house court at the southeast corner of Alvarado and Maryland streets, will represent a given total investment, with its site, of $80,000, and will stand in the heart of the Westlake district, being within a block of Westlake Park. The project calls for the erection of eight plaster-finished buildings of the "duplex" type, each containing two five-room flats. The living and dining-rooms will be on the ground floor and the bedrooms and baths on the second story in each building. The J. A. Schwarz Construction Company designed and is building the group. The site, which has a frontage of 150 feet on Alvarado by 155 feet on Maryland, was recently purchased by E. C. Jessurun, the owner and projector, through the agency of H. R. Keils, with the Wright-Callender-Andrews Company.

A novel improvement is that being erected by Frank W. Murphy on the west side of Normandie avenue between Eighth and Ninth streets, consisting of a group of three flats of the English cottage type of architecture. The court was planned by Edward Cray Taylor, while the firm of Goodman, Phillips & Joseph acted as agents in the purchase of the site and the financing of the project. The buildings are to be of brick and plaster exterior. Each apartment will have its own outside entrance opening into a formal garden.

The store and apartment building pictured in the layout will cost approximately $20,000 and is one of a number of improvements contemplated by the owner, H. C. Hollins, in the same block at Santa Monica boulevard and Gower street. The plans of Dodd & Richards, the architects, call for six stores on the first story and nineteen apartments on the second. The owner plans to illuminate the street in front of the building with ornamental lights.

Among other income improvements for which contracts have just been let in Los Angeles may be mentioned the following: House court of eight buildings for Arthur W. Smith at No. 1800 North Winona avenue; twenty-room flat for A. L. Prouse, No. 901 West Forty-first drive; eighteen-room flat for George P. Overdon, Bronson avenue north of Hollywood boulevard; sixteen-room flat for Frank C. Bowman, No. 1306 West Santa Barbara avenue; sixteen-room flat for C. F. Working, No. 855 West Forty-first street; fourteen-room flat for D. H. Mauerhan, Edgemont avenue near Hollywood boulevard; twelve-room flat for Mrs. Thekla Meierhoff, Kays street near Fountain avenue; ten-room flat for Mrs. A. J. Lechler, Western avenue and Harold way.

GROUND IS LEASED.

An important realty transaction of the past week was the closing of a ninety-nine-year ground lease covering 100 feet of frontage by 165 feet in depth on the west side of Olive street, 115 feet north of Ninth street. Annie M. Forthman was the lessor and Edwin J. Bowes, Jr., the lessee. The total amount of rental involved is given by Mr. Bowes at $1,125,000. The lease, it is understood, provides that a structure to cost not less than $25,000 shall be erected on the site within five years.

FORM PARTNERSHIP.

E. C. Dieter and S. F. Johnson have formed a partnership under the firm name of Dieter & Johnson, and are located in an office at No. 703 South Alvarado street. The firm will conduct a rental, loan, insurance and general real estate business.

HOTEL PROJECTED.

Culver City to Have Sixty-room Hostelry of Fireproof Construction—Builder Plans Twenty-five Bungalows at Same Place.

Culver City is to have a new fireproof hotel added to the long list of important buildings started within its confines during the present year. The hostelry, a sixty-room structure of modern appointment, is to stand on a lot of irregular shape fronting on Washington boulevard, Putnam boulevard and Main street, and will cost $30,000. W. C. Pennell of this city is the architect and W. S. and H. S. Heineman have the contract. The building will be started at once and is to be completed and ready for occupancy next February. Mrs. Ella DeWitte, lessee for the past five years of the Comstock Apartments, this city, has secured a five-year lease on the property.

Another notable enterprise now shaping in the "Short Line" town is that of Harry Standley, a builder and contractor, who contemplates the immediate erection of twenty-five bungalows. Ground will be broken this week for three of these dwellings which will be sightly and modern. Work is now proceeding on new buildings for the New York Motion Picture Corporation, which is declared to have spent approximately $500,000 to date on its great Culver City plant.

IN LA FAYETTE SQUARE.

Local Builder Completing Two Fine Homes in West Side Tract.

Two handsome new homes, built by Charles D. Wagner, contractor and designer, are now nearing completion in La Fayette Square. One, a residence for himself at No. 1685 Victoria drive, is situated on a lot 110x150 feet in size. The house has a plaster exterior and tile roof and contains fourteen rooms with five baths. The interior decorating is in oil on canvas, the wood finish being in mahogany and old ivory.

The other place is at No. 1703 Virginia road and is being built for C. B. McCoy, a local oil man. The residence contains fifteen rooms and four baths. A feature of the home is a large conservatory on the first floor. The grounds, which are 178x150 feet in size, are being attractively planted.

BUSINESS LEASES.

R.T. Merchant, of the business leasing department of the Wright-Callender-Andrews Company, reports the following recent leases in the downtown business section: For E. E. Crandall to Frank Love, three-story and basement loft building at Nos. 528-530 South Los Angeles street, five years, at $435 a month; for H. J. Kramer to Leslie R. Saunders, premises at No. 932 South Grand avenue, formerly occupied by Kramer Dancing Academy, three years, at $300 a month, room to be used by lessee as dancing school; for R. H. Raphael Company to Samuel Pawder, store at No. 645 South Main street, five years, at $250 a month, as site for meat market.

FOR SALE—GRAND AVE. THE CENTER.
Remember, I warned you months ago to keep your eyes on Grand ave. Some intending buyers of inside property now know they have waited too long. Fair warning. You can buy that 75-foot on Grand close to Pico, at a price this week that will not touch it next week. I am going to sell one piece out of ten and only on account of pressing need of money. No one who has as much sense as geese would sell Grand ave. property at this time, unless forced to sacrifice. Buyer can soon double his money. With nearly $8,000,000 of improvements in sight in and near Los Angeles, there will be the greatest "wake up" since 1887 boom. Let me make you some money. See me before too late. ARTHUR NEWTON, 532 Flower.

FOR SALE—

SIMPLY—CROWN HILL.

Half a mile from Broadway
Quarter mile from Seventh and Flower
420 feet above the sea
Best renting district in Los Angeles

The ordinance for the opening of Fifth street, from Grand avenue to Boylston street, is being prepared and will soon be before the Council. This improvement, one of the MOST IMPORTANT ever proposed for this section of the city, should go through with a rush. It will IMMENSELY benefit every piece of property within a quarter of a mile of it, all the way from Flower to Witmer streets. And incidentally raise every price.

Just grasp what it will mean for CROWN HILL and vicinity. The idea is to tunnel under the old Normal School site and then run straight to Fifth and Boylston, without a jog or turn, thus opening Fifth all the way from Broadway to Witmer, practically LEVEL ALL THE WAY. It will be the MOST DIRECT, air-line route from downtown to all the Westlake, Wilshire and Hollywood districts.

It will have NO CAR LINE for over three-quarters of a mile, from Olive to Witmer, the ONLY trackless street in the city leading from downtown to the Westlake and Wilshire districts.

It will be the splendid connecting link at Beaudry or Boylston between the West Sixth street boulevard and downtown, being only about 200 feet north of Sixth at this point.

In short, West Fifth will UNQUESTIONABLY become the MOST POPULAR and HEAVILY TRAVELED thoroughfare running west from the business district. And it runs right through CROWN HILL for over half a mile. What will it do for CROWN HILL values?

The SUBWAY will run just ONE BLOCK NORTH of Fifth, right through CROWN HILL. What will it do for CROWN HILL values?

The ordinance for the SECOND STREET TUNNEL is to be introduced next Tuesday. Work should start very soon. What will it do for CROWN HILL values?

The THIRD STREET TUNNEL is to be modernized right away. What will it do for CROWN HILL values?

There is a movement now on foot to pave Boylston (93⅓ feet wide,) from Crown Hill to Sixth; Beaudry (80 feet wide,) from Third to Fifth; Fourth, from Boylston to Beaudry, and other streets in that vicinity. What will this boulevard system do for CROWN HILL values?

The department store activity will stretch out to Seventh and Figueroa soon—and that's just about 1000 feet from CROWN HILL. What will it do for CROWN HILL values?

Things may be a bit quiet in some places, but NOT on CROWN HILL. More BIG public improvements going on there than anywhere else in Los Angeles. What will they ALL PUT TOGETHER do for CROWN HILL values? Double them, and in a few years more, double them AGAIN.

Better wake up and begin investigating before others get the cream of the bargains on CROWN HILL—the best investment at today's prices in ALL Los Angeles, and the finest place for high-class apartments and flats, with its glorious altitude, air and views, easy approach from FOUR sides, and BEST RENTING RECORD in this city.

Of course, if you don't like cream, but prefer plain milk, why just keep on waiting and wondering whether "the bottom has been reached yet." That's the way most investors do, anyway. They're so afraid they'll get in too early that they always get in too late. Every month you delay now you are losing some of the cream on CROWN HILL.

But there's one $500 you'll never make on CROWN HILL, no matter how spry you are now. That lot, 50x120, on Fourth, just east of Boylston, went up $500 December 1st, as I announced it would. It's going up $500 more December 15, and further yet in January. It's still the best bargain on CROWN HILL. Do you want it NOW, or will you wait until ALL the cream is removed?

FOR SALE—
SUGAR BEET LANDS.
SPRECKELS SUGAR COMPANY HAS LOCATED ITS $2,000,000 SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY BEET SUGAR FACTORY AT MANTECA.

Construction is already under way, and will be rushed through to completion in time to work up the 1917 beet crop. You will, of course, understand that the oldest and largest sugar company on the Pacific Coast located its new plant at MANTECA only after the fullest investigation of all possibilities. Its location here is the most absolute proof of the excellence of our soil, and the efficiency of our irrigation system. It is the biggest thing in the two great valleys, and is fast changing Manteca from a small town to a big one.

Our farm lands are still absurdly low. I hold under contract made before the factory was located, several tracts of our very best farm lands at the old prices.

640 acres very best deep rich sandy loam. There is not a better section of land for sugar beets, alfalfa, tomatoes, or general truck farming, in the whole San Joaquin Valley, at any price, and the price is only $125 per acre. You can pay one-fourth cash, and have about your own time on the balance at 6 per cent. One crop of sugar beets should pay the entire purchase price of this land, if properly handled. 180 acres of near by land, not so good, averaged more than 17 tons 18 per cent. beets the past season.

160 acres medium loam near electric railway and beet dump. Especially suited to beet culture, or for alfalfa and general farming. Has been producing 20 to 30 sacks barley per acre. No improvements. Price $140 per acre. One-third cash, balance about to suit at 6 per cent.

200 acres two miles from Manteca, on two county roads. Deep rich sandy loam. 20 acres in alfalfa. 130 acres were in sugar beets the past season. There is a large eight-room old-fashioned house in good condition, a good barn and fine shade trees. Price $150 per acre, half cash, balance your own time at 6 per cent. Worth at least $200 per acre.

All these properties are in the South San Joaquin Irrigation District, the most efficient gravity system in California.

My contracts only have a short time to run, so you must get busy, or miss the opportunity of a lifetime. Better not stop to write, but come at once. But if you do write, will answer promptly with full information. But come and come quick.

W. J. WOODWARD, Manteca, Cal.

FOR SALE—

WE INVITE COMPARISON

OF OUR

NORTH WHITTIER HEIGHTS

CITRUS, AVOCADO AND WALNUT LAND SUBDIVISION.

WITH ANY PROPERTY AND DISTRICT IN THE STATE.

In the essential conditions of richness of soils, equable climate, dependable water conditions and desirability for a ranch home—suburban to Los Angeles—we claim the North Whittier Heights subdivision to be the peer of any property now being offered on the market in California.

It is being sold in unplanted tracts of 5 to 100 acres in size or in tracts planted to one, two and three-year-old orchards, and on easy terms where desired. We will also contract to plant or care for orchards for those who wish to have us do so.

We shall be pleased to take prospective investors out by auto to see our property and district at any time by appointment or to furnish full information and descriptive folder on request. See Russell or Maple with

FOR SALE—
WHY NOT BUY DIRECT FROM THE OWNERS and save from 20 to 30 per cent., which is always added to any subdivision for commissions, expenses, etc., where it is being sold by a realty corporation. Facts and figures are what you want when you are making an investment. We have had sugar beets this season yielding 26 tons per acre and testing 18 per cent. sugar, and our average test for several years past has been 20 per cent., or better, and all grown WITHOUT IRRIGATION. We can furnish you with some choice Lima bean land at very low prices, this also requires no irrigation. For alfalfa, fruits, garden truck, etc., we have FLOWING ARTESIAN WELLS, some of them flowing over 100 miner's inches; think what it means, NO PUMPING or having to BUY WATER FROM A MUNICIPALITY. Our property has the endorsement of all local bankers, Board of Trade and [illegible] of the American Beet Sugar Company. Write for maps, booklet, price list, etc.
THE PATTERSON RANCH COMPANY, SALES DEPARTMENT, OXNARD, CAL.

Woman's Party Members Here Adopt Resolution Deploring Loss of the Late Inez Milholland Boissevain, Leader in Cause of Suffrage.

The local members of the National Woman's Party, meeting at the Friday Morning Club yesterday, simultaneously with the funeral of Inez Milholland Boissevain in New York, adopted the following resolution:

Every member in the ranks of the National Woman's Party and the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage, for which the late beloved Inez Milholland Boissevain so nobly fought and died, deplores her passing, and no words can convey the loss that has been suffered by the cause of national woman suffrage, to which she gave her last effort.

The Southern California committee of the above organizations extends its deepest sympathy to her relatives in this, their great trial.

TALE OF PIGS' TAILS.

Miss Edith Brubaker, The California Story-Telling Girl, Explains Why She Wrote her New Book for Children. 'Twas to Keep Promise.

Miss Edith Brubaker, known all over the United States as the "California Story-telling Girl," is back in Los Angeles, after a tour of the States, in which she told stories to little folks, members of old people's homes, etc., and everywhere boosted for the San Diego exposition, inviting all the people to come to California.

WEAKNESS IN NEW ORLEANS SHOWN BY SALES.

Ten-point Drop Comes Immediately After the Opening. Louisiana Planter Said to Have Sold His Crop at Big Advance Over Last Season.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 2.—Price changes in cotton were not important today. Liverpool, as usual, was closed for the Saturday and trade was devoted chiefly to evening up over the week-end. About the only trading feature of note was the weakness in New Orleans, where prices dropped about 10 points immediately after the opening. Initial quotations presented an irregular range with 6 points higher on December, but generally 4 to 8 points lower on the more active months. The market moved within limits of 12 to 14 points and the close was steady, 3 to 5 points net lower. Crop estimates continue to pile in. The average guess of 123 members of the Memphis Cotton Exchange calls for a yield of 11,111,065 bales. The Texas Traveler of S. M. Weld & Co. estimates the amount of cotton ginned in Texas to date at near 3,400,000 bales and in Oklahoma at 740,000. Spot advices indicate that holders are refusing to meet the decline. It is thought, however, that the South will be more than satisfied with present prices. A story in circulation on the Cotton Exchange today was that a Louisiana planter sold his crop of the present season together with those of 1914 and 1915 on the basis of an average of 20 cents per pound.

Wholesale Building Operations Under Way in Thriving Suburb.

Thomas D. Campbell & Co. report through John S. Daggett, manager of the Torrance department, the sale of twenty lots in the residence section of Torrance, the Packard Company of Pasadena being the purchaser. The consideration is given at $16,000.

Ten houses are to be built by the Packard Company at once on as many lots on Arlington avenue. The other lots are to be improved with a bungalow court of twenty-two dwellings to cost about $25,000. This court will front on the lower end of Gramercy avenue, which is to be closed and extensively parked with an eight-foot sidewalk down the center.

The Packard Company completed a bungalow court of fourteen houses in Torrance three months ago. The new development is the beginning of extensive building operations in the industrial suburb, 200 houses in all being in contemplation.

BUYS VALLEY TRACT.

A fifteen-acre tract on the boulevard near Van Nuys, was sold by the Janss Investment Company during the past week to George E. Danielian, a rug merchant of Chicago, the consideration being given at $12,000. The property is improved with a five-room bungalow. Five acres is in bearing fruit trees, and the rest is to be devoted to fruit, melons and chicken raising by the new owner. Sales at Fruitland Acres, the company's San Fernando Valley subdivision, are reported as follows: Five acres to Earl M. Willet, $1500; five acres to S. LeDoux, $2000, and five acres to M. Kunz, $1500.

PACIFIC ELECTRIC CARS USE NEW LOOPS TODAY.

The loops in the new Pacific Electric terminal at Sixth and Main streets will be put into use today, and this will be followed, on completion of the interlocking and signal installation, by the occupancy of the stub tracks east of Los Angeles street.

This means that the company will be able to work into the new arrangement gradually instead of opening up the whole terminal at once. New time-tables are being prepared for the lines which will use the loops, cutting down terminal time in Los Angeles to the minimum to prevent delays on the loops.

HOW THEY'LL RUN.

The eastbound loop track will be used only by Pasadena Short Line and Oak Knoll Line trains. These will go south on Main street and north on San Pedro street. Passengers for Pasadena may board cars at any point from First and Main streets south without extra fare. The westbound loop track will be used by Alhambra, Sierra Madre, Sierra Vista, Redondo Beach, Torrance, Whittier and La Habra lines. Passengers inbound on the Sierra Madre, Alhambra and Sierra Vista cars may alight in the terminal or may ride through to any point on Main street as far as First street without extra fare. The Glendale, Burbank, Annandale and Mt. Lowe lines will enter and leave from Main street as heretofore.

HEAVY COST.

Other cars now operating on the Los Angeles-street surface tracks in the daytime will remain there both day and night, and this terminal will be kept open until the stub tracks on the elevated are completed, at which time the surface tracks will be abandoned and all service will be placed on the elevated.

The Pacific Electric elevated tracks will cost, when completed, more than $350,000. Incoming and outgoing passengers will be segregated and hundreds of trains a day will be taken off of Main street.

The elevated tracks were built originally to eliminate Main-street congestion, but following the beginning of construction enough jitney busses have been allowed on Main street to make its conditions worse now than they were before the construction of this terminal began. The result is that the Pacific Electric has been forced to spend $350,000 for the benefit of the jitney drivers.

DELTA LAND CASES TO FEDERAL COURT.

EIGHTY-FOUR ALLIED ACTIONS ORDERED TRANSFERRED.

Defendants, Sued by Ranchmen Who Would Reject Lands They Say They Got in Utah, Secure Change on Ground of Diversity of Citizenship.

On the ground of diversity of citizenship a motion to transfer to the Federal Court for trial the eighty-four cases brought by ranchmen against the Delta Land and Water Company, the Western Securities Company, W. I. Moody, president of the water company, and Lloyd Sigler, president of the securities company, has been filed in the court of the presiding judge by the defendants, and granted.

The action is to rescind contracts for the alleged sales of land in Milford Valley, Utah, and for damages, the amount in controversy totaling $1,000,000. The Delta Land and Water Company is a Nevada corporation. The Western Securities Company was organized in Utah for the purpose of selling the holdings of the water company. The settlers were found in Imperial Valley, San Diego, San Fernando Valley, San Joaquin Valley and other parts of the State and induced, it is alleged, to mortgage their California ranches to purchase land and water stock in Milford Valley.

It looked like a fine proposition, but the settlers say they found the land a desert, with an inadequate supply of water. They retained to bring suit Attorney Dudley W. Robinson, who did not protest very hard against the transfer of the trial to the Federal Court. The defendants are represented by Story and Stegmeyer of Salt Lake and Hunsaker and Britt.

A recent attempt to take the deposition of Arthur P. Moran, agent of the Delta company and secretary of the securities company, because he expects to leave the country, failed as he refused, on the advice of counsel, to answer practically every question asked.

POST-GRADUATE WORK.

Southwestern University Opens New Course in Business, Accounts and Finance for Commercial Teachers, and More than Thirty Enroll.

Southwestern University yesterday announced through its secretary, J. J. Schumacher, that a special postgraduate commercial teachers' course would be started in the school of commerce, accounts and finance during the present semester.

This course has been specially requested by the High School Commercial Teachers' Association of Los Angeles, and will cover the more specialized questions of commerce, industry and finance from the most modern as well as the pedagogic point of view.

The course will include the following topics: Tendencies of modern business, office organization for efficiency, fundamental philosophy of book-keeping, money and banking, forms and statements, marketing the product, vocational opportunities for the commercial graduate, business correspondence, the fundamental principles of investment, how a business is financed, the blue sky law, the income tax, the railroad commission and its influence on modern business methods, office appliances and systems of filing, graphic methods for presenting facts, training for efficiency, why business men fail, the increasing cost of living, the Torrens land law, the Federal reserve bank, telephone and switchboard service, business success, what every commercial graduate should know.

There will be an enrollment of more than thirty commercial teachers in this class, which will meet for the first time on next Thursday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the lecture-room of Southwestern University, Wilcox Building.

The course will be given by Reynold E. Blight, C.P.A., formerly member of the Los Angeles City Board of Education, now vice-president of the California State Board of Accountancy, and lecturer on accountancy at Southwestern University.

NORTH WILSHIRE SALES.

The McCarthy Company reports having sold to N. Bentz, a Santa Barbara capitalist, two lots on the north side of Elmwood avenue, between Norton avenue and Van Ness avenue, and to U. G. Ramey a lot on the north side of Elmwood avenue, between Wilton place and Van Ness avenue, both sites being in the Wilton Heights tract. The last named purchaser will build a bungalow on his site. The same company has sold a bungalow at No. 1448 West Fifty-first street to H. Sweringer and a bungalow at No. 845 West Seventy-third street to B. Barn.

DAMAGE SUIT UNIQUE.

Action Brought Against the County Supervisors by Woman Who Fell in Storm Drain is First of Sort Not Connected With Public Highways.

The first damage suit ever brought in the local courts against Supervisors and not connected with the highways, will be tried by a jury in Judge Monroe's court Thursday. It is an action brought by Mrs. Matilda Blount against Supervisors Pridham, Norton and Hinshaw of the present board, and Manning and Butler of a former board. The death of Mr. Butler eliminates him as a defendant. Damages are asked in the sum of $20,000 for injuries Mrs. Blount suffered when she fell into an open storm drain at the rear of the residence of W. A. Robertson, No. 88 Bonnie street, Pasadena, in January, 1914.

It is alleged the Supervisors were negligent in failing to provide a railing along the line of the storm drain, to keep pedestrians from walking into it. The defendants, represented by Deputy County Counsel Reppy, contend that the protection should have been provided by the property owner.

At the time of the accident Mrs. Blount was going to the store for a bottle of milk. Darkness had fallen and she did not see the open drain. Her wrists were fractured by the fall and three ribs fractured, and she was in a hospital five or six weeks.

Revised.

CLAIM PULLEN WAS SECOND.

Correction in Score Shows Him Runner-up.

Rush at Finish Caused a Big Mix in Figures.

Statement is Made by an Official Scorer.

BY G. H. SEWARD,

President of the Business Equipment Sales Company, Inc., Official Scorers on the Dalton Adding Machines.

Pullen should be given second place in last Thursday's race at Ascot Park. He notified the race management yesterday that Pullen's contention of Friday was substantiated by our operator, Nicholas A. Kessler, who operated the Dalton machine on which Pullen's laps were recorded. Kessler's affidavit was signed yesterday, and states that he scored 150 laps, that he did not see Pullen flagged at 150 laps with any flag whatever, but did see him flagged with the final checkered flag at the end of the one hundred and fifty-first lap. He further deposes that he watched Pullen exclusively from the nineteenth lap. At the end of the one hundred and forty-ninth lap Cooper, who was credited in first reports of the race as finishing second, was making slower speed than previously, due to being out of gasoline. During the one hundred and fiftieth lap Pullen, who was only half a lap behind Cooper at the one hundred and forty-ninth lap, passed his rival and finished his one hundred and fiftieth lap before Cooper had finished his final lap.

There was an error made in flagging or in giving signals to flag, due to the close finish of the cars. This confusion arose from the unusual condition of Pullen performing the feat of completing his one hundred and forty-ninth lap and making his final lap while Cooper was coasting in.

After we had finished scoring 150 laps for Pullen, he made another lap, as he usually does for safety.

It is to be regretted that scoring and timing of auto races has not been brought to that degree of perfection which will prevent disputes of this character. No driver should be compelled to file a protest after he has raced 150 miles at an average speed of seventy miles an hour, risking life and limb.

I admired the gentlemanly manner in which Pullen took up the matter with the officials, and I am glad to be in a position to present Kessler's affidavit, which seems to sustain his contention.

Both Timer Pendleton and myself are absolutely impartial and desirous of seeing that the records are correct in every particular.

JAIL INITIATION FRIGHTENS YOUTHS.

FRATERNITY PERPETRATES A HOAX ON TYROS.

In League with "Brothers" the Officials Put Boys Through the Prison Routine to Tame Them so Realistically that They Believe Jest is Serious.

What appeared to three youths as a joke when arrested, became very serious when they taken to the County Jail and there put through prison routine. Dazed by having their finger-prints, pictures and measurements taken and then being placed in cells after a scrubbing and confinement in the dungeon, they were calling for outside assistance when finally released to their friends, members of the Phi Chi Fraternity of the University of Southern California, late in the evening.

D. A. Gallant, Virgil Wescott and Charles Chaplin (not the actor,) were lured by a friend to walk near the jail, where they were taken into custody by Deputy Sheriffs Cochran, Fee, Henry and Anderson. Charged with a serious offense, they were then taken before Undersheriff White, who grilled them severely and ordered their incarceration.

Until the jail doors clanked after them, they thought it a joke. When they were deprived of their possessions, weighed and measured, then taken into the Bertillon room, where Identification Expert Bailey "mugged" and put them through the other routine, they became very serious. From here they were sent to their cells and ordered to prepare for a bath and their prison clothing.

Objecting to this, they were sent to the dungeon and kept there about half an hour and after their release, agreed without a bit of objection to taking a large dose of castor oil, administered by a dusky "trusty," who assured them it was all a part of "de rules."

About this time the young men began to inquire about bail and getting in touch with their parents, or other interested relatives and with attorneys. For an hour they were delayed and finally after the sparse jail fare, they received a call to the reception-room and there were greeted by their grinning initiators, who informed them it was all a part of the first degree.

Before allowing the use of officers and jail, Undersheriff White secured the permission of proper persons and also a guarantee that no possible action might be brought in the future as a result of the fraternity's pranks.

PASADENAN VANISHES.

Walter Unruh, member of a well-known Pasadena family, disappeared Tuesday, and yesterday his relatives asked that the Sheriff's force search for him, on the theory that he might have met with foul play. He left his home, No. 431 South Holliston avenue, and went to Rockwood ranch in Eaton Canyon. Remaining there only a few hours, he left without saying where he was going and it has been suggested he was held up and robbed. On several previous occasions he has been the victim of robbers, according to the relatives' report.

INQUIRY FOR RAILS IS A NOTEWORTHY FEATURE.

Advances Ranging from One to Three Points Registered by Rock Island, Wabash and Other Issues. Bank Statement Shows Actual Loss of About $30,000,000 in Cash.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Extension of the recent inquiry for minor or low-priced rails was the noteworthy feature of today's short but active session. Advances ranging from 1 to 3 points were registered by Rock Island, Missouri Pacific, Wabash, Missouri, Kansas and Texas and Western Maryland issues, with further improvement in Erie and Southern Railway.

Other conspicuous features included Ohio Gas, which made an extreme gain of 6½ points, to 124, an advance of more than 25 points for the week and a new high record.

Total sales of stocks, 790,000 shares.

The bank statement fulfilled popular expectation by disclosing another actual loss of cash—about $30,000,000—and another contraction of reserves, reducing that item to $41,000,000, the smallest total since the present system of returns came into vogue.

The bond market was stronger today in consequence of the improvement shown by international issues. Total sales, par value, $3,570,000. United States coupon 4s were ⅛ per cent. lower on call during the week.

Quiet.

LITTLE ACTIVITY ON LOCAL EXCHANGE.

HIGHER BIDS FOR HOME TELEPHONE PREFERRED.

Union Oil Shows Tendency to Advance—Mining List Dull. Arizona Ray Climbs—Ivanhoe and Lucky Boy Firm—Greater Demand for Investment.

The local security market was slow and inactive yesterday on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, although prices did not suffer thereby. Home Telephone preferred was stronger when bids were heard for the issue at 79.00 as compared to 77.50 the day before. Union Oil was steady and had a tendency to advance towards the final hours, closing sales being recorded at 110.75. The mining list was exceptionally dull. Arizona Ray was in better shape and sold at 27, with final bids of 25. Big Jim brought 1.37 and Tom Reed sold as high as 1.82. Lucky Boy and Ivanhoe were practically unchanged and the Goodsprings stocks were not traded in. As is always the case when the more popular securities are quiet, Los Angeles Investment was dealt in freely, a total of 2250 shares being sold at the firm figure of 70.

During the month of November trading on the Los Angeles Exchange aggregated 1,962,688 shares of a total value of $1,758,407.12. Oil and mining stocks divided the greater portion of this activity with valuations of $899,982.90 and $551,751.66 respectively. Industrials followed with $262,852.06 and bonds and bank stocks brought up the rear with $36,702.50 and $7118.

The sharp advance of Arizona Ray from 20 to 27 in the final two days of last week has occasioned considerable comment in financial circles of the city. As a usual thing mining stocks start off with a bang, rise to a high point and then sink almost to oblivion, until ore is discovered in paying quantities when the quotations rise to a healthy level. Although Arizona Ray has not discovered ore as yet, the stock has held around 27 for much the greater part of the time since the issue was listed on the local board. It is felt that if the company does bring in an ore strike of consequence, Arizona Ray will become one of the most active traders ever seen in the mining group.

LOMBARD & SON, INC., Underwood Building, San Francisco, offer to lend 40% of the real value of irrigated Alfalfa, Vineyard or orchard farms in California where the security justifies loans of $30.00 to $75.00 per acre. Amortized or Rural Credit 20-year plan, moderate payments annually of principal and interest, an insurance against hard times; also 10-year plan with liberal prepayment privileges after two years. These long time loans are especially desirable on partially improved farms, or where owners desire to further develop by increasing acreage in Alfalfa, orchards or vineyards. Young vineyards or orchards require several years growth before becoming profitable. These long time loans are peculiarly adapted to California. Describe farm fully in first letter giving legal description, number of acres in different crops, improvements, irrigation water supply, amount of present incumbrance. LOANS CLOSED PROMPTLY.

BUY COPPERS
But, What Coppers

Copper Stocks are good "buys" at this time.
Why?
Just because Copper is now King of the metals, and the world is Copper for immediate delivery is worth about 35c per pound.
at above 30c for delivery during the last half of 1917.
A Copper famine during the latter part of 1917 and the first half of 1918 nent, and some experts are predicting 40c copper.
This means that big copper companies, which can produce millions of copper per month, at a cost of from 8c to 10c per pound, are in line profits.
It also means that young copper companies, not yet producers, but which proved territory, where their ground may be easily and cheaply proved of churn drilling, have a bright future.
Stocks of the mature, producing coppers are now selling upon an or, in other words, at high prices, which do not appear to offer their large speculative profits.
Stocks of the younger coppers, not yet producing, but which are located described, and which seem to promise ultimate large production, low prices, and offer unusual promise not only of immense to those who purchase at this time, but of future big dividends.

RAY HERCULES COPPER CO.
RAY CONSOLIDATED COPPER CO.
RAY CONSOLIDATED COPPER CO.
SHOWING MAP PROPERTY OF ARIZONA-RAY-COPPER-CO.

ARIZONA RAY

Is, according to our opinion, the best of the young coppers.
ARIZONA RAY is now selling at a low price.
ARIZONA RAY adjoins and is partially surrounded by the properties of Ray Consolidated and Ray Hercules mines.
ARIZONA RAY ground has been proved on three sides by the operations two big companies, and rich copper ore is being extracted from ground ately adjoining it on two sides.
ARIZONA RAY is being developed by the same engineer who spent six veloping Ray Consolidated.
Geological and mineralogical conditions which are visible are reported in Ray Consolidated, Ray Hercules and Arizona Ray ground by such geological authorities as E. L. Hiatt, Frederick Young, F. A. Dorsey Davis. Mr. Hiatt is the engineer who was in charge of Ray Consolidated ment for six years.
ORE BODIES in this district are found in blanket formation, which lie zontal, and can be developed by churn drilling over wide areas.
Churn drilling operations have given Ray Consolidated 80,000,000 tons to date, and Ray Hercules more than 10,000,000 tons of ore. The is now using one drill, is setting up a second and has ordered a same man is in charge of this drilling who was in charge of the Ray lidated operations for six years.
ARIZONA RAY will be regarded as being in the same class with Ray the drills now operating strike the ore. This may happen at any day
Ray Hercules once sold at about 15c per share. It now sells at $3.75.
Ray Consolidated originally went on the market at 25c. It is now $30.00 per share.
ARIZONA RAY promises to duplicate these performances.
IF YOU failed to take advantage of the opening prices of these other two why not "even up" by purchasing ARIZONA RAY, immediately, low prices.
The OPPORTUNITY is here. It's up to YOU. Are you going to "turn it down"

WHEAT BULLS AT DISADVANTAGE.

REPORT OF CANCELLATION OF ORDER IS UPSETTING.

Abandonment of Proposed Sale of $50,000,000 of British and French Treasury Bills Makes Exchange Sensitive to Rumors. Oats Have Little Independence.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Uneasiness regarding virtually unfounded reports that efforts had been made to cancel the purchase of several million bushels of wheat intended for Great Britain put the bulls at a disadvantage today. Although much of the consequent setback in prices was finally overcome, the market closed nervous, ⅝ to 1 net lower, with December at 1.66 and May at 1.73 to 1.73¼. Corn finished ⅛ off to ¼ up, oats from ½ @⅝ down to 1⅜ advance, and provisions varying from 42 decline to a rise of 10. Abandonment of the proposed sale of $50,000,000 of British and French treasury bills appeared to have made the wheat market sensitive to rumors touching the export situation and there was a series of breaks in values before the rumors that foreign holdings were being unloaded met with authoitative denial. Corn reflected the changes in wheat. Oats, like corn, had little independence.

BUY PINAL COPPER IT LEADS
ALL THE JUNIOR COPPERS

¶ FOR not alone does PINAL have good neighbors, but PINAL itself is a MINE.

¶ It takes months, even years sometimes, to put the average mine on a producing basis after the quantity of ore has been determined.

¶ PINAL had its 2000 feet of tunnelling started a year ago—long before the boom in the copper market.

¶ Under the able management of J. C. Devine, ten years superintendent of the Ray Consolidated Copper Company, the development of PINAL has rapidly advanced with two shifts working continuously.

TAKE THIS TIP AND PLAY SAFE

¶ PINAL is one of the few companies whose treasury stock is placed on the California market by permission and under the supervision of the State Corporation Department. Call up this department and ask what it means to buy treasury stock.

¶ There are many good reasons why so few companies secure this permission—better look up some of these reasons before buying mining stock. Also learn more about PINAL COPPER and DO IT NOW! When PINAL stock is listed on the New York Curb exchange it will be too late to get in at the present price.

¶ This Electrical Age is a Copper Glutton.
¶ Copper is a metallic necessity that must be had.
¶ You know how its price has doubled and trebled.

THE INCREASE IN MARKET VALUE OF COPPER IS ALL PROFIT TO THE PRODUCING COPPER MINE,

That's why Copper Stocks are doubling and trebling in valuation, and that's why the producing copper mines are making such millions and paying such marvelous dividends.

A COLOSSAL CONSOLIDATION of Arizona Copper Properties—8 contiguous groups—78 claims—over 1500 acres—containing producing mines and underground workings with hundreds of tons of high-grade copper ore on dumps ready for shipment—is being effected, and a PROMOTION POOL FORMING to carry on a BIG PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN, and begin immediate operations. The stock when offered to the public will be on the Big Exchanges and Stock Markets of the country.

Oro Amigo-47½% Copper

Exploring ore shoot carrying high values in gold, platinum and copper. Samples run 47½% copper, $35.00 gold and $45.00 platinum. Vein strong—well defined; plenty of iron; same rock relations so highly productive in Boss Mine near by.
Oro Amigo is owned by Los Angeles people. It has the high grade copper ores of the Boss and the extraordinarily rich plumbojarosite. The Boss and Oro Amigo are the only known platinum lode mines in the world. Platinum is $100.00 an ounce. When the Boss Mill starts producing platinum in January these platinum mines will be the envy of the mining world.
Oro Amigo is expected to rival the Boss in output. Its owners are mine makers. It will soon be shipping ore. Dividends are not far distant. ORO AMIGO stock is not plentiful. No treasury stock for sale. You can obtain stock only from someone who had the foresight to buy it cheaper, who now needs the money or who does not appreciate the wonderful profit possibilities lurking in his stock. Trend of the ORO AMIGO is surely upward. BOSS—ORO AMIGO—YELLOW PINE CARRIED ON ONE-THIRD DEPOSIT.

Reserve Your Shares Now for They Will Be Sold at 26½c for a Short Time Only.

Remember this stock is cheap at $1.00 and if you do not buy now you will be losing the opportunity that has been knocking at your door for weeks.

Our incorporation is for 250,000 shares. We placed 150,000 shares in the treasury. There are no salaried officers. The money is for a 20-ton concentrating plant. When our mill is installed, which we are going to rush as rapidly as possible, we will start milling $60 ore on which we can figure big monthly dividends.

Does this tell you anything? It means these shares will lead the high-priced stocks. It means we have confidence the mine will pay us, and pay us well. It means we are not depending upon making our profits out of stocks (not our capitalization again.) It means you can, by coming in with us on this first outlay, share our profits with us. It means this stock is cheap at $1.00 per share, and it will be cheap at $5.00 per share when our mill is in operation.

Take this opportunity. Don't hesitate to take 100 shares, even if you cannot afford more.

MOJAVE ANNEX TUNGSTEN MINE is a mine in the ground, not on paper, and it is not the kind you lose your money in. We advise you to hold your stock and buy more at 26½c if you possibly can. The Helping Hand.

MAKING FAMOUS MISSION BRIGHT

Grateful Workers Refurbish Union Rescue's Home.

Provide New Equipment for Institution's Work.

During November Aided Many Deserving Persons.

A notable transformation is taking place in the appearance of both the exterior and interior of the Union Rescue Mission, No. 145 North Main street. Under the supervision of Supt. William Price, corps of volunteer workers have been repainting, repapering, renovating, laying new floors, making new rooms, and generally refurbishing this famous center of mission activities.

The basement, heretofore used simply as a storage room, is being put to very practical use. A large dining-room has been installed with a commodious kitchen, equipped with gas and coal ranges and full kitchen equipment. In the basement there is also being opened a reading-room, finely lighted, a prayer-room for personal work with the penitent, and a clothes storage room.

The auditorium, on the main floor, has been repapered, the wood work repainted, new floors have been laid, and a new lighting system installed. On the second floor every room has been completely overhauled, freshly papered and painted; new rugs, curtains, etc., have been placed, and the dormitories have been freshly equipped. A large shower bath is being put in, and a fumigating room for men's clothes is being installed.

The purpose is to provide an equipment that will be able to give the man wanting to mend his ways every opportunity and to surround him with helpful environment. The down-and-outer who really wants to make good is taken in, given a shower bath and fresh nightshirt, turned into a clean cot, and his clothes put into the fumigator over night. He is given his breakfast in the morning, and after helpful counsel is sent out to look for work, or helped to find a place, with the instruction that he can come back and make use of the mission headquarters until he gets on his feet. The managers of the institution declare the results are well worth while, and every month many men are helped back to a useful place in society and established in a religious life.

Supt. Price's report of the work done during the month of November shows how far-reaching are the activities of the Union Rescue Mission. During the month 121 meetings were held, with a total attendance of approximately 6000 people. Meals to the number of 420 were offered the hungry, and 224 destitute persons provided with beds. There were 130 pieces of clothing given to the needy and 240 Testaments and Gospels of John were distributed. The mission secured jobs for twenty-four unemployed persons.

During the month twenty-three special visits were made to jails and the police court in the interest of worthy persons, and thirty-two visits to men in jails were made. In this one month 131 men and women have signified their intention to lead Christian lives, and many of the persons reached were on the lowest rounds in the social ladder, but who are now "making good."

In addition to this work a number of poor families, women and children, have been clothed and other assistance has been afforded deserving persons.

Christmas.

CITY'S DEPENDENTS NEED HANDY GIFTS.

USEFUL ARTICLES WILL BRING GOOD CHEER TO ALL.

Juvenile Hall Requires Boys' Wear, Little Ones in County Hospital Must Have Caps While Old Men at County Farm will Appreciate Necessaries.

The Public Welfare Commission and the Probation Committee have their plans nearly complete for a real Christmas for the inmates of the various public institutions. At Juvenile Hall and the County Hospital a Christmas dinner will be served. The forty boys and eighty girls of Juvenile Hall at the joyous time for others, but a sad reminder to them, will have cause to remember the bountiful spirit of the men and women who are planning this dinner.

A number of Glendale women are endeavoring to furnish each girl with material for a garment which the girls will make themselves. The boys are not yet provided for. Neckties, handkerchiefs and other trifles boys desire would be very acceptable. The nursery at Juvenile Hall will probably have ten or twelve very young children at Christmas time.

Stocking caps for nursery children and the little ones at the County Hospital are being prepared by a number of women who will meet with Mrs. George Kress at the Bryson apartments every Thursday afternoon until Christmas. Those who would like to help are invited to form the party, and those who prefer may send discarded silk hose to her for the caps, or the offerings may be sent to the Probation Committee at No. 121 Temple street.

A good dinner will be served at the County Farm, where 650 old people are living. Many of them will not be remembered at Christmas unless the public bears them in mind. The old women, probably 100, are generally remembered, but the less fortunate men are forgotten. They need razors, bed shoes, knives, handkerchiefs, neckties, pocketbooks, wash cloths, mirrors, combs, suspenders, needle and thread outfits, shaving brushes, clothes bags, and other useful and necessary articles.

To reach as many as possible of the city's poor and needful the public is asked to inquire at the probation office or the outdoor relief division of the department of charities.

Annual.

EPISCOPAL BAZAAR IN PREPARATION.

GUILD WILL HOLD AFFAIR AT ALEXANDRIA.

Special Feature to be Made of Luncheons and Afternoon Teas, Musical Programmes in Evening by Capable Artists and Novelty Booths to Attract.

The annual bazaar of the Rector's Guild of Christ Episcopal Church will be held in the drawing-room and library on the mezzanine floor of the Alexandria, December 7, 8 and 9. Extensive preparations are being made for this event.

A special feature will be made of the luncheons, from 12 to 2 o'clock each day, and the afternoon teas from 2 to 5 o'clock. Reservations for special tables can be made by calling the library at the Alexandria and asking for Mrs. G. W. Sellars.

Musical programmes will be given each evening at 8:45 o'clock from the balcony of the mezzanine floor by Mrs. Bertha Vaughn, soprano; Mrs. Minnie Hance Jackins, contralto, and Roy Porter, baritone.

The executive board is composed of Mrs. E. P. Johnson, president; Mrs. D. K. Dickinson, treasurer; Mrs. C. W. Houston, secretary; Mrs. L. W. Wilder, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Henry Clay King, assistant treasurer.

The following women will be in charge of the various booths: Fancy work, Mrs. E. P. Johnson and Mrs. W. H. Perry; dolls, Mrs. J. A. Burton and Mrs. T. A. Williams; household linens, Mrs. J. Briggs; candy, Mrs. L. W. Wilder; cut flowers and plants, Mrs. Henry Clay King, Mrs. Harvey E. Tauscher and Mrs. R. Henry Harris; refreshments, Mrs. G. W. Sellars; household goodies, Mrs. J. E. Quinn; Christmas favor booth, Mrs. F. Tully; Christmas tree booth, Mrs. Henry Noviac.

The flower girls who will assist at the cut flower and plant booth are Misses Helen Simkins, Venile Consiguy, Bernice Simms, L. Newbery, Lee Thoidy, Helen Chute, L. La Place, Mia Marvin, Julia F. Hardy and B. Beach.

Special features in the booths will be the wide display of hand-made articles for the fancy booth and the dolls that have been dressed by the members of the guild.

WOULD CURTAIL VICIOUS MOVES.

Proposed Law to Curb Attacks on Property, Business and Employment.

At a meeting of the Campaign Committee of the California Taxpayers' League, held Wednesday, the following resolution was passed:

"Resolved, that the secretary is hereby authorized to immediately employ counsel to draft a law to present to the coming session of the State Legislature calling for an amendment to the State Constitution providing that when any initiative amendment having been presented to the voters twice in succession and having been defeated, calling for the destruction of property or a business, and taking away the occupations of employees without compensation, that thereafter it shall require a two-thirds vote to carry such a proposed measure."

The reason for passing this resolution was because of the burdensome expense on the taxpayers and property owners that have to raise money to defend certain issues from two to four elections in succession. It is injuring business and is costing the taxpayers a great deal of money to be confronted with continued strife by the different elements that are causing uncertain conditions to prevail as long as the strife lasts.

HELD AS BURGLAR.

Charged with having burglarized the store of William Hidley, No. 817 South Main street, on Thanksgiving evening, Earl L. Moser, 20 years old, was given a preliminary hearing before Justice Forbes yesterday and bound over for trial. His bail was fixed at $2500, in default of which he was sent to the County Jail.

Uplift.

FOR BETTER CLOTHES.

Brownson House Sewing Class that Trains Immigrant Mothers to Make Becoming Garments is Rival for Factory-girl Seamstress Course.

Better clothes for the dwellers in the city's modest sections are becoming a reality as a result of work in progress at Brownson House. To the many activities that aid the poor has been added a sewing class for mothers. As the settlement house is situated in the foreign quarter and meets the needs, particularly of the immigrant, this department has won the especial appreciation of untutored women of other lands whose unskilled fingers are rapidly being trained to make becoming and well-fitting garments for themselves and their children.

The class is conducted in the evening, and the mothers bring the babies, which are cared for by the attendant nurse while the elders sew and chat. The social side of the work is, therefore, considered important in itself and the popularity of the class assured.

Another feature at Brownson House is a sewing class for factory girls. The members of this class range in age from 12 to 18 years, and all are employed during the day, as wage earners. Last year the girls of the class gave a fashion show, exhibiting garments made and designed by themselves. Merchants from the large stores were judges, and the exhibit was so successful that it is planned to have another this year.

DEATH OF MRS. WHEELER.

Mrs. Josephine Grant Wheeler, wife of Henry O. Wheeler, Jr., of Harvard boulevard, Los Angeles, died at Palm Springs November 30. She was born July 16, 1882. Her parents were Joseph Wadsworth Grant and Myra Fay Grant. She was married to Mr. Wheeler May 20, 1914. Surviving her are her husband, her brothers, Edwin J. Grant of Los Angeles, Henry Fay and Denison W. Grant of Franklin, Pa., and a sister, Mrs. Kate Grant Pohl of Redlands, Cal. She was an artist, musician and writer who wrote many stories for children, some of which were published in St. Nicholas and other magazines. A talented and charming woman, she was much beloved and admired.

Attractive Homes of Moderate Cost. No. 5.

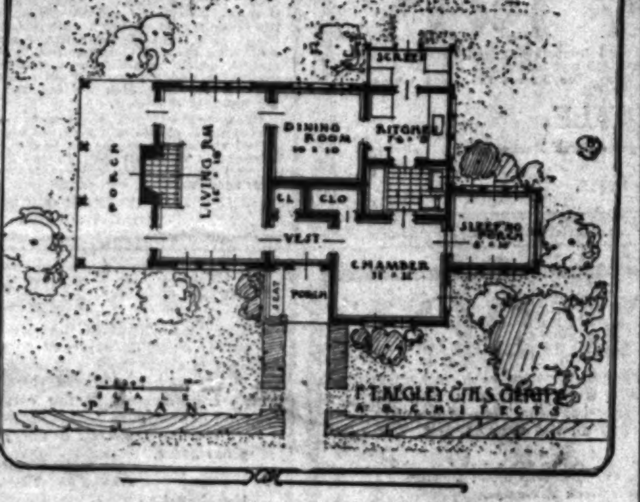
SMALL BUT COMPLETE.

Economical Plan Feature of Bungalow Designed by Local Men.

Another inexpensive small home is illustrated in the series of "moderate cost" places today. The dwelling was designed by Frank T. Kegley and H. Scott Gerity and is as complete in all essentials as a house costing many times as much. The architects estimate that $1500 would build it and that $2000 would cover the cost of its construction with many niceties of finish included.

The plan has a feature not encountered in many small bungalows in the shape of a vestibule entrance. The owner is not compelled to usher visitors directly into the living-room with such an arrangement as this. The living-room is 12x19 feet in size and the dining-room 10x10 feet. The single bedroom is 11x12 feet, while adjoining it is a sleeping porch 8x10 feet.

The exterior is simple and suggests the small homes of early New England. The color scheme calls for white painted walls and green roof. The entrance porch is small and is provided with a built-in seat. A larger porch opens from the living-room at one end of the house.



An inexpensive dwelling.

Frank T. Kegley and H. Scott Gerity, designers of the above sightly little place, estimate that it can be built for from $1500 to $2000.

DYNAMITE TRAIL LEADS TO GOAL.

Actors in Crime Prevention Describe Bombs.

Experts' Analysis Show High Explosive Power.

Women's Stories Tally with Caplan Appearance.

Testimony in the trial of David Caplan, alleged dynamiter, was of a more general nature Friday than on several days previous during which he was frequently connected with Matthew Schmidt, the convicted dynamiter, and J. B. McNamara. The trend of the case was brought directly to Los Angeles and introduced the location of the infernal machines at the homes of Gen. Harrison Gray Otis and Secretary Zeehandelaar of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association.

J. H. Bringham, a street-car conductor who was on his way home in the early morning of October 1, 1910, and who saw the strange suit case at the Zeehandelaar home, was on the stand and told about calling the police after he heard the ticking of a clock and suspected the contents of the carrier. Police Detective Tom Rico and Lieutenant of Detectives Home, who then was on the general force of the department, told of taking charge of this case, and discovering an infernal machine and dynamite inside.

EXPLOSIVE.

The connecting wires were disconnected and the bomb was held as evidence. Immediately after, the officers rushed to the home of Gen. Otis, where another similar bomb had been discovered. Detective Rico carried the suit case to the edge of Westlake Park and started to cut the case, when he heard the first whirr of the alarm, indicating that it was going off. Dropping his knife, he fled a short distance, when the explosion occurred, blowing a huge hole in the ground and knocking him down.

William Davidson, superintendent of the mechanical department of the county and for years dynamite expert with the road department, told of exploding the dynamite found in the Zeehandelaar bomb in an isolated place. He declared the pulverization of the immense rocks on which it was placed indicated the dynamite was about eighty parts nitroglycerine.

UNUSUAL.

Donald W. Wilson said some of the same powder was analyzed at the Giant Powder Works at Giant, where it was shown to be of 80 per cent. strength. William Flynn, one of the department heads at the same place, told of having received orders to manufacture 500 pounds of this very high explosive, a rather unusual order. He said it was never carried in stock because of the danger.

Mrs. Emma Wittrock, who resided on Nineteenth avenue in San Francisco, near the O'Brien house, in which the large explosive cache was found, told of seeing two men drive up in a wagon and unload boxes of the size of those subsequently found there and also of the gingerly manner in which the boxes were handled. Her description of one of the men tallied with the general description of Caplan. Mrs. Emma Boden of the same city, told of having seen the same wagon making its way from the wharf district and later, of having seen it in front of the Nineteenth-street house and two men with it.

HANDWRITING.

Herbert Barring, the officer who brought Schmidt from New York to California after his capture, identified the handwriting of Schmidt from a telegram which the latter had written and sent to his sister while en route. When Deputy District Attorney Keyes placed Milton Carlson, a handwriting expert, on the stand to further identify the writing to be the same as that on various hotel registers, Attorney Appel insisted that the man who so cleverly trapped him in his own scheme several days ago, was not qualified to testify as an expert. Judge Willis overruled his objections.

TWO MASKED BANDITS MAKE AUTO RAID.

At Point of Revolvers Daring Robbers Steal Silverware and Money Making Their Escape in a Small Machine While Police Get There too Late.

After driving Mrs. D. A. Leland of No. 5337 Templeton street from her home Friday night, two masked and armed bandits loaded all the silverware in the place into a small automobile, took a purse containing about $100 and made their escape.

The two bandits, according to Mrs. Leland, entered her home through the rear door early in the evening when she was alone. Walking into the front room the two men, at the point of a revolver, ordered her to leave the place and not to notify the police. Running to the house of a neighbor, Mrs. Leland notified the police at East Side Station, who rushed to the scene in an automobile, but arrived too late to find any trace of the daring bandits.

According to Mrs. Leland, the two intruders took silverware valued at several hundred dollars and about $100 in cash. They loaded the loot in a small automobile standing in the rear of the house and escaped.

Neighbors assert the machine was a runabout and painted black and carried no lights or license plates.

It is thought that both of the bandits are very young. They wore dark clothing, long black overcoats and dark soft hats. They were masked with black cloth and carried heavy revolvers.

DECIDES BROTHERS' SAN DIEGO CLAIMS.

PRESTON B. FULLER WINS LAND RIVAL SOUGHT.

After Bitter Contest Charles H. Fuller Loses Second Appeal to Obtain Valuable Homestead Rights in What is Known as Cariso Creek Country.

The land contest which engendered so much bitterness between two brothers, Preston B., and Charles H. Fuller, involving 160 acres of government land in San Diego county, in what is known as the Cariso Creek country, has finally been determined by the Secretary of the Interior in favor of Preston B. Fuller, the original settler on the land.

The same judgment was rendered by Register Roche and Receiver Mitchell of the local Land Office some months ago, but the matter was appealed by Charles H. Fuller to the General Land Office, and that authority affirmed the judgment of the local officers. Not satisfied with the determination of the issues, Charles H. Fuller then appealed to the Secretary of the Interior, and this final decision by the highest authority in the land department ends the case.

At the time of the original hearing at the local Federal Building, Register Roche had United States Marshal Walton occupy a seat near the brothers and that official was prepared for any eventuality.

It appeared from the record in the case that Preston B. Fuller made an actual residence on the land on March 4, 1911, building a home thereon and filing a homestead claim, presuming he was filing on the land he was occupying. Later, he wrote his brother, Charles H. Fuller, who was then living at Santa Ana, to file on what he thought was the adjoining half quarter-section, which he did.

There was much confusion of the surveys, and Charles H. employed an attorney to run lines, etc., and, following this, he amended his petition to include the lands also claimed by his brother, Preston B. Fuller. It seems there is a valuable spring on the homestead occupied by Preston B. Fuller, and this was the bone of contention between the two men.

When Charles H. Fuller had changed his entry so as to include his brother's land, Preston B. Fuller brought a contest and the finding of the land authorities was in his favor. Under the ruling the contestant is allowed to amend his entry so as to embrace the land upon which he settled, where he had complied in all ways with the provisions of the homestead law, both as to the matter of settlement and improvements.

At the original hearing, Charles H. Fuller had no attorney and appeared in his own behalf, creating much merriment by his objections to the testimony brought out in favor of his brother. When he appealed to the General Land Office an attorney prepared his papers, but to no avail.

PRESBYTERIAN RELIEF.

Asks Aid Societies to Assist Widows and Orphans of Ministers.

The Presbyterian Church board of the United States has requested the aid societies to assist by a voluntary offering in establishing a fund for the relief of widows and orphans of deceased Presbyterian ministers. The Federated Aid Society of the Los Angeles presbytery will hold a meeting at the West Adams Presbyterian Church, near Vermont avenue and West Adams street, next Wednesday, to formulate plans.

There will be a luncheon at 12:30 o'clock for the presidents and secretaries of the various aid societies together with the officers and district superintendents of the federated society. The general assembly will be held from 2 until 4 o'clock. The various societies are requested to inform Mrs. W. D. McConnell, president, No. 1639 Gower street, phone 579179, two days before the meeting as to how many delegates will be present. Rev. Herbert Booth Smith, the new pastor of the Immanuel Presbyterian Church, will speak.

HELD ON UGLY CHARGE.

John L. Lane, former petty officer in the army, was taken before Justice Brown yesterday on a serious statutory charge concerning little Irene Ramirez, with whose parents he resided subsequent to his return from the Mexican border. Represented by Attorneys Henry and Hathaway, he endeavored to show the charges against him were the result of disagreement with Mr. and Mrs. Ramirez on another matter. He was bound over to the Superior Court, however, for trial.

TAKE HOSEMAN OUT FROM LIVING TOMB.

PHYSICAL STAMINA AN AID TO HUSKY CITY FIREMAN.

Fred Kessler, Buried Alive for Almost Three Hours, Directs Work of Rescue with Debris and Ashes from Grocery Fire Ruins About Him.

Held motionless beneath tons of debris that lay ten feet thick above and about him, Hoseman Fred Kessler, a husky 28-year-old member of Engine Company, No. 10 of the local fire department, was literally buried alive for almost three hours yesterday morning while his comrades, directed in person by Fire Chief Archie Eley, worked furiously to dig him out of the ruins of the California Wholesale Grocery Company at No. 1540 Industrial street. During the last half hour of his incarceration in the lava and ashes, Kessler directed the work of his own release by shouting out locations to his friends laboring above him.

When released, the husky young fireman shook himself once or twice, then thrusting the friendly hands extended towards him to one side, threw his leg over the ladder placed against the side of the building, and slid to the ground, unaided. He then proceeded to the Receiving Hospital, assured Dr. Louis Kane that he was all right, and then went to his home at No. 1330 South Harvard boulevard.

Kessler was one of three firemen working a hose on the second floor of the wholesale grocery plant, fighting the fire that broke out early yesterday morning, when the roof caved in. His companions, Firemen Lang and Ball, saved themselves by jumping. Kessler, however, could not extricate himself from the coil of hose about his legs, and was caught by the falling debris while in a crouched position. The ashes and charred woodwork filled in about him, holding him immovable in a semi-standing position.

Despairing of finding their comrade, alive, other members of Kessler's company started to find the body. But two hours passed before they could even locate the place where Kessler was buried. Chief Eley commanded the work in person, assisted by several battalion chiefs and Police Lieutenant Johnson.

Suddenly a group of the workers heard a groan. Kessler had been located, but he was still buried beneath many feet of ashes. A small pipe was inserted to him, and through this he talked, telling them where he was, so their efforts would not hurt him. When finally found, he was still crouched over, the heavy hose twined about him, acting as a buffer.

"It seemed like a hundred years in there," Kessler said, when rescued. "I lost consciousness soon after it happened, but came to when sweat filled my eyes. The hose was wet, and I licked the canvas sides. This probably saved my life."

Receiving Hospital physicians declared it was the marvelous physical development of the young fireman that alone saved his life from the trying adventure.

OLVING THE TRAFFIC PROBLEM IS THE BIGGEST JOB CITY EVER TACKLED.

This picture represents a little game entitled: "Making Two Autos Go Where There's Only Room for One."

ographer caught this picture of "Broadway Jam" at Seventh street. He could have obtained similar pictures at any corner in the down-town district. If you drive a Twin-Six, or even a flivver, you know this is true. If you don't drive a car at all you know it's true. The ing question of the day is: "What Are You Going to Do About it?" Chief of Police Butler is puzzled, and he's a traffic expert. J. W. R. Grogan, the officer in charge of the traffic department, is working on the problem by day, and dreaming of it by night. Two thousand stions have been made as to how order can be restored and the chaotic conditions eliminated. The traffic problem is going to be solved. Messrs. Butler and Grogan have promised that this shall come to pass. But they've got their hands full, and YOU must do your part.

Every Man in Town has to be a Dodger.

SWARMS OF JITNEYS, 40,000 AUTOS AND NARROW STREETS CAUSE OF CONGESTION.

Parking Space on Tops of Skyscrapers and in Basements of Big Stores Among Solutions Offered—Efficient Police Force Powerless as Menace Grows.

BY HARVEY E. WESTGATE.

YOU can't squeeze a bushel of apples into a pint cup. Neither can you squeeze 40,000 automobile and jitneys into a comparatively small business district.

If you travel around the world you won't find a better traffic squad than the one which earnestly tries to keep vehicles moving safely in Los Angeles.

But if you travel twice around the world you won't find another city where traffic conditions are as bad as they are in Los Angeles.

Broadway, New York, is a safe and sane country boulevard when compared with Broadway, Los Angeles.

The congestion in London, Paris, Berlin, Chicago and Oskosh is nothing when viewed by a Los Angeles man, for here the traffic is a continual parade, with four processions going north and south and twice as many going east and west.

Seventy-one men compose the Los Angeles traffic squad. Eight years ago the squad boasted of nine members. The seventy-one men are alert, experienced, always on the job and do their best to prevent accidents, but neither the present squad, nor one twice or ten times its size, can regulate traffic conditions in Los Angeles until a number of contributory causes of traffic congestion are removed. Some of the causes are practically immovable, but it is interesting to note them all.

TEN CAUSES.

Here are ten of the causes, or conditions, responsible for the present congestion.

(1.) Forty thousand automobiles are owned inside of the city limits. Eighty thousand automobiles are owned in the county. When the owners of 10 per cent. of the cars in the city decide to come down town, they completely fill Broadway, Spring, Hill and Main streets, for ten blocks, even if four lines of cars move down each street. If 20 per cent. of the cars come downtown, they also fill the cross streets. And this is exactly what happens every day. If all of the owners decide, at the same time, to come downtown, they wouldn't arrive, for the simple reason that the streets wouldn't hold them.

(2.) As compared with many streets in other cities, the downtown streets of Los Angeles are narrow, but as it would mean confusion, an expense of hundreds of millions of dollars and several years' work to widen them, this cause of congestion cannot be removed.

(3.) Hills wall in a portion of the downtown district, and unless they are removed, or punctured with a number of tunnels or open cuts, this cause of congestion will always remain.

(4.) One hundred and seventy-five hack stands line the streets in the business district. Allowing only fifteen feet to each, this means the curbs, for a distance of 2625 feet, are filled with vehicles, which are allowed to stand there throughout the twenty-four hours if their owners so desire.

SWARMS OF JITNEYS.

(5.) Every street in the business district is a hive for a swarm of jitneys. One-lungers, two-lungers, four-lungers, six-lungers, eight-lungers and twelve-lungers. Some are old. Some are new. Some are large and strong, and sturdy. Some are small and weak. Some are rattle traps. Some are in the hands of experienced drivers. Many are guided by youths so young that their faces are as yet strangers to a safety razor. But they swarm daily, stop anywhere, cut in ahead of other autos, and go on their way, adding to the dangers the public has to face and bringing perspiration and gray hairs to every traffic cop.

(6.) Street car tracks, instead of continuing north, south, east or west, on one thoroughfare, until a point beyond traffic congestion is reached, turn hither and thither, form the letter "S" if necessary, and thereby contribute to the congestion. The most dangerous crossings in the city are where street cars make turns to the right or left. Accidents, and serious accidents, at such crossings, are of almost daily occurrence.

EDUCATION NEEDED.

(7.) Ignorance on the part of drivers, who never have made a study of a street map of Los Angeles, or thoughtlessness (the result is the same,) whereby a large part of the "through" traffic uses the downtown streets instead of following a route skirting the congested district. There is no necessity for those living in the southwest, or western portions of the city, coming downtown if they desire to go to Pasadena or any point north or west of the city. Likewise, there is no necessity of those residing in the northwest or western portions of the city driving through the Los Angeles business district if they are bound for the southwestern portion, or to the beach cities beyond.

(8.) Inexperienced drivers. We have much to learn from Europe when it comes to laws regulating traffic, and the handling of automobiles. In some European cities every man and woman who wishes to drive a car is compelled to apply, first of all, to the police department. An actual driving test is given, and if satisfactory the applicant is allowed to apply for a license. If this is granted it comes in the form of a small book containing the applicant's picture, name and identification. In addition, there are blank pages on which is recorded, from time to time, the driver's "record." If he is arrested and fined, the license shows it. And it shows every subsequent arrest and warning. By law the driver is compelled to carry the license. If he leaves it at home, on the piano, he regrets it, for any officer has the right to call for the license and inspect it at any time. The driver's record is recorded there. What the book says goes. What the driver says doesn't count.

TRUCKS A MENACE.

(9.) Heavy trucks. While there are ordinances regulating the use of heavy trucks in the downtown district, and tandem and four-horse trucks are barred from certain streets, the traffic squad continually is confronted with a big problem in seeing that the ordinances are observed. A big truck, moving slowly, always holds up traffic, and if the driver doesn't know how to handle it to the best advantage he can cause a traffic officer more grief and bunch up a greater number of automobiles, jitneys and street cars, than any other man on the thoroughfare.

(10.) Parking. Last, but not least, is the parking problem. Shoppers, quite naturally, wish to park their cars as closely as possible to the store where they are trading, but in this case, in order to save themselves a short walk, they are adding considerably to traffic congestion. In parking, where the driver has to "back in," and jockey for position, and repeat the performance when he leaves, traffic is held up until the car is in line. If a double line forms, of course, this isn't so bad, but two double lines of cars, added to two street car lines, fills the street, and congestion, accidents, loss of life and destruction of property are the result. Parking on streets where there are no street car lines, or patronizing the nearest garage, would assist materially in solving the present traffic congestion, according to the police.

LIST INCOMPLETE.

This list could be continued indefinitely. Seemingly, nature, circumstances and man have combined to make the traffic problem in Los Angeles the biggest job the city ever tackled.

In many blocks, for instance, there are no alleys. In some blocks, on the other hand, the alleys run east and west, instead of north and south, with the result that more confusion is caused, and the traffic congestion at those points made still worse, as vehicles cross the crowded sidewalks. One of these alleys is located between Fifth and Sixth streets, and every one who walks along Broadway has to stand in line as trucks or autos enter or leave the alley.

But the problem has got to be solved. And Los Angeles has got to solve it. If parking space on top of skyscrapers is necessary, with elevators to carry cars to the roof, the plan will be adopted. If basement parking space in big buildings is the only way out, Los Angeles business men will see that it is forthcoming. Both of these plans have been adopted in Chicago and New York, and they are going a long ways towards solving the problem.

But you can't squeeze a bushel of apples into a pint cup. In this case the space in the streets represents the cup and 40,000 autos and 600,000 people the bushel of apples.

STOP PARKING ON BROADWAY.

A well-known business man, who wishes to make a suggestion about traffic regulation, but is too modest to have his name used, offers the following:

"Select one street, Broadway for instance, and prohibit any parking at any time. Have an ordinance passed so that as soon as an auto has delivered its passengers the driver must go elsewhere to park. That would mean one street, the entire length of the business district, that would be free from two lines of autos, parked at either curb line. If this were done, two lines of autos could travel south and two travel north, and still leave plenty of room for the two street car lines. What we need is one street that is always open from curb to curb, so that autos passing north or south through the business district can have clear sailing.

SIMPLICITY

The secret of every success is simplicity itself.

The development of the Packard Twin-Six motor was as logical as the growth of a tree.

"Build the best" has been the only motto Packard engineers knew.

From the days of the one-cylinder the way of progress in motor construction was steadily along one line—splitting stresses, multiplying impulses.

One—four—six—twelve, runs the record.

And the Twin-Six today represents the ultimate in motor design and construction.

MOTOR BUS IS CRUX OF PROBLEM, SAYS BUTLER.

Chief of Police Believes it may be Necessary to Keep Jitneys off Broadway and Spring During Certain Hours. Department Welcomes Suggestions and is Working Day and Night to Solve Perplexing Situation.

BY JOHN L. BUTLER,

Chief of Police and Recognized Traffic Expert of the Pacific Coast.

QUICKSAND is no more shifting than traffic conditions and no more secure than a fixed traffic rule. Legislation of local application is formative and there was never a better opportunity for theorists in civic administration than now. This office receives an average of three suggestions each day for the correction of traffic evils and the solution of its problems and I am glad to get them. If there is a practicable point it is tried and no "tip" is too small to heed. Many prove ill suited to urban conditions; some are now being tried and some have been adopted.

The muddled condition of legislation in many localities and the divergence of opinions held by experts is responsible for the action at the recent State traffic conference in Sacramento; when the leaders in the meeting had stated their views it was found that agreement was impossible and the session was adjourned to meet January 8 in order that committees might sift the chaff from the wheat.

We can pass a law and carry it out to handle murder, arson or larceny and that law will stand for decades, but we cannot evolve a series of rules to govern the progress of an auto from The Times Building to Pico street without realizing its insufficiency in a few months' time. It is not a confession of weakness, indolence or stupidity; it is an indication that the automobile industry is the fastest growing in the world and engenders consequent incidental problems.

MANY PLANS CONSIDERED.

This department is now considering eliminations, such as the doing away with parking machines at the curb on busy downtown streets, the restriction of motor-bus traffic to certain streets during specified hours of congestion, the encouragement of storage garages and parks, the rerouting of street cars and such other expedients. All will work inconvenience and hardship, and the merits of each will be denied, but action along this line is demanded.

The motor bus is the crux of the congestion problem. In the shopping district, by actual count and tabulation, these vehicles form from 25 to 40 per cent. of the traffic and have been found to be a factor to the extent of 50 per cent. on Main street in certain hours of the day.

San Francisco has taken a firm stand on this question. The jitney bus is banished from Market street during certain hours of the day and I incline toward the opinion that it may be necessary to keep them off Broadway and Spring street in this city during the hours between 10 and 4.

Subways, elevated railroads and one-way traffic, I believe, are impractical in Los Angeles and would meet with too strong a protest to consider their adoption.

REROUTING OF CARS WOULD HELP.

As an example of what rerouting of street cars might accomplish: if the cars turning on and off Broadway at Seventh street were eliminated and the turn made at Spring street, it would effect a difference of sixty turnings and the coincident blocking of the stream of traffic each hour.

To a large extent, the street cars are a factor and it seems to me that the duo-terminal system is the best solution. To explain: if one terminal was built in the neighborhood of the Plaza and the other at or near Pico street, much of the downtown street-car traffic would be eliminated. The plan would be to have shuttle cars connect the two depots and the passengers pick out their home-bound cars at the terminal, using transfers. Then the half-empty cars downtown would be abolished as a shuttle car would leave whenever loaded and better time would be made by all passengers.

THIS IS BEST PLAN SO FAR.

The plan might be projected to include cars running north on Broadway and south on Spring street, looping at the terminals. That would obviate turning crews and shifting poles and is the best plan now under consideration.

As for the auto—remember, it is guided by human hands and its activities directed by human minds. It is hard to alter the human equation. Angeleno auto drivers are the best in the country and might drive free from rules were it not for the leaven of reckless pilots. The laws are made to inhibit and curb them—and to punish them, for the protection of those who have a right to the road, be they riding or afoot.

It's a Hard One.

MANY TACKLE TRAFFIC CONGESTION PROBLEM.

Scores Write Letters to "The Times" Outlining "How They Would Do It"—Pedestrians Blamed for Ignoring Officers' Signals—Even the Poor Newsie Comes in for Criticism—"It's a Big Job," Say Experts.

WITH 2000 traffic congestion solutions on file at the police station, and scores arriving at The Times office in every mail, it would seem as if the problem might be solved in a jiffy, but in spite of this assistance from the public, traffic experts still shake their heads and declare:

"It's a big job, and it will require a lot of time, thought and money to finish it."

Many of the letters received by The Times contain suggestions of value, and all of these will be considered by those having the work in hand. Some of the suggestions, of course, are impractical, and therefore of no value, but the very fact that so many are taking the time to write these letters proves how widespread is the desire for relief from the present deplorable conditions.

Some of the suggestions received, while pertaining to a serious subject, are rather humorous. For instance:

One man believes higher wages and shorter working hours in the country would attract so many people from the large cities that traffic congestion would be solved over night. He proposes that the hours be trimmed from ten to six and the wages doubled. While this might help some, it is apparent that the farmers would go into the hands of receivers in about thirty minutes.

MANY SUGGESTIONS.

The suggestions include everything from banishing the jitneys and street cars from the business district, to providing parking places on top of the sky scrapers, with elevators to handle the flivvers going up and down. A few of the interesting letters received follow:

Harry A. Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company: The solution of the traffic problem in Los Angeles is not difficult for our present needs. For the years to come we will need a broad and scientifically worked out system, formulated by a board of traffic experts, but for the present needs of Los Angeles our problem is simple—get the car lines off Broadway! Or at least those which can easily be rerouted. Los Angeles street should have all the Garvanza, South Pasadena and Pasadena lines. Then some of the Spring-street lines could be routed on Main and one or two of the Broadway lines put on Spring. Hill street is not crowded. It could stand one or two more cars taken from Broadway. If these changes were made the greatest of our downtown arteries would be almost free from street cars and the motorists' troubles on Broadway thereby lessened. The present safety zone ordinance requiring all automobiles to pass between the safety line and the curb whether a street car is on the track ahead of the auto or not, is wrong. When there is no street car ahead of the automobile the latter should be allowed to follow the car tracks across the street—keeping out of the safety zone, but not compelled to go to the right between safety line and curb. Much time could be saved and traffic would move faster if this simple change were made. If these three changes were made, I am sure there would be a decided betterment in the traffic conditions which would benefit pedestrian, railway and motorist alike.

NARROW STREETS.

Wallace O. Gates, Smith Form-a-Truck Company: In the regulation of its traffic, the city of Los Angeles has a particularly difficult problem to deal with in regard to commercial vehicles. This difficulty is increased materially because of the lack of alleys in such a large section of the downtown business area. Drivers of pleasure vehicles complain against trucks on Broadway without realizing the situation. The merchants are dependent upon this form of transfortation in their delivery system. There are no alleys in the rear of their establishments. They have to unload and load in front of their stores. The trucks have to back at right angle to the curb. Passing traffic is diverted as the result and a blockade results frequently. If loading and unloading were restricted to certain hours, then hardships would arise that would be unfair to the merchants. The narrow streets must ultimately be blamed for this situation.

PARKING SPACE.

Harris M. Hanshue, Apperson dealer—In the traffic conditions existant in this city I see a constantly growing need for regulation and provision for parking. But the makers of any suitable ordinance that involves the parking question must tackle a hard proposition. When they put a short time limit on the privilege of parking a car alongside the curb in the business district they get in bad with the merchants. Motorists claim they cannot afford to stop in front of a store and leave their car to make a purchase, because they are liable to find they are under arrest upon returning to the car. On the other hand, unlimited parking privileges would tend toward constant blockades of the streets. This city is unfortunate in not having wide open areas, such as exist in most of the other large cities of the country. In Minneapolis and Detroit decorative grass plots in the streets have been opened to free parking. Some cities have adopted a plan which might be followed here. It is for the municipality to rent vacant lots wherever available in their business district and permit cars to park there. The expense to owners is only sufficiently large to cover the cost to the city for rent and guards.

NEW YORK METHOD.

Earl V. Armstrong, Chandler distributor—A movement is general in the United States to bring about uniform traffic regulations. It is claimed for this that the advantage would be appreciated by every motorist and pedestrian, no matter where he might be. I returned a few days ago from Cleveland and New York City. I had an opportunity to study traffic conditions there and they are just as big a problem as in Los Angeles. In New York City, motorists seem to drive with more speed and greater freedom from liability between crossings. There is very little foot traffic from curb to curb, except at the corners. This has enabled vehicle traffic to speed up. Two, three or, in some instances, four officers are on duty. They hold back both foot and vehicular traffic until it is the proper time to cross. Strong-arm methods are resorted to in case of an obstreperous person attempting to go contrary of instructions.

BLAMES DRIVERS.

Ralph C. Hamlin, Franklin and Scripps-Booth distributor—If all the police officers in the city of Los Angeles were on duty all the time, and each had a certain crossing assigned to him, there would not be enough to control positively the movement of motorist and pedestrian traffic. Therefore, it behooves the citizens to become instilled with sufficient pride to rise above violation of the rules. The minute's time that may be gained by rushing a crossing or scaring a pedestrian until he faints does not suffice for any profit to the motorist. The auto driver may grumble because the law requires that he stop when a street car is taking on or unloading passengers. As a matter of fact, however, this stopping may prove a valuable precaution in the long run. The person boarding or departing from a car usually has his mind set on that only and is unaware of the approach of the motor car. To run him down would be an experience that the autoist could not offset by what little time he might gain if he did not take precautions.

BLAMES PEDESTRIANS.

Henry Joy, Pasadena—I have done considerable driving in the congested district of Los Angeles and from my observations I am of the opinion that if the sidewalk traffic were regulated and controlled with the street traffic that a great deal of the congestion would be eliminated, as there is a great deal of delay caused by pedestrians crossing in front of the street traffic after the officers has given the signal for traffic to proceed.

I. M. Muir—Pedestrians should keep to right at crossings and obey traffic signals the same as the motorist. Forbid crowding into the streets. Pedestrians should likewise be required to keep to the right on sidewalks. They are as congested as the streets. Curb lines of business streets should be kept free from newsboys' supply of papers, with attending array of soap boxes. This prevents pedestrians reaching curbing with freedom for quick exit from street cars and at the crossing. Let newsboys display papers against building line. Prohibit automobiles turning cars in middle of a block. Cut down speed of trucks and machines in busy section. I find the greatest lack of responsibility is shown by the pedestrian in both street crossings and sidewalks. Very few drivers are careless, but a little more courtesy at street intersections, slowing down and signaling would avoid streets intersection accidents.

U. S. TO BUILD ROAD.

Officials of the national forests of the West met recently to form tentative plans for a motor car road of 7 per cent. grade up Mount Timpanogos, near Provo, Utah, for about $30,000. The work is expected to begin in April.

COUNCILMAN IN FAVOR OF "ONE-WAY" STREETS.

BY COUNCILMAN J. S. CONWELL.

THE streets in the business district of Los Angeles are narrow. It is impossible to widen them. Therefore, in my opinion, the satisfactory way of handling the traffic problem is to use Hill, Broadway, Spring and Main as "one-way streets." I mean by this that two of these streets should be used for traffic going south, and the other two for traffic going north. Not only autos but street cars should be compelled by ordinance to do this. This would allow four lines of automobiles and two lines of street cars on one street, and the traffic congestion would cease.

In addition to this I am in favor of denying anyone the privilege of parking on these busy streets, unless there is someone in the car who can run it. This, in my opinion, is the only way of permanently solving the traffic problem.

PARK YOUR CAR ON ROOF OF TEN-STORY BUILDING.

BY A. C. ROBBINS.

FROM the symposium of ideas on traffic suggestions sought by The Times, I sincerely trust some adequate solution of this vexing problem will be found. What little I have to offer may not solve the congestion but may contribute to a general plan that will be found suitable.

In the first place, the rent cars that stand along Broadway all day long and most of the night should be denied that privilege, at least during the day time. I have counted more than 100 cars between Seventh and First streets, each one of which has a rent placard upon it. This number of cars, with sufficient clearance between them, takes up 2500 feet or nearly half a mile.

Sooner or later, we will see roof garages on the principal buildings. This is not an innovation. Chicago and New York have already adopted this idea, very much to the relief of traffic conditions in the hearts of those two cities. This plan, as well as another which provides for basement garages in big downtown buildings, has proven a stimulant to the renting of offices in centrally located office buildings. Chicago has tried this plan and it has been a source of great convenience to tenants.

Some one, same day, is coming along with the key to the traffic puzzle, which is now being a source of real annoyance to local business. It is all well and good to experiment but we should soon stop playing with traffic rules and adopt a plan that will work out to the benefit of the city.

HOW AUTO DRIVERS CAN RELIEVE THE CONGESTION.

BY J. W. R. GROGAN,

Sergeant Commanding Traffic Bureau, Los Angeles Police Department

I BELIEVE the owners and drivers of cars can do a great deal towards relieving the present congestion by observing this rule: you are in the southwest or western part of the city, and desire to drive to Pasadena or any of the towns lying north-east of Los Angeles, DON'T drive through the business district. Drive down Flower, or Figueroa, to the Third street tunnel, turn north on Hill at the end of the tunnel, go through the Hill street tunnel, turn east on Temple to Broadway and continue north through the Broadway tunnel. In this way the congested district is avoided and good, smooth streets encountered. By doing this drivers will not only avoid danger and delay themselves, but will actually be helping to solve the traffic problem for those who are compelled to drive through the downtown district.

There are other routes, also, which can safely be followed with the same result. Those going to points east of Los Angeles, say to Whittier, can avoid the downtown traffic by going east on Seventh or Eighth street to Central avenue, and then out Stephenson avenue. Still another way to assist in solving the problem, is to use Los Angeles street in going to the northeast, instead of going down Spring, Main or Broadway.

Education of the public along these lines, which can only be done through the newspapers, will have a far-reaching effect, and with another tunnel or two, perhaps a few new ordinances, and strict enforcement of the present traffic laws, will bring good results. be seen, but one thing is certain, the jitney drivers give the ordinances have been passed which prohibit them from using the streets in the downtown district. What will be done here remains to be seen, but one thing is certain, the jitney drivers give the officers more worry than any other class of motorists. By driving down the middle of the street, in order to get ahead of the line of automobiles, cutting in ahead of other cars, stopping at the wrong place to pick up passengers, and doing other things which contribute to the congestion, they are continually adding to the traffic officers burdens and making the traffic problem more difficult to solve.

BOWLING NOTES.

Play in the championship doubles bowling tournament will start at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. Six fast games are on the programme and all games are free to the public.

The doubles tourney is being held under the auspices of the Southern California Bowling Alley Owners' Association and is expected to be the biggest bowling event of the year.

Five games will be bowled in each match and the team winning the largest percentage of games will be declared the winner. The members of the winning team will receive gold medals emblematic of the championship of Southern California. The six leading teams will get into the money prizes. Under the rules to get into the prize money the members of the teams must bowl in at least 75 per cent. of the games rolled and also bowl the last contest. The entrance fee for the tournament was $15 a man and that money has been turned over to the prize list.

Following are the teams entered in the tourney and the places they represent: Steele and Darrow, Palace; Turner and Mackenzie, Majestic; Fay and Schubert, Majestic; Simpson and Gilman, Santa Monica; Harris and Pratt, Grand Central; Hershey and McAleny, Pasadena; Meek and Bunn, Lyceum; Shafer and Werner, Palace; Greycheck and Shay, Broadway; Guyette and Dysinger, Grand Central; Meador and Young, Ocean Park; Phelps and Turner, Palace.

Today's schedule—Steele and Darrow vs. Turner and Mackenzie at the Palace, Fay and Schubert vs. Simpson and Gilman at the Majestic, Harris and Pratt vs. Hershey and McAleny at the Grand Central, Meek and Bunn vs. Shafer and Werner at the Lyceum, Greycheck and Shay vs. Guyette and Dysinger at the Broadway, Meador and Young vs. Phelps and Turner at Ocean Park.

Here is the way the Monday section of the Mercantile Bowling Association is slated to play tomorrow evening: Grand Centrals vs. Pacific Electric at Grand Central, L. A. Ignition Works vs. Walkovers at Palace, Peers vs. Majestic at Ocean Park, Twentieth Century Dairy Lunch vs. Del Monte Cafe at Oaks and Yale Cafe vs. Groman and Coe at the Palace.

The Tuesday section bowls as follows: King's Court vs. Johnson's Chocolates at Ocean Park, Wanderers vs. Broadways at Majestic, Pasadena Merchants vs. Majestic Bar at Pasadena, Venice Pier Restaurant vs. Tiger Cigarettes at Oaks and Christophers vs. Curtis Paving Company at Broadway.

REPAIR BILLS ARE BEING CUT DOWN.

It has been one of the sad features of the motorists' lot that in a great many engine designs, it sometimes took ten times as long to reach a certain part of the engine as it did to do the actual work of repair or replacement that was required. When labor charges run from 75 to 85 cents it often costs from $5 to $10 for the time necessary to make a 50-cent replacement.

Such things as easily-removable cylinder heads and crankcases, and the arrangement of the crankcase so that pistons and connecting rods could be dropped through the crankcase without disturbing the crankshaft bearings have gone a long way toward making such repair items as carbon removal, valve grinding, piston and connecting rod bearing repair much less laborious and expensive. Greater care also in the disposal of the accessories about the motor, such as carbureter, ignition, starting and lighting arrangements, have assisted.

SIMPLICITY IS BUILDERS' SLOGAN.

Motor car engines each year illustrate the tendency of car builders to make their product more easily cared for by the average, everyday motorist who neither has the facilities of a complete repair shop in his garage, nor cares to pay out extravagant sums for skilled labor. The new engines designed for 1917 cars probably illustrate this [illegible] among the motor car manufacturers to a greater extent than has been the case before. There have [illegible] many radical changes [illegible] within the past season, manufacturers have not had to develop [illegible] types of motors as has been the [illegible] in the two or three years [illegible] this, and consequently they [illegible] been able to give more attention to these details which make the engines easier of maintenance [illegible] repair than they have been before.

Detroit Electric

Reliability has made Detroit Electric popular

Motoring ceases to be a pleasure and an automobile ceases to be a convenience when the car is not thoroughly reliable at all times.

And it's because Detroit Electric is thoroughly reliable—dependable every day in the year—that it is rapidly gaining in popularity.

Critical motor car buyers are demanding more than a handsome all-season top as a guarantee of all-year service.

The Detroit Electric affords all the pleasures and comforts of motoring at its best—has that smoothness and flexibility that only a Detroit Electric can give—has ample power and sufficient speed to meet more than all average requirements—and an operating cost that is lower than that of any other car you would consider.

Remember—the Detroit Electric is a quality car at a moderate price

WHITE TRUCKS

Are Always Chosen Because They Never Wear Out

White Trucks are not only the highest form of motor transport constructed, but they are also real profit-makers and business-builders. Scores of representative Southern California organizations confirm these statements. Day after day—month after month—in all kinds of service—under every conceivable condition—White Trucks have made good. And with the increasing individual business demands, the number of White Trucks owned and operated has been correspondingly increased year after year.

Here Are a Few of Our Locally Prominent Owners Who Use White Trucks Exclusively:

GIVE PEDESTRIANS A CHANCE, HE SAYS.

Editor The Times: Allow street traffic to leave street by turning to the right only. A main cause of delay, confusion and danger comes from the turn to the left across both car tracks and the opposite traffic. No turning around should be allowed anywhere on street.

Look out for the foot passengers. Slow down the traffic to a point that will safeguard the foot passenger, and enough of the street traffic will disappear to make the handling of the balance easy. Too much importance is given the automobiles. The foot passengers furnish almost all the business for the stores. Owners of cars who have business on the crowded streets leave their cars at some other point, and come on foot. A very small proportion of the autoists on Broadway have any real business there. They are there for excitement and fun. Let them give others a chance. These rules apply only to congested districts.

M. L. GUNNISON,
No. 1124 Mound avenue, South Pasadena.

WANTS ELECTRICAL SIGNALING DEVICE.

Editor The Times: Your idea for a traffic edition is timely. The chief cause for traffic delay and a large number of the accidents, is the uncertainty of right of way and improper signaling.

I believe the City Council should pass an ordinance amending Section 10 of the present traffic laws and make it compulsory to have each car equipped both front and rear with some electrical or mechanical signaling device which would be approved by the Board of Police Commissioners. The device should be something uniform, easily recognized by all, with directions that could be instantly flashed by the driver to warn pedestrians and motorists, both ahead and behind, and which could be discerned as easily at night as in the day time. This I believe would go a long way toward solving the present traffic difficulty and at the same time cut down the number of accidents to a minimum.

R. C. MILLS.
No. 1141 Coronado street.

"FOR HIRE" CARS CAUSE CONGESTION.

Editor The Times: It would help some to keep the rent cars—excuse me—the for-hire cars—off the street when not actually in service; that is, forbid their parking indefinitely near all the "prominent" intersections. Not allowed to stand over twenty minutes, you say? Watch and see. Detail an observation squad, the bigger the better.

If two columns of vehicles could cross a street where parking now chokes the intersection down to one, movement throughout the down town districts would be noticeably quickened.

Detroit has just banished the parking automobile from a large area, and while from the nature of this city such action would be rather drastic here, parking between Sixth and Eighth on Broadway could be done away with to advantage; and on Sixth, Seventh and Eighth between Broadway and Spring; perhaps one or two other streets. All lines of street cars could be diverted from this point, leaving it absolutely open for vehicles. Then Los Angeles would be one of the world's models.

VINCENT SMITH.
No. 4554 West Washington street.

EVERYONE SHOULD OBEY THE SIGNALS.

Editor The Times: Above all, the traffic officer should have absolute reign at the street intersection and all pedestrian, as well as vehicle, traffic should move upon his signal. To obviate danger to pedestrians or blockade to automobiles and street cars, pedestrians should only be permitted to cross the street according to the traffic officer's signal at that time, and not run across at random, which not only hinders traffic greatly, but is very dangerous.

Pedestrians crossing the streets in the middle of the block or diagonally at the intersections is a source of great annoyance and hindrance to vehicle traffic and should therefor be discontinued.

Automobiles, or, in fact, all vehicles, should, by no means, be permitted to turn in the middle of the block, as it invariably causes a blockade, especially for the street cars and has been the cause of many serious accidents.

Automobiles stopping in the safety zone at street intersections should leave a space of at least five feet to the machine or vehicle ahead, thus allowing pedestrians to move quickly and safely between street cars and the sidewalk.

The above suggestions strictly adhered to will undoubtedly prove "Safety First" to all.

City Engineer's Office.

ASSOCIATION TO HOLD MEETING.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—President Thomas A. Chivington of the American Association, issued a call tonight for the annual meeting to be held in Indianapolis, Ind., December 8.

The chief question before the club owners is the election of a president. There is reported to be opposition to the re-election of Mr. Chivington and, although he will be a candidate to succeed himself, he said, he would not fight for the office.

Norris L. "Tip" O'Neill, former president of the Western League, and Thomas Hickey of St. Paul, have been suggested as probable candidates for the presidency. Hickey was the first president of the association.

ONE-WAY STREET PLAN SUITS HIM.

Editor The Times: Your proposed traffic number will be interesting. It will provoke answers from cranks, speed bugs, and real students of traffic. Classify mine as you like after reading it. Have been a supporting member of automobile club for six and one-half years and owned cars when all serial numbers read around No. 29000. Also wrote the first published every-day-English synopsis of the first traffic ordinance, when our "finest" commenced in January, 1911, to make all downtown neurasthenic with their whistle blasts.

The matter has been developing splendidly ever since. The whistles were discarded and Anthony's lines put in—also red lines marked for fire plug locations. The little intersection plates or "iron cops" are admirable. The stopping behind street cars on wide streets is detestable. The following are my three main ideals.

(1.) The big merchants notwithstanding, try the one-way-street idea. All jitneys and street cars going north on Main, to come south on Spring. None to go north on Spring. Pair Broadway and Hill the same way, at least as far as jitneys are concerned.

(2.) Station an extra officer, at Sixth and Broadway between 4:00 and 6:30, one with power to arbitrarily turn every third south-bound automobile, east or west at the driver's option, avoiding Seventh and Broadway. During two weeks of Christmas shopping, forbid even momentary parking on Sixth between Main and Hill during the afternoon.

(3.) The safety zones are permanent but there is no logic in going to the right of the sign if there is no street car on the zone at that moment. Going to the right at all times, converts traffic into a funnel again. Very respectfully,

RALPH A. CHASE.

FIRST-STREET CUT IS HIS SOLUTION.

Editor The Times: A thoroughfare on First street through the hill, not less than eighty feet wide, would reduce the congestion on Broadway very materially, at the same time holding the business at the north end. The proposed Second-street tunnel can have but little, if any, effect on it, as it will be too narrow. Besides, present conditions at the west end on Figueroa and Second streets show they have about all the traffic they can now carry, and the tunnel would only increase it, as anyone by observation can see. As for business on Broadway, it would only benefit that south of Second, as the trend of business is south, but an opening on First street will benefit everything south of it, for the same reason that the trend is south. We have no objection to the Second-street bore, but the benefit to the public will be so small, compared to the cost, that this alone will be disappointing.

Respectfully submitted,
J. M. SNODGRASS.

HE NEVER DRIVES DOWN BROADWARY.

Editor The Times: I would suggest as a remedy for the congestion of traffic on Broadway, that The Times start a campaign of education against the selfishness of auto owners who go there when it is not absolutely necessary. I have not taken my auto through Broadway for two years. When I go downtown I leave it at Ninth or Tenth street and walk into town. Parking should be prohibited in the congested district.

Jeffery All-Purpose Truck

MAXIMUM CAPACITY 2,000 POUNDS

Equipped with internal gear drive—duplex governor—odometer—electric lighting and starting—high tension magneto ignition—Jeffery-built stake body.

$1615

(Chassis Price—$1465)

This is an all-'round truck built to give higher efficiency and a longer lower-cost service than any other truck of similar capacity.

You get low gasoline cost because of the duplex governor—the "automatic chauffeur"—which governs the supply of fuel necessary for any speed below fourteen miles. The driver has nothing to do but keep the accelerator way down—the duplex governor does the rest. If the truck is running on the level the engine gets just enough gasoline to maintain the set speed—if it hits a grade the fuel supply is automatically increased to maintain that speed. If mud or sand or snow is encountered the duplex governor is on the job with just enough fuel to give the required power.

Come in and see this truck now. Ask us to show it to you—to demonstrate just what the Jeffery All-Purpose Truck can do for your business.

and thousands of smaller users everywhere

Smith Form-a-Truck has become the leader in motor truck sales and service in the short space of fifteen months.

9,000 have been delivered and are now in daily service, some as parts of fleet equipment for many of the biggest concerns in the country; thousands of others as single units for small companies who find in Smith Form-a-Truck the real solution of economical, efficient hauling.

Smith Form-a-Truck has established a ton-mile hauling cost fully 50% lower than that obtained from any other form of hauling service.

The Smith Form-a-Truck attachment combines with any Ford power plant to make a one-ton truck.

Big, new developments adapt it equally well to Dodge, Maxwell, Buick, Overland and Chevrolet cars.

Attachments to combine with a still greater number of power plants will follow as fast as manufacturing facilities provide.

In daily service in every line of work Smith Form-a-Truck is demonstrating that it will do the work of two or three horse drawn wagons in one-fourth the time and at less than half the cost.

And yet the Smith Form-a-Truck costs no more than a good pair of horses.

Tremendous business developments have established the Smith Form-a-Truck Co. as one of the biggest and best manufacturers in the motor truck field.

Work is already under way doubling the present capacity of the factory.

Plans are fully completed for the production of 30,000 Smith Form-a-Truck attachments next year.

Material is contracted—manufacturing arrangements have been made.

In fifteen months Smith Form-a-Truck has grown from a manufacturing idea to the leading producer of delivery equipment of the world.

And yet the future growth of the Smith Form-a-Truck has but started. Demand is growing in leaps and bounds as users everywhere have had their hauling costs cut below all previous records.

Big companies placing trial orders for a few Smith Form-a-Truck attachments have increased their demand until many are using hundreds.

Users of single Smith Form-a-Truck attachments have found their business radius so enlarged by this new form of hauling that they have been compelled to double and treble their original order to take care of increased business.

In every line of service, under every condition of use, Smith Form-a-Truck furnishes the lowest operating cost ever developed in transportation.

AUTOMOBILE USED AS A WET NURSE.

THERMOS BOTTLE BREAKS JUST AT DINNER TIME.

Driver of Car Gets Ordinary Flask, Fills it with Lacteal Fluid, Heats it up with Water from Radiator, and Baby Pulls Away Contentedly.

One of the unsuspected uses of the automobile is that of wet nurse to "bottle babies." This story comes right off the bat from R. L. Cleveland, superintendent of the Moon Motor Car Company.

"Take it from me," said Mr. Cleveland, "a good Moon auto has a house and lot beaten forty ways when it comes to furnishing all the comforts of home.

"My wife and I were taking a spin out in the country a few days ago, and had the baby along, of course. The youngster is a bottle baby, and we carried his milk in a thermos bottle.

"But we had a bad bit of road to pass over, and in the middle of the stretch, that blamed thermos bottle hit against something hard, and smashed. The baby's dinner was leaking all over the car.

"Well, I stopped and mopped out the tonneau; and the next little country store we passed I bought a fresh bottle of milk. But the wife put up a holler:

"'I can't ever give the baby that cold milk!' she said. 'It'll make him sick just as sure as I do.'

"I was about to turn around and come home. But just that minute I thought of something.

I raced the motor for a few minutes; and then took a tin can and drew some hot water through the petcock on the radiator, and set the milk bottle in the can and in three minutes the baby was pulling away for dear life on a bottle of milk as properly warmed as it could have been in a furnished flat.

"You can't leave the Moon car—no matter what you start!"

Four Cylinder Performance

This is the four-cylinder car that has astonished motordom with its marvelous performance.

This question of cylinders comes right back to performance, after all.

On that score, the Hupmobile is equal to the best motor car manufactured.

This is a statement of fact. It is the essence of what has been proved, time and time again, in demonstration everywhere.

The Hupmobile is the perfected four. Hupmobile engineers have achieved, with a simple, four-cylinder motor, all that the Hupmobile ever could accomplish, no matter how many cylinders it had.

The Hupp Motor Car Corporation base the manufacture of the Hupmobile upon the theory that if four cylinders will do all that any automobile owner and driver wants it to do, why build an engine with more cylinders?

Simple, isn't it?

If you will permit us to demonstrate a Hupmobile for you, we will leave the answer—so far as performance is concerned—entirely to you.

That's fair enough!

Speaking of speed demons:

Well, here's one, but he won't admit. Dr. J. H. D. Budau of Sierra Park, and his wife, who are shown above in their twin-six Packard, [illegible] here to New York in less than six days—five days and nineteen hours, to be exact. This, of course, was their actual running time, as [illegible] at each stop, and really took sixteen days to make the trip. And the doctor says he wasn't hurrying, either. That may be true, but [illegible] want to ride with him if he started out to really smash records.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA MAN, ON PLEASURE TRIP, DRIVES TO NEW YORK IN SIX DAY

LOS ANGELES to New York in ten days on the road, and a total running time, which, if it had been made in continuous running, would have been a trifle over five days and nineteen hours, was the remarkable cross-country record set by Dr. J. H. D. Budau of Sierra Park this season. Dr. and Mrs. Budau returned to Los Angeles for the winter a few days ago and brought back record of their remarkably fast trip.

"We did not really make up our minds to make it a fast trip until our third day out," declared Dr. Budau last week. "We took two days to go to Needles, but on the third day, when we reached Kingman, we decided we would try a little speed.

"We took a side trip to the Grand Canyon of two days, were held up four days by rain at North Platte, Neb., and spent two days in Detroit. It was just sixteen days, all told, from the time we left Los Angeles until we reached New York.

"Our stay at North Platte was our only enforced stop. Nebraska roads are crowned rather steeply, and they are of a black adobe mud that a hard rain turns to a soft-soap consistency. It is simply impossible to stay on the crown of those Nebraska roads when it is raining, even with chains all around.

"We had a very pleasant stay at North Platte, however, and the first day after leaving there drove 429 miles, which was our longest day's run. We drove from Detroit to Buffalo, N. Y., also in a single day, which was one of our largest day's journeys.

"The whole secret of making fast time across the continent lies in having a car in which you can make fast time with comfort over rough roads. Such a great percentage of the cross-country road is rough that unless you can make fast time over the mountain and desert roads it is impossible to make up for it on the smooth going. We slowed up, in fact, when we reached the good going in the Eastern States.

"With our Packard [illegible] however, we were able [illegible] average of over 300 miles [illegible] and were never greatly [illegible] night."

Dr. Budau declares [illegible] highway still lacks much [illegible] well signed. They followed [illegible] ta Fe trail through to [illegible] where they struck the Lin[illegible] way, and traveled it for [illegible] the remaining distance. [illegible] cially difficult for the tour[illegible] low the Lincoln highway [illegible] the small towns, according [illegible] Budau, and he suggests th[illegible] ers through the towns w[illegible] great convenience to the [illegible] ists.

USE BIG "QUAD" AS LOCOMOTIVE.

Country-wide attention has centered upon the way in which Hanlon & Oakes, big contractors of Minneapolis and Sioux City, made their fleet of Jeffery quads take care of the problem of long, heavy hauls on large paving and road-building operations.

While building five miles of concrete highway just outside of Sioux City, Hanlon & Oakes put one of these Jeffery quads in service some time ago and the truck's rugged power, its almost uncanny ability to perform under conditions impossible to rear-driven vehicles, has made it stand out in their work away above trucks of other makes.

Instead of using it for ordinary purposes they used it as a locomotive, working from twelve to fourteen hours every day, Sundays included, towing twelve steel side dump Koppel trucks on a narrow-gauge railway, and each of these trailer trucks was loaded with a yard and a half of stone and sand.

For six weeks this firm kept this quad busy on this job and on the last mile it supplied every bit of materials unaided and kept from forty to fifty men, many wheel barrows and a huge steam mixer busy every second of the day.

HONESTY IS ALWAYS THE BEST POLICY, SAYS LEAC

SO MUCH has been said and written of the quality of motor cars that one often neglects the stability and reliability of the concern behind the advertised product.

M. A. Leach of the Leach Motor Car Company, distributors of the Dort and the King, says that every buyer should know something of the company that manufactures the car.

"We would have little regard for a dealer who would willfully take on a line of cars without first investigating the company behind them, and it is just as important for the owner to be sure that not only the dealer, but the manufacturer will stand behind his product," he said.

"One of the greatest compliments of recent years to the manufacturers of automobiles was that paid the Dort Motor Car Company by C. T. Silver, the largest merchandiser of automobiles in America.

"After a thorough search and painstaking investigation of all the producers of light cars and their product, Silver selected the Dort, and as proof of his convictions, [illegible] per cent. merchandiser is [illegible] fifty carloads of Dort cars [illegible]

BETTER STEEL THAN KRUPP BRAND MADE IN AMERIC

THE Peerless Motor Car Corporation has added another example to the long list of scientific triumphs of America, forced by war conditions. Prior to the war the springs on the Peerless motor cars were all of Krupp steel, made at the famous factory at Essen, Germany. As is well known to owners of high-class cars, Peerless always had the reputation of never have a spring break.

Soon after the opening of the war all stocks of Krupp steel in America was exhausted. Of course, it was absolutely impossible to obtain a renewal of supplies. Foreseeing this condition, as soon as the war broke out, the Peerless factory put its best experts in its world-renowned metallurgical laboratory at work on the problem of developing a [illegible] springs. They had to devi[illegible] and heat treatment which [illegible] make a steel that would [illegible] iency combined with toug[illegible] absolute lack of brittle[illegible] built up the reputation of the [illegible] less springs of Krupp steel [illegible] liability.

FILM STAR CAUTIOUS; USES NON-SKID TIR

A NEW tread on Norwalk tires made its appearance in Los Angeles this week, the Los Angeles Saddlery Finding Company having received a limited shipment. Only about a dozen Norwalk tires with this new tread have been received so far, and the person who has the distinction of purchasing the first of these new tires is J. Warren Kerrigan, the film star. He has just had his new Packard twin six fully equipped with Norwalks, and they are attracting an immense amount of attention about town.

The new tread is said to have more nonskid efficiency than even the regular Norwalk tread.

The tread is raised quite high in the center, much on the same order as a rib tread, and circular bars, which have a tendency [illegible] tion spaces, are [illegible] sides of the casing.

This is a little peep at a small portion of the Bear Valley, where Los Angeles citizens may have an opportunity of renewing their acquaintance with old Jack Frost during the winter months. The man with the skiing equipment is ready for a speedy slide, a jump and a whirl through space. The old-time sleigh-riding party is having a good time on one of the many hills. The autos shown here are the KisselKar hundred point six, the Hudson super-six and the sturdy little Briscoe "zebra."

[illegible] been such a wonderful [illegible] the development of Bear [illegible] summer resort that many [illegible] cabins there and who en[illegible] mountain environment feel [illegible] should be made to [illegible] road open through the win[illegible] that they and others [illegible] go there may have the [illegible] to engage in winter [illegible] take advantage of the [illegible] air in that altitude. [illegible] as the resort has only [illegible] its present proportions in [illegible] years—the greatest in[illegible] the number of cabins, [illegible] patronage has been in the [illegible] closed—no concerted ef[illegible] made until now to have [illegible] road kept open. It was [illegible] assumed that the [illegible] to be benefited would not [illegible] the road expense.

[illegible]ORT POULAR.

[illegible], the resort has experi[illegible] a remarkable growth in [illegible] among those who have [illegible] it and who love the great [illegible] and who feel the lure of [illegible] that the opinion now [illegible] in strong measure that it [illegible] open during the winter [illegible]

[illegible] snow falls to a depth of [illegible]welve feet on the range [illegible] winter, in the valley the [illegible] said to average three feet, [illegible] temperature of about [illegible] above zero. Precipitation [illegible]rature records have been [illegible] by William Knicker[illegible] the Bear Valley Water [illegible] who has been a resident [illegible] Valley for sixteen years. [illegible]ather in the valley is [illegible] the winter," said [illegible]cker. "There are times [illegible] mercury will drop down [illegible] mark, but such drops [illegible]ccasional. The surround[illegible] get the most of the [illegible] protect the valley from the [illegible]. I have often thought [illegible] from the outside could get [illegible] during the winter what a [illegible] be for them."

[illegible] a party headed by For[illegible] sales manager for the [illegible] branch of the Pacific [illegible] Company, and O. K. Par[illegible] manager for the Har[illegible] Company, went into [illegible] over the desert road. The [illegible] the trip in a Kissel hun[illegible], the Briscoe "Zebra" [illegible] supersix. [illegible] road, which is eighty[illegible] long, and which enters [illegible] by way of Victorville, was [illegible]. It was the opinion of Parker, who is a civil engineer and who has given a great deal of attention to road work, that the road can be kept open by an outlay during the winter months not to exceed $1000 per month.

This estimate also includes a certain amount of improvement work to be carried on as the weather permits. Not until the valley is reached, or rather its southern confines where the ridge is topped coming in from the desert, is there any impediment to traffic presented by snow.

BAD ROADS IN SPRING.

In the spring after the snow has thawed, there are several stretches between Big Bear and Baldwin lakes—say about 600 or 700 yards—that always require treatment from the road gang. The surface water from the melting snow turns the road into deep quagmires and there is one stretch of about 300 yards where it is always undermined.

Rock ballast and ditching will obviate such difficulty and nature has provided the rock in suitable size, quantity and conveniently located. On what is known as the Johnson Slide, near Baldwin Lake, there are tens of thousands of tons of rock that has been projected down the mountainside. With the building of chutes at small expense this rock can be loaded onto trucks drawn by tractors or caterpillars and hauled in a few minutes' time to the bad places.

SMALL EXPENSE.

The clearing of the road into the valley as well as the roads that tread their way under the pines and about the camps, can be done at small cost it is estimated. An offer has already been made to do this work for a figure that seems very small. The same offer also includes the running of trucks over the roads to keep them in first class condition for automobiles or wagon travel.

For that matter, after the road has been cleared by one or more snow plows, there will be enough automobile travel to keep it open throughout the winter, save for snow fall periods, when the plows can be brought into service.

During the past two years, it is conservatively estimated that more than $125,000 has been expended in buildings and improvements in Bear Valley. Cabins and lodges, some inexpensive and others costing as much as $12,000, have been built there. Individual water service, carrying pure mountain spring water into the valley, has been completed. Stores have been opened and garages constructed.

PLANS WINTER RESORT.

Last summer thousands made their way there and during the warm summer months, as many as thirty auto stages were engaged in carrying passengers to and from the camp. Besides there were hundreds who made the trip in their own cars or as guests of those who owned cars.

It is argued by those who enjoy the invigorating sports of winter and who would inject "pep" into their systems, that the keeping open of a small stretch of road into the valley should not stand as a barrier against the enjoyment.

In the opinion of one prominent hotel manager of Los Angeles, the advertising of a winter resort located within a few hours run of this city by automobile, would be a feature that would add more fame to the Southland.

"When you can tell your guests that they can ride through the orange groves over our boulevards and then mount the heights to a sheltered valley, where under the giant pines they can have a few days winter sport, you are going to make some hit, believe me" he said. And those who heard him agreed with him.

Said one who heard him: "If that road is open this winter, I'll have a midwinter picnic in Bear Valley—say for a week end. Be some class to that. What?"

The road by the desert is a delightful ride during the winter. The air is balmy, even warm during the middle of the day, and the ascent into the valley is gradual. There is no time that the grade is more than 17 per cent. and this stretch is but a small pull. The grades on the Mill Creek and Crest routes are as high as 21 per cent., with many a hairpin turn.

Again, those who have ridden through the desert know what an appeal it possesses. With its varying light and shade, its solitude and its magnificent distances, the lure it offers is a powerful one. Those with an appreciation of nature in her varying moods are not given to conversation amidst such environment. They succumb to the mood as exemplified by the silent stretches and drink their fill in silence. (Another jolt and there's no telling where we'll stop).

WINTER SPORTS.

All the sports of winter may be enjoyed in Bear Valley. The hills offer ample opportunity for tobogganing and skiing, not mentioning the good old bob sled. Under the sun, the snow solidifies and presents an excellent surface for this class of sport. There is opportunity galore for skating and snowshoeing.

Those who love hunting may hike over the hills on snowshoes in search of wild cats and other predatory animals. There is a ban on killing large game.

Imagine the valley at nightfall, with lights shining from the windows of the cabins and the snow blanketing the branches of the giant pines. Fires blaze in the fireplaces and the horns of approaching autos, with guests for the week end honk through the forest stillness.

Conjure before your mind's eye, the happy greetings that welcome the newcomers as they emerge from their coverings and make their way to the snug cabins where all manner of cheer awaits them.

And there is the dance that closes the day (there are two closed dancing pavilions in Bear Valley and more than one cabin will accommodate dancing parties,) with the sport of tomorrow to come.

A few days in the valley in the winter puts just the amount of "pep" into the system that it demands and one returns to the grind with an amount of ambition that carries one along—until another trip can be figured out.

CONDITIONS GOOD IN ACCESSORY LINE.

According to W. G. Chanslor of Chanslor & Lyons, automobile accessory dealers, who has just returned from Oklahoma, business conditions in the Middle West and the Southwest are better than he has ever known them to be. Chanslor stopped over in this city while returning to his headquarters in San Francisco.

"The automobile accessory houses report a wonderful increase in business throughout all that region, I have learned. Of course, that means that many are buying cars, which fact spells business success. In spite of a certain amount of crop failures, due to drouth, Oklahoma and Kansas are rolling in money."

P. H. Lyon, junior member of the firm, is making a trip in the Northwest, visiting the branch houses of the Chanslor & Lyon string, the greatest in the accessory line on the Pacific Coast.

PHONE COMPANY INDORSES TRUCK.

In the construction department of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company there is a great amount of emergency work, and cars to stand up under the strain must be constructed as near perfect as possible.

Autocars have been used by this company for years and there has never been a time that the Autocar has not met every requirement made upon it, according to Division Superintendent E. A. Irish in a recent communication to M. S. Bulkley & Co., distributors in the Los Angeles territory for the Autocar.

The big nine or western college cross-country run will be held at Purdue's course, LaFayette, Ind., November 25. The eastern intercollegiate classics will be held over the New Haven course the same day.

UNIVERSITY BOYS BACK FROM AUTO TRIP TO NEW YORK CITY

THE two University of Southern California sophomores who started the cross country intercollegiate touring fad this season have returned from the trip that carried them from this city to New York and back in their Chevrolet. L. L. St. John and Ray Watkins were the men of the Trojan ranks who turned the trick.

No records were set on the ride, but some very interesting data concerning roads and other items that go to make up either a good trip or a bad one were obtained.

Leaving Los Angeles, the students followed the Old Trails road to Salt Lake, then picked up the Lincoln Highway. All went along swimmingly until the Middle Western States were reached—then it was one long mud bath after another.

In Wyoming, the going was not so severe, as the roads through the bad lands are pretty hard, but when the highway ran into Nebraska and Kansas trouble in large gobs was their portion.

St. John says that he has bucked many a line, while playing football, but if any of the coaches could develop a defense that would hold like the mud in these two States he would be a wonder, and he now understands the reason for the high-class of defensive football that is played in the Middle West.

Conditions savoring of mud held until the road ran into Illinois, then matters mended for the better. There is something unique about the middle western mud, it not only clings better than any other type of mud, but when it does begin to fly from the spinning wheels it can get into any crack, no matter how small.

The boys were forced to deflate their tires in order to get traction and keep the car from "sinking." Even at that the "Varsity" Chevrolet pulled all the tough places in second and a lot of it in high gear.

Manager D. L. Bolton of the Chevrolet Sales Company arranged the route for the boys and sent the word out ahead of them, so that they were greeted at all the larger cities by Chevrolet owners and dealers. In the East the trip was given a great deal of notice, as it was the first of its kind in motor history.

St. John and Watkins deserve a great deal of credit for making the trip, as it was put through from coast to coast without any mechanical adjustments and only a few minor tire troubles. As has been stated before, no record time was made, as the boys were out to see the country, get over the ground at minimum expense and really have an experience.

One of the best features of the trip was the fact that the U.S.C. students went from Los Angeles to New York without asking any questions as to direction. They were well supplied with maps before they left this city and the remainder of the necessary information was gleaned from the sign posts along the road. Both have risen up and called the Goodrich company blessed on account of the signs placed by that company along the highways and the other roads.

Next year St. John is planning to drive his Chevrolet overland from Seattle to Boston, then from Boston to New Orleans and from there back to Los Angeles via the southern route. When he has done this, there should be but little left to learn about the various transcontinental roads.

ROSS 8 ROSS 8

Twelve Years of Experience

In building automobile parts, gasoline engines and complete cars are behind the ROSS EIGHT, the car that since its first appearance in Los Angeles five weeks ago has become a sensation.

When the automobile industry was young, machine shops were drafted to cope with the demand for cars. One of the largest and best-equipped shops was the Ross & Young Machine Company of Detroit. A contract placed with them carried with it security. Ross wrote contracts and carried away specifications. Such was the confidence reposed in Ross. It warranted the company producing whole cars, which it has done for eight years past, for other companies.

Now, as a result, comes the ROSS EIGHT, built by the builder for himself. So, from the depth of his experience, Ross knows cars and he knows what makes them right and what makes them wrong.

The Ross Eight, with its wonderful power, light weight (3265 pounds), flexibility and limit of refinement, has advantages that are obvious. It is THE CAR.

OLD TIRES STILL GOOD; SAVES MONEY.

Having just returned from an extensive trip through the northern part of the State, including the Yosemite Valley, D. W. Simpson drove his Cadillac eight down to the B. F. Wade Tire and Rubber Company's office this week to have his tires examined before starting on another long trip to Imperial Valley and other Southern California points.

The car had been equipped with Dayton pneumatic tires all around and because of the hard work they had been called on to perform throughout the trip it was thought best to pull them off and put new ones on.

However, after a careful examination Mr. Wade said the tires showed very little wear and that they were in excellent condition to start on another long trip.

"On trips not so hard as this one," says Mr. Wade, "many motorists will tear a tire all to pieces, simply because they let the air pressure get low and run the tire soft."

PRICE OF TRUCK IS TO BE HIGHER.

There is to be an advance in the price of Riker trucks after December 1, according to advices received from the factory at Bridgeport by T. E. Swayne, local manager for the Locomobile Company of America. Scarcity of labor and the increased cost of raw material are given as the reasons for the advance.

Information from the factory is to the effect that there are almost daily desertions from the ranks of employees in the automobile factories to the munition plants. The last-named class of industries, in an effort to keep pace with the demands made upon them, are constantly offering higher wages, it is claimed, to skilled mechanics.

CHINA OFFERS MARKET FOR CARS MADE IN AMERICA.

AMERICAN cars are in demand in those parts of China peopled by Americans and Europeans, according to a resident of Shanghai, who has written to his friend, Dr. S. S. Cooper, of Los Angeles.

The Shanghai resident informed Dr. Cooper that the war has practically stopped the export of European cars and tha the field in China and probably in Russia, was now open, more than before, to American-made cars.

The Marmon, said the man in Shanghai, had greatly impressed him as the car that he wanted, and he requested that Dr. Cooper put him in touch with the Marmon distributor in Los Angeles, in order that he might get data that he was in search of.

"There is no question but what the American manufacturers of automobiles will go after the business that is awaiting them in the Orient," said Al G. Faulkner, distributor in Los Angeles territory for the Marmon. "Of course, the war has changed many things. Cars that are being made abroad are mainly used for army purposes and I understand there is but little exporting of machines by the nations involved.

"American-made cars are better made and can be sold cheaper than the foreign article, and I look to see the United States become the dominant factor in the automobile industry not only in the Orient, but in all other lands."

Benny Kauff, the ex-Federal League slugger who played center field for the Giants last season, although he batted only .264, was considerable help to McGraw's team as he cracked out nine home runs, fifteen three-baggers and twenty-two two-baggers.

Only two of the world's champion Boston Red Sox team are under contract, Shore and Ruth, who were signed to two-year contracts a year ago.

GOV. CANTU PICTURED AS EMPIRE BUILD

THAT the automobile field will be greatly enlarged through the progressive methods of Gov. E. Cantu of Lower California, is the declaration of J. D. Reavis of Calexico, who last week secured from the Bekins-Speers Motor Company, the agency for the Haynes automobiles in the Imperial Valley.

The headquarters for Reavis's agency will be in Calexico, with branches at El Centro and Brawley. Reavis, by the way, is largely interested in development enterprises in the Imperial Valley and contiguous sections.

The Imperial Valley agent states that he has known this car for years. Before taking the agency for such an extensive field, however, he made an exhaustive investigation of the working of the Haynes under the most trying conditions.

ATTENDS AUTO SHOW.

He was an almost daily visitor at the last automobile show; he went to San Francisco to see what the Haynes would do on the hills and on the cobblestones; and to top off his investigations, he asked that a Haynes give a demonstration in the sandy bed of the Los Angeles River.

"Almost any car with partially-deflated tires will go through sand," said Reavis. "But the

A nifty Liberty shopping brougham.

The Pacific Motor Corporation, after great effort, obtained two of these luxurious broughams for Southern California, and are now displaying them at their showroom on Flower street. The body represents some of the highest class of coach work seen on this Coast in this type of car. It is beautifully finished with a most exquisite and pleasing upholstering, which adds a touch of luxury and comfort seldom found in the light inclosed cars. The appointments include a telephone to the driver connected up with the electric system. This is not a speaking tube. There is an elegant morocco case containing card cases, mirrors and various dainty little vanities for the comfort and convenience of milady. The inside handles on the doors and windows are all ivory trimmed with German silver. There is a most convenient compartment for small articles, dancing shoes, etc., which is artistically hidden from view. Five passengers can be comfortably accommodated as there are two clever disappearing Pullman seats in addition to the deep luxuriously upholstered tonneau. The whole make-up of this little car expresses its name, "The Doll Carriage," given it by its many admirers. The two cars received are finished in a Liberty gray, more commonly known as sage-brush gray; the upper half of the cab, the fenders, lamps and radiator are black. This combination of colors presents one of the most pleasing effects yet shown to the Los Angeles critics, and has been pronounced by them as one of the most serviceable color schemes yet offered for general town use.

Thrilling Trip.

ALL CAPITALS CAR IN SNOW.

Blizzards Encountered in Wyoming.

Water Bags Freeze and Oil "Gets Thick."

Plucky Party, However, Goes on its Way.

Passing from the sublime, sunny days of California into the bleak, storm-swept stretches of Wyoming, where it was lost for days in blizzards on roads hitherto unknown to automobilists, the "All States - All Capitals" Hupmobile arrived at Phoenix, Ariz., last Monday, without mishap to the car itself, but after terrible exposure to the occupants. Although but little over 300 miles from Los Angeles and more than a month on the road from this city, it would seem that the progress of the car had been interminably slow. The long time is accounted for, however, by the fact that the route lay via Carson City, Salt Lake, Cheyenne, Denver and Albuquerque, then by a long semi-return trip to Phoenix, before proceeding east. This, coupled with the terrible storms in Wyoming, explains the time spent to accomplish so apparently a short distance.

The brave little party reached Salt Lake without difficulty, although a snowstorm was in progress. The increasing inclement weather kept them in the Mormon capital for three days. A let-up in the snowfall permitted them to leave Utah, when they plunged into one of the most difficult stretches of the entire tour. They went over the Rockies in the wake of a blizzard, through roads that were unknown and dangerous mountain passes. No sooner had they crossed what they considered the worst section than the storm began again with redoubled fury and they were snowed up three more days at Rawlins, Wyo.

TRAIL BLOCKED.

On the fourth day, and by dint of much shoveling, they reached Laramie, from which city they headed for Hermosa, there finding the trail—for it is little more than a trail—to Cheyenne completely blocked. Salisbury, driving the Hupmobile, spent several days attempting to map out another course by way of Fort Logan. By an entirely untraveled cross-mountain pass they finally negotiated a route and after arriving at the capital of Wyoming they laid up for recuperation before starting south.

From Cheyenne they meandered slowly, through violent winds and blinding snows, toward Denver. Little serious difficulty impeded their progress from Denver, as they came again into clearer weather and without further delay reached Phoenix last Monday evening. Phoenix is the thirty-fifth capital visited by the intrepid Hupmobile party. From that point their long-est intercapital run commenced, over 800 miles to Austin, where they expect to arrive some time early this coming week.

GIVE AWAY WATER.

Nights spent in miners' cabins and days in following slippery trails on the edges of half-mile deep canyons, furnished thrills that will never be forgotten. The performance of the Hupmobile, according to Driver Salisbury, has been phenomenal. Upon one of the worst days, with a head wind blowing a gale, the party passed car after car laid up because of overheating. The Hupmobile motor gave no trouble at all and the ten gallons of water that the boys carried for emergency use were given away, a gallon at a time, to help out the "stalled" ones. On the other hand, one morning found the water in their water bags frozen solid and the oil in the crank case as thick as cup grease from the cold. Even at this, no difficulty was experienced in starting.

Fredrick Dickenson, advertising manager for the Hupp Motor Car Corporation, writes Greer-Robbins Company as follows: "When we can take down from Salisbury's own lips the detailed and complete story of the touring car's performance we are going to have one of the biggest things to talk about we have ever had. Hupmobile quality is certainly going through its 'ordeal by fire' and it is coming through unscathed."

J. S. Patterson, who was manager of the party, when it arrived in Los Angeles, October 28, remained with the car until it reached Denver. At that point he returned to begin writing the book that shall tell the wonderful story of the 25,000-mile tour over roads not even mapped in tour books. Upon his arrival at Detroit he was informed of his promotion from the advertising to the publicity department, of which he is now the manager.

Pennsylvania will hold the intercollegiate swimming championship events in the Weightman gymnasium pool, March 2, 1917.

Ex-champion Alfred De Oro will oppose George W. Moore for the three-cushion billiard crown in New York, December 9, or a few days later. Moore originally won the trophy in the Chicago tourney, March, 1915. Moore defended it against De Oro, but lost to Huey of Chicago, who forfeited to De Oro. The Cuban defended it against August Kieckhefer and Lloyd Javna, but lost to Charles Ellis of Pittsburgh, who after defending it against Pierre Maupome lost to Charles McCourt, who in turn lost to Heal, who was beaten by Moore.

KEEN INTEREST SHOWN IN EVERY NEW MODEL.

BY R. D. MAXWELL,
Branch Manager Studebaker Corporation.

THE interest displayed by the general public in the plans of automobile manufacturers relative to new models is a source of much wonder. Automobile news now vies for favor with the telegraph news and happenings of purely local interest. And one reason for this, perhaps, is because the public is more mortor-wise than ever. A goodly portion of these readers of automobile announcements may not be immediately concerned in the purchase of a car, but their interest seems to indicate that the day is not far off when every man, with what may be considered a comfortable income, will be the possessor of a motor car.

Studebaker announcements have always been milestones in the progress of the industry, and each year has found the news of a new Studebaker filled with significance to the motor car buying public. This manufacturer's position in the automobile world is a rather unique one, and certainly a difficult one for any maker of fine cars to maintain so persistently. And because Studebaker has given so much real, tangible, dollar-for dollar value in cars, in the past, the public has come to look forward to something startling with each successive announcement.

When Studebaker brought out the Series 17 models for 1916, it proved that quantity production, scientific manufacturing methods, and a wealth of manufacturing experience could reduce prices and yet maintain high standards of quality. And now, in the Series 18 cars just announced, Studebaker once more startles the motoring public and lives up to all expectations.

Because of the refinements and improvements in the Series 18 cars, resulting in smoother running, more comfort and greater convenience, these cars stand out pre-eminently as the leaders of all Studebaker models yet produced.

It's Safe.

STEAM TO BE USED IN CLEANING ALL MOTORS.

ONE of the features of the equipment of the new quarters of Lynn C. Buxton, local distributor for the Stearns-Knight, will be the cleaning of motors with steam instead of with distillate. After December 15, the Los Angeles home of the Stearns-Knight will be located at Twelfth and Figueroa streets.

It is claimed for the steam method that it not only leaves the motor in a much better condition than when cleaned with distillate, but also eliminates the fire hazard.

The new Buxton plant now nearing completion will be equipped with the latest machinery and appliances for the repairing of cars. The salesroom where the Stearns-Knight models are to be shown and the offices will have been treated in an artistic manner and will have every convenience and comfort almost to the point of luxury, when the preparation for the opening day has been completed.

"The great increase in our business has made necessary the move. We require bigger quarters," said Buxton.

THE NEW SERIES 18 CARS

With Seven New and Exclusive Features

THE DAY OF HIGH PRICES FOR FINE CARS HAS PASSED

STUDEBAKER NEW SERIES 18 CARS, with seven new, special and exclusive improvements are FINE CARS, warranted by us to completely satisfy the most particular and fastidious persons. We believe these cars represent the greatest automobile values ever offered to the buying public, and that persons accustomed to paying $2000 or $3000 for cars will, upon examination, concede that these Studebakers equal ANY such cars in quality of material, design, workmanship and finish, and also concede the truth of our statement that THE DAY OF HIGH PRICES FOR FINE CARS HAS PASSED.

Studebaker has centered its great resources and experience on ONE BASIC DESIGN, with all parts interchangeable for both the FOUR and SIX, except the motor. One equipment of machinery, tools, character of manufacturing operations and quality of material suffices for both models.

No revolutionary changes have been made in the basic Studebaker design for four years. The same group of EMINENT ENGINEERS AND DESIGNERS are responsible for the evolution of the new Series 18 models, yet the many improvements and refinements adopted as the result of our experience have made these new models decidedly the best cars we have ever produced. They are sold with our guarantee of prompt and efficient service and the replacement without charge for defective parts, if any are developed, within one year from date of sale. We guarantee our cars to give absolute satisfaction, provided they receive the care a highly developed piece of machinery should receive.

The Series 18 cars are leaders in the industry, history makers, which put Studebaker in the lead with new and greater values at popular prices. Studebaker has led the way in nearly every forward step in automobile construction in which the owner profited. STUDEBAKER WAS THE FIRST —to produce a six-cylinder car selling for less than $2000;

—to produce a 50 horse power car selling for less than $2000;

—to produce a seven-passenger car selling for less than $1000;

—to establish a uniform, international service system for owners;

—to produce the now popular crown fenders;

—and, finally, Studebaker was the first manufacturer of FINE CARS to offer its product at medium prices, thus leading the way to greater values and compelling other manufacturers to increase values and reduce prices.

Studebaker has $13,000,000 invested in the most efficient and modern plants in which it manufactures all of its engines, axles, transmissions, differentials, bodies and tops. Middlemen's profits (parts makers) included in the price of assembled cars and small manufacturers' cars are almost entirely eliminated in Studebaker selling prices. It is necessary to pay from 50% to 100% more than Studebaker prices for cars of corresponding value.

Seven New Improvements and Additions

GUN-METAL FINISH. Original, rich and exclusive finish of deep lustre and permanency, applied in TWENTY-FIVE OPERATIONS. No finer finish is possible than that of the Series 18 Cars. A permanent body finish depends largely on the slow and careful building up of the different coats of color and varnish—the Studebaker way. Fenders and aprons are rich, black enamel.

NEW AUXILIARY CHAIRS. Arm chairs, original and exclusive with Studebaker, patent applied for. These large, roomy and comfortable chairs fold up and slide under rear seat when not in use. They dispense with the unsightly recesses in the tonneau floor and with slit carpets, commonly used in other cars. When these chairs are underneath the back seat the Studebaker is a roomy, beautiful FIVE-PASSENGER CAR—instead of the regular seven-passenger car.

REVERSIBLE FRONT SEAT. Original and exclusive with Studebaker, the front passenger seat is reversible so that passenger can sit facing tonneau or facing forward. Both front seats are covered with leather, have large and handsome robe strap, and are adjustable to all leg lengths. No more comfortable seats are found in any car, regardless of price.

NEW STORM CURTAINS. Of the recent Blackmore design and patent, opening with the doors and thereby preventing crouching and crushed hats. Studebaker, we believe, is the first maker to offer this improvement as standard equipment.

IMPROVED BODY AND UPHOLSTERY. The body is elegantly finished and equipped—inside and out. The handsome foot rail, wide scuff plates, wide doors, handsome door trim, carpeting, etc., all demonstrate quality and refinement. The upholstery is semi-glazed, straight-grained, genuine leather, made to special Studebaker forms, with the best curled hair and long coiled springs. Tonneau carpet all wool, bound with leather instead of cheap, raveling thread-stitch. The top is made of the finest grade silk mohair, bound with leather edging, a feature found on few cars at any price. The body materials, upholstery and workmanship of Studebaker cars are unsurpassed, and the interior finish and detail of the bodies are LUXURIOUS and COMFORTABLE.

YALE SWITCH LOCK. Of pin tumbler type, Studebaker design, insuring convenient and safe protection against theft or unauthorized use of the car.

NEW WINTER TOP made exclusively for Studebaker cars. Noiseless. Quickly and easily put on or taken off, and fitting perfectly.

Mechanical Improvements

Improvements have been made in the Series 18 Motor, insuring greater smoothness, flexibility, quietness and economy. All noticeable vibration has been eliminated by superior piston design and the stiffening of the motor frame.

The Studebaker-Schebler carburetion system has been developed so that both the FOUR and SIX are the most ECONOMICAL motors on the market in ratio to power.

Studebaker lubrication has been further improved. The system is positive and eliminates all lubrication troubles. Waste through the exhaust is overcome and practically no surplus oil reaches the combustion chamber to burn and form carbon.

The chassis frame is the same strong light construction which has characterized all Studebaker cars. The perfection of our chassis design is convincingly proven by satisfaction given in over 285,000 Studebakers produced and sold.

The full-floating rear axle construction remains the same in principle as heretofore, but has been further improved and strengthened. This type of axle is used by practically all leading manufacturers, thereby proving its mechanical superiority.

The best quality of steel and alloy is used throughout. Every gear is of CHROME NICKEL STEEL, specially cut by Studebaker.

In the differential, which has four bevel gears, Timken bearings are used throughout. Only eleven of the three hundred different cars on the market use as many Timken bearings as Studebaker, and the average price of these cars is $2,000.

The Wagner Lighting and Starting System is individual to Studebaker cars and has been further improved by increasing the cranking power 12%.

The Willard Storage Battery is absolute assurance against ignition, lighting and starting failure. Studebaker uses a 100 AMPERE hour battery.

Overland Bigness Is Your Advantage

To the extent that it enables you to get a better, bigger car for less money than you would otherwise have to pay, you are interested in the size of the Overland Industry.

Bigness is a tremendous advantage to the Automobile Manufacturer.

It enables him to buy better materials at less cost.

It enables him to standardize methods so that his manufacturing cost per car is less.

It gives him a lower selling and overhead expense per car.

Compared with other producers of cars of like class, Overland has led in volume of production and sales for years,—has the great advantage of bigness.

And Overland has always given that advantage to car buyers in the matter of price.

This is clearly shown in any comparison of Overland quality, size and price with any similar car.

Take the $795 Overland.

Everybody knows its quality—it has the 35 horsepower Overland motor, made famous by the praise of over a quarter million Overland owners.

It is a great big car for the price, 112-inch wheelbase, big, broad, wide, deep seats and plenty of leg room.

Long 48-inch cantilever springs make it the easiest riding car in its class.

The $925 Overland Six and the smaller four at $635 show to the same advantage in a quality price comparison with other cars.

Now is a good time to buy as prices cannot long be maintained at present low levels.

Come in and see and drive these Overlands.

WHO'S WHO IN THE AUTO WORLD.

BY A. C. ROBBINS,
Of the Greer-Robbins Company.

HUGH CHALMERS was born in Dayton, O., October 3, 1873. After an education in the public schools he began his business career at the age of 14 as office boy for the Dayton sales branch of the National Cash Register Company. While so employed he attended business college in Dayton. From the position of office boy Mr. Chalmers rose successively to office salesman at the age of 18, to sales agent at the age of 20, to district sales manager for Ohio at 24. In this position, after ten years' service with the National Cash Register Company, he had twenty-four sales agents and salesmen under his management. At 25 he was taken into the N. C. R. factory to be assistant sales manager. At the age of 29 he became vice-president and general manager. This position he held until 1907.

In 1907 he entered the automobile industry. While eminently equipped as a manufacturer sales manager, Mr. Chalmers had no automobile experience. had, however, an idea, and that was to manufacture a high qu automobile to sell at a medi price. At that time the E. R. Tho as-Detroit Motor Company making considerable progre public favor with the Thoma troit car. Mr. Chalmers's idea to build a companion car—no real automobile, but smaller —to sell for less. He entered Thomas-Detroit company, and 1908 the first Chalmers car was p duced. The name of the comp was changed to the Chalmers- troit Motor Company.

The new Chalmers "30" fille want. The car proved out in the leading endurance tests, climbs and races in the next years. It became one of the popular cars in its price class. 1910 Mr. Chalmers became the co trolling factor of the Chalmers M tor Company and has been pr dent of the Chalmers company of its predecessors, the Chal Detroit Motor Company and the R. Thomas-Detroit Motor Comp since he entered the field in 19 Under his leadership the plant grown from a single building which the first Chalmers-Detr cars were assembled from bought outside) to one of the larg automobile manufacturing plants the country, where practically ev part of the car is made under t supervision of Chalmers inspect

Those who are associated with Chalmers (and the word "associ ed" is used advisedly for no who remains long with Mr. C mers ever works for him.) attri the great success of the Chal Company in a great measure to Chalmers's own initiative and ness ability. His product has sold purely on quality basis, a is no exaggeration to say that Chalmers was the first car in so-called medium price class w was sold on the basis of quality not price. Mr. Chalmers is a gressive manufacturer. Mo ideas have always prevailed in Chalmers factory, and it is knowledged by automobile exp to be today one of the best equi and up-to-the-minute plants in country.

Mr. Chalmers has about him the important positions of the co pany, men who work with him perfect harmony. There is strong order of precedence in Chalmers company; it is ra teamwork. There is only one in the Chalmers plant—to build Chalmers cars the best they can built for the money and to sell that are built.

Hugh Chalmers.

This man started his business career as an office boy. Then, in quick succession, he became a salesman, a district sales manager, and finally president and general manager of the Chalmers company. Employees of the company do not work "for" him, they work "with" him.

DARIO RESTA'S RECORDS ARE PARTLY DUE TO TIRES USED.

"GOODRICH Silvertown tires carried Dario Resta into the championship, and the cash reward that goes with it, as well as a large amount of first-place money in the various races he captured," said a Goodrich representative yesterday.

"In fact, 80 per cent. of the money-winning places during the 1916 races were taken by cars with Silvertown equipment, all other makes of tires combined taking 20 per cent. of the prize money positions.

"Silvertowns have played an even more prominent part in the races this year than even this fact indicates. Out of thirty-four actual races, not including hill-climbs or county-fair events, Silvertowns have won twenty-nine, but five races having been won by any other tires.

"Eighteen track records in competition have been established on Silvertown tires—which does not include records made in elimination trials, and noncompetitive spurts for two or three laps. Three competitive records have been set up by cars which were not Silvertown-equipped.

"As an explanation of this long string of victories, it is only necessary to state than 106 Silvertown equipped cars have gone through races this season without changing a tire. But sixteen cars with tires other than Silvertowns have shown this same immunity from tire trouble.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT NEW RACE RECORDS.

C. J. "DOC" CADWELL of the Miller Manufacturing Company, who has been closely identified with the national auto racing game during the past ten years, contributes the following:

"One of the leading motor publications publishes a chronological creport in the November number, giving complete data concerning all the Vanderbilt and Grand Prix races of the past ten years. It is interesting to note that although the Vanderbilt and Grand Prix world records were broken in the recent Santa Monica events, the winning machines were equipped with motors of less than half the piston displacement of those used in all the previous races. It is also interesting to note that only three tire changes were made during the entire Grand Prix race. I consider this a wonderful record, because the average speed was better than eighty-five miles an hour..

"These things prove that light motors, with light reciprocating parts, have the highest speed, and have come to stay. I am also convinced that racing has been responsible for the wonderful development of the stocyk car of today. Stock cars have showed up wonderfully during the past year. Another thing which closely identifies Los Angeles with the racing game is the fact that Harry A. Miller is the man who invented, manufactures, and is responsible for the Miller carburetor—the pot that has won more races during the past year than all other carburetors combined. In fact, Resta, Aitken and Rickenbacher, who won the Goodrich and Bosch trophies, as the three big champions of the season, used the Miller carburetor exclusively. Ninety-five per cent. of all the other racing drivers also use this instrument."

Gold for Building.

NEW CADILLAC HOME WILL COST MILLIONS.

DON LEE, California distributor for the Cadillac, received word last week that the Cadillac Motor Car Company will start work at once on a new factory to cost $2,000,000.

"When completed the plant will be one of the largest and without question the most modern in the world," said Mr. Lee.

"Fifty acres of land have been purchased for the new buildings. When completed all the department of the Cadillac company will be housed in this new plant.

"While the present Cadillac factory is recognized throughout the automobile industry as being the finest-equipped motor-car plant in the world, the company's business has outgrown present facilities. It also is desirable to concentrate all operations of production in one plant.

"The site of the proposed new plant, on which it is expected ing operations will begin next is regarded as one of the most vantageously situated in Detroit western boundary is the junction the Michigan Central Railro main line with the Lake Shore sion of the New York Central. former is the southern bounda the property, with the latter a northern boundary, with the of the Grand Trunk a few fee yond. The Wabash and the Marquette are only a short d to the west, which assures imity to the Pennsylvania also that road enters Detroit over Pere Marquette lines. In the ter of shipping facilities the said to be without equal in De

"The land is said to have approximately $750,000. The not including equipment, will, estimated, represent an inves in the neighborhood of $2,000, It probably will give employm 10,000 or 12,000 persons.

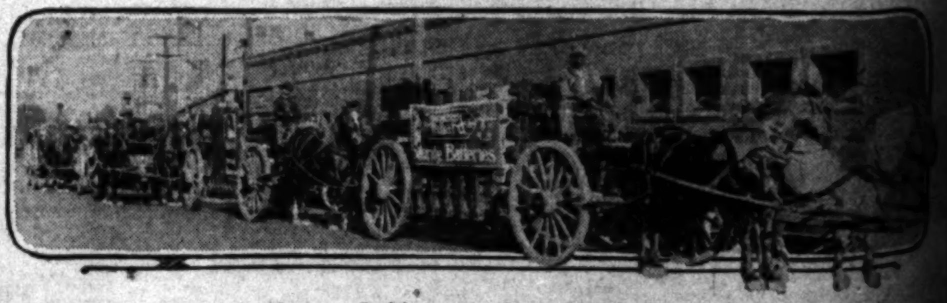
"The main advantage of the illac Motor Car Company wi the acquisition of facilities ade to handle its growing busine the grouping of its various de ments in one great plant. At ent its main plant is at some tance from its foundries, its metal divisions and its body- ing plant. Since the Cadillac pany produces nearly all part its cars and builds, finishes trims the bodies, etc., the ization of its operations will to increase the efficiency of an stitution already recognized for efficiency."

TRUCK REPLACES MULE IN ME

Concerning the strenuous and freedom from breakd which may be expected from a constructed motor truck, J. J. C van, sales manager of the Commercial Auto Company, utors of White trucks, made the lowing report this week:

"When the American forces dashed into the Mexica derness early this year in an to capture Pancho Villa and up the reign of border bandits," Mr. Canavan, "their sensation vance, far beyond the usual of operations from a military was made possible by the motor trucks in bringing plies from the rear. What camel does in the Sahara, the in the Andean Mountains, the in Mexico, and the mule in the was accomplished by White fleets with this expedition. The honored army mule was beat not banished; beaten in the test ever imposed in army service. And although no forces ever before attempted motor trucks under such conditions, it is almost certa no similar expedition will e without them."

Bates College running track ing widened to twenty feet and tended so as to make a straightaway. It is the intentio invite the New England legiate Association to hold its track and field meet on Field next May.



A record shipment of starting batteries.

What is claimed to be the largest shipment of starting batteries ever received in Los Angeles, week for the Western Auto Electric Company. The shipment was made up of 550 Willard teries, and as the picture shows, it required a fleet of four big trucks to deliver them. The ship a big box car.

WATTS TO HAVE ATHLETIC CLUB.

The boxing circuit has been extended to include Watts, and the Columbia Athletic Club will stage its first bouts in that town on December 14. William Huddy, the organizer of the club, has not yet announced his opening card, but has a number of good men lined up for the six bouts which will be staged, including a rattling good main event. Huddy has several local sportsmen associated with him in the new organization. About the first of the year he will begin the erection of a baseball park adjoining the club, which will be used by teams from Long Beach, Compton and other places near by.

FOG PREVENTS AIR EXCURSION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Dec. 2.—Aviator Herbert Munter is awaiting the signal to start from the Lake Union hangar in an effort to set a new military non-stop flight record for the Pacific Northwest in the first aeroplane manufactured here.

"My orders are to take the aeroplane up and fly to Tacoma and other cities on salt water," said Munter today, "with Portland as the possible objective."

The flight was set originally for today, but the fog and impending rain prevented it.

GAME NO. 24.—"Danish Gambit."

Played in the pending handicap tournament of the Los Angeles Chess and Checker Club.

White—Anderson.	Black—Pridham.
1—P-K4	P-K4
2—P-Q4	PxP
3—P-QB3	PxP
4—B-QB4	PxP
5—QBxP	Q-K2—A
6—Q-K2—B	P-QB3
7—Kt-QB3	P-QKt4—C
8—B-Kt3	P-QR4
9—Kt-KB3	P-R5
10—B-B2	P-R6
11—B-R1	B-Kt2
12—Castles	P-KB3—D
13—P-K5	Kt-R3
[illegible]	[illegible]
31—BxKt and White wins.

A—A move which has sometimes been recommended but is not much in favor, being altogether too difficult a defense for actual play. In an analysis of mine in the British Chess Magazine the continuation 5—P-Q4, QKtxP, B-KKt5 is examined, which I think gives Black a good game.

B—Kt-QB3 is the usual move here. In reply to 6—P-QB3, White can then continue 7—Q-Kt3 and if Black plays P-Q4, capture with Bishop.

C—Black may have played P-Q4 here, offering to return one of the Pawns gained so as to exchange Queens.

D—Black has made quite a few Pawn moves already. It was time to get out some of the pieces.

E—White has now a winning game, even though still two Pawns behind. The move made is stronger than Q-R5, which might be answered by 22—Q-R3; 23—KtxPch, K-K1; 25—QxQ, PxQ; 26—KtxR, Kt-K2 with better chances than he obtains against the text move.

F—Black gives up a piece hoping to liberate himself through the exchange of Queens.

G—Protecting his King's Bishop's Pawn and probably hoping for Knight instead of Rook to take the Queen's Pawn. But as will be seen the Knight can take safely.

H—Apparently winning a piece, or at least the exchange, as the threat Kt-Kt6ch needs to be guarded against.

I—The point of White's play, beginning with his twenty-seventh move. Now the Black Knight is lost and White wins easily.

NORMAN MACBETH IS STILL WINNING.

Refuses to Become Blase and Takes Class A Prize at Los Angeles Country Club—Big Qualifying Round Begins at Griffith Park Links.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

Notwithstanding a moistened course, scores at Annandale were quite midsummery. In the match play against amiable old Col. Bogey, who seems to be enjoying a renaissance just now, Dr. J. H. Warner won first place with 10 up, with an 8 handicap. A. C. Volk was second with 6 up, and Victor Kleinberger third with 5 up, both 8 handicap. Three 16-handicap men achieved 4 up—Ben Leslie, Henry Newby and H. G. Chaffee.

At the Los Angeles Country Club Norman Macbeth, who refuses to become blase about these things, won the class-A prize with an even score. C. W. Pendleton won class B with 5 down on 7 handicap. Scores getting a little damper at Los Angeles.

A ball sweepstakes at the Midwick medal-play handicap was won by W. J. Bowman with 85-12-73. W. K. Jewett was second with 78-4-74, and H. J. Schoder third with 100-24-76.

Mr. Jewett, whose return to Midwick is welcome, appears to be in good golfing form. That 78 on a damp course is good evidence thereof.

They began a big qualifying round for the fourth equipment tournament on the Griffith Park links yesterday, which will conclude today, and pairings for match play will be made.

At San Gabriel, also, they started the first round match play for the R. A. Fowler cup, which will conclude today. Sixty-four qualified.

PRAISE MOTOR GOGGLES.

The Worcester (Mass.) ROAD BUILDING IS A NEW SCIENCE.

Road building is developing a new science that calls for the highest engineering skill. The advance of the motor car and truck has brought new problems that must be studied and solved. This statement is made by the good roads committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

In Massachusetts 82½ per cent. of all traffic on the State highway system last year was motor driven. In New York cars, trucks and motor busses constitute nearly seven-tenths of all wheeled traffic exclusive of street cars and motorcycles. Similar conditions soon will prevail in all parts of the country.

MANY NEW CARS FOR N. Y. SHOW.

Seventeen new makes of cars will make their maiden bow at the New York show in January, which promises to be the largest exposition of cars yet brought together.

There will be a greater number of exhibitors than ever before and every inch of available space on four floors of the Grand Central Palace has been allotted and there is a large waiting list of concerns who would like to show their products. An effort is being made to provide space for late applicants. For the first time in the history of national shows, all the space allotted to car exhibitors was filled at the first drawing. Besides it was found necessary to take space for motor cars on the fourth floor that was usually given over to accessory displays.

A NEW WRINKLE.

A new wrinkle in church supper management bids fair to make country church suppers much more profitable than formerly. Rural churches in Southern New Jersey are noted for their oyster suppers and committees in charge have started the practice of advertising that they will reserve tables for out-of-town motoring parties. The plan has met with much success.

PLAYERS GIVEN NEW CONTRACTS

Injured Ones are to Receive Full Pay.

Herrmann Does Some Tall Explaining.

Ten-day Clause Retained by Commission.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Baseball players in the American and National Leagues, if injured on the field, will get their salaries in full until the expiration of their contract, according to a new form of contract adopted tonight at a special meeting of the National Baseball Commission.

Under the old contract club owners were obliged to pay injured players for only fifteen days, and at the end of that time could dismiss them.

"However, that was not usually the case, despite the charges of David Fultz, president of the Baseball Players' Fraternity," said August Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati Nationals and chairman of the commission.

"Mr. Fultz has charged that the contracts were unfair to players who had been injured, as he alleges, in certain cases they were not compensated. The charge is groundless. The commission, I think, has gone further than Mr. Fultz had hoped. The new contract means that a player, if injured, will be paid in full and the contract cannot, under any circumstances, be terminated until it expires."

The clause under which a player can be dismissed after receiving ten days' notice and the optional clause were retained in the new contract, which, Mr. Herrmann said, contained only minor other changes. The optional clause provides that a player can be held under reserve if sent to a minor league.

The members of the commission, Mr. Herrmann, President John K. Tener of the National League, and President B. B. Johnson of the American League, were in conference with their counsel in an all-day session before details of the contract were agreed upon.

The Executive Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association will meet in New York, December 8. At the meeting several important questions regarding the tennis situation throughout the country will be acted upon.

BUSINESS IS GOOD ON PACIFIC COAST.

Marked improvement in general business conditions in the San Joaquin Valley and the coast between Los Angeles and San Francisco is the trend of reports furnished the Los Angeles branch office of the Master Carburetor Corporation by its field representatives.

"The improvement has been very strong," said C. G. Harnem, manager of the Los Angeles branch. "So rushed with work has been our Sacramento agency that one representative remained there for ten days and gave assistance in placing Master carburetors on cars."

You Can't Take Out More Than You Put In

When you sit behind the steering wheel, turn a switch, press a button and hear your motor start—do you ever ask yourself—

"How much electrical current is consumed by my starter and lights?

"Is sufficient current being restored to the battery to keep it fully charged?"

Don't guess about these things—make sure.

A lot depends on your battery—but not everything.

There are other parts of the electrical system—and you should know how they work if you expect the best results.

We have a booklet—it's short and free—that tells all about keeping your battery full of "pep." Ask for a copy.

More Calls—More Profit—With a Vim

The butter and egg dealer, and the grocer, needs a delivery car that will make lots of stops and yet get over the ground—it must start quickly and go fast. It must be sturdy, because of the unusual strains of that kind of going.

And it must have style, because it is the one biggest and best advertisement he has. The Vim motor is built for quick starts and rapid running, and at the same time is of the most powerful construction.

The axles, frame, gears are as strong as those on a truck of twice its rated capacity.

The lines are as trim as those of a pleasure car at twice the price.

The Vim can give you this combination of speed, strength and style only because it is built especially for delivery work.

And the price is extraordinarily low because of huge production. The Vim Company is the largest exclusive producer of motor delivery cars in the world.

Buy a Vim on deferred payments. Pay for it as it pays for itself.

PROVES HIS RIGHT.

Chauffeur who Tries to Sell Costly Auto at Low Price and Suffers Arrest on Suspicion Gets Released When Other Machine is Found.

After being arrested by Deputy Sheriffs Wright and Strong on advice from Oakland, Russell Fraser, suspected of stealing the car which he was trying to sell at a low figure in Los Angeles, was released yesterday afternoon. The machine in his possession was a car of costly make and when he tried to dispose of it for $350 to a garage man inquiry into his action resulted in a report from Oakland that his description tallied with a man who had driven away a car of similar make without getting the owner's consent.

Mr. Fraser is a chauffeur and operates a stage line from San Jose to Oakland. He maintained steadfastly that the car was his own property; that he was financially embarrassed and had a right to sell for any price, and that he was innocent of the charge. The Oakland authorities wired that the car they had been seeking had been found and that consequently it could not be the machine in possession of Mr. Fraser, who was turned loose.

STANDARD 8

Made by Standard Steel Car Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.

For 1917—The First "8" with a Magneto

The new 1917 "Standard Eight" is here. We never have seen car-stamina and car-beauty combined to such a high degree.

The Standard is the first "eight" to be magneto-equipped. This means freedom from ignition troubles. It insures "red-blooded" performance.

So exhilarating is the new Standard's world of power—so delightful its responsiveness, its zip and zest and "go"—that when you drive this car the road seems down hill all the way. You wonder what the lower gears are for!

How your eyes will brighten when they see the Standard! With clean, strong sweep of masterly lines from stem to stern, it is as proud as an ocean-going yacht. For man-made beauty none can surpass this new car.

With a 127-inch wheel-base, the roomy tonneau makes riding as "free and easy" as you please. Every wealth of equipment and refinement is here.

There's a genuineness to the Standard (even to the leather) that's mighty refreshing these days.

And here's a secret—you'd hardly believe a big car could be so economical.

FOOTBALL IS MOVING WEST.

Big Three Lose Supremacy on Gridiron.

Open Game is Responsible for Change.

Pollard Unable to Keep Feet in Mud.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

Shades and shadows of Poe, Butterworth, Coy and Shevlin! How the mighty have fallen, faded and flopped.

And it seems so short a time since Yale, Harvard and Princeton reserved the divine right to rule the football universe.

There was a time when beating one of these institutions would have been regarded in the same class as spitting into the eye of a sacred image. Not only was it hard to do in the old beefy days, but the smaller teams went onto the field with their knees rattling like castanets, awed by the reputations of their adversaries and in the full knowledge that nature had selected them for a chopping block.

To go beyond the confines of the 'big three," in quest of material for the All-American team, was considered in the light of sacrilege and not according to Hoyle or Camp. It was an unwritten law that no perfectly good and sound athlete could grow up and exist outside of the exclusive circle.

But the open play has made all colleges free and equal, and the secondary or "bush" colleges have at last come into their own. One of the easiest things that they do is to gird their loins, don their head gears and knock the spots off the one-time behemoths. Blending the blue of Yale and the crimson of Harvard into a common hue that is not unlike the color of mud, has become a popular outdoor pastime.

Reading some of the scores of today must be sufficient to make DeWitt, Terry, Tad Jones and other mildewed heroes of the past turn over in their figurative football graves.

The sway of Yale, Harvard and Princeton was for many years logical. The American game, which is merely a revision of the original Rugby, was cradled on the Atlantic seaboard, and these colleges were among its first exponents. They were supreme in their chosen profession. Later, however, the game westward took its course. Pennsylvania with Hare, McCracken and other bone-breakers in their battle togs cried hoarsely for recognition, and Harvard at times wondered why it ever had consented to rub wishbones with a lot of low-browed coal miners. Michigan emerged from the deep and trackless forest with a chip on its shoulder and Heston in the back field. Yale, Harvard and Princeton looked over their calling list and found that they didn't have a speaking acquaintance with anybody by the name of Heston. Way out on this edge of the country, California and Stanford produced a few teams which looked good enough to play some of the best eastern teams off the gridiron and into the bleachers.

History shows that the "big three," with new and vigorous teams being whelped all over the map, had no cinch retaining their supremacy under the slaughter-house system of play, and whatever superiority they or other big universities may have retained when beef was the essence of successful football, was doomed to disappear with the advent of open play.

The only thing that prevented the Yale bulldog from being mistaken for a dachshund was its belated stand in the game with Harvard, while the Princeton Tiger has on numerous occasions found that between its rear legs is a most satisfactory resting place for its once stiff, proud caudal appendage. The forward pass and other subtle devices have proven great levellers of pride and prestige.

The season closes without a bona fide country-wide champion having been established. However, this is not unusual, for it is a question whether in the last decade any eleven has proven to the satisfaction of all concerned, that it was the best in the business. In fact, considering the scope of the game, and the innumerable teams involved, it is a physical, as well as a geographical impossibility to decide the title with the same degree of clearness as in baseball, track, boxing and other lines of sports.

Furthermore, the best team in football not infrequently fails to win, luck and the "breaks" having probably a greater influence on the ebb and flow of human events in football than in any other sport. Then again a really great team may lose some of its minor games because perfecting a certain system of play to use against some particular rival of its own class, and having been developed along this line is impotent to combat the system of some weaker eleven.

The situation in the East is shot to pieces. Pittsburgh, one of the vulgarly new colleges, claims the title, as does the Army. Brown would have put in an equally good claim but for its defeat by Colgate. Brown numbers a long list of victims, and its double-barreled victory over Yale and Harvard stamped the Providence team as the season's sensation. The Pirates, while having a remarkable record, did not tackle the bigger game of the East, while they all looked alike to Brown. The path of the Providence players was all cluttered up with high-class victims, and until they went down in the mud before Colgate, they had not been defeated, and neither had their goal line been sullied by the feet of mortal man.

But for that turkey day [illegible]ing, Brown probably would have had the most honest claim to the championship. Now, by virtue of its victory over Brown, Colgate files a counter-claim, which is somewhat weakened by that college's defeat by Yale.

It is the history of football that nearly every great team is fashioned around some outstanding figure, who excells in some particular department, such as speed, line plunging or kicking, or who towers in all-around ability. This would seem to be true of Brown. The Providence team is a great performer on a dry field, but a poor "mudder." It went down to defeat before Washington State at Pasadena last New Year's on a field seething with mud, and it was while playing in a meadow of mire that it experienced its first defeat of the present season.

The only conclusion to be drawn is that Pollard, the great [illegible] back, and probably the fastest man on the gridiron, cannot get away on a soft surface, and with Pollard bogged down, Brown can make little progress along life's slippery [illegible]. Pennsylvania, while not boasting the record of Brown, seems to be a team built along the same lines, with Berry as the cornerstone. The Coal Miners owe most of their success to Berry's backfield work, and it is upon him that they will depend mainly in their battle with the University of Oregon at Tournament Park, January 1. Judging from long-distance reports, old [illegible] Berry's son is a real thoroughbred of the gridiron—one of nature's noblemen, who was born to play the game, and who when a [illegible] babe wore moleskins instead of swaddling clothes or diapers.

MANY CARS EXPORTED.

Figures issued by the Department of Commerce show that 80,46[illegible] motor vehicles, valued at $100,25[illegible], were shipped from the United States during the twelve months ending June 30, 1916. This represents one-fifteenth of all the motor vehicles produced in this country.

ROAD CAMPAIGN ON.

To construct the Twin City-[illegible] section of the National Capital Highway the three cities are engaged in a strenuous campaign such as has not been witnessed in Minnesota before. Each of the three cities is to raise $10,000, to total to insure $[illegible]000 Federal aid, together with $[illegible]000 from Pine county and the [illegible] road tax.

NAB AUTO THIEVES.

The Philadelphia police department has rounded up a gang of alleged motor thieves who have been operating in that city for some time. The arrests were made after arrangements by detectives for the purchase of a number of stolen cars. These men are believed to be responsible for the theft of more than 1800 cars since the beginning of the year.

In order to obtain a fixed supply of long staple Egyptian cotton, an Ohio tire company has purchased 10,000 acres of land in the [illegible] River Valley, and will at once embark in the business of cotton growing on a large scale.

Nebraska dealers point with pride to the wheat crop of 1916, which is expected to bring a big trade. This year's crop is worth $[illegible] more than the 1915 crop, and the gain is expected to pay for [illegible] motor cars at an average sale price of $750 each. Other crops show a like increase.

The increasing volume of business done by the Harold L. Arnold organization in selling Hudson and Dodge Bros. motor cars has necessitated a greatly-increased sales and service force. The latest addition to Mr. Arnold's salesmen is [illegible] Salisbury, formerly of the [illegible] company, and generally and favorably known in the motor car industry in Southern California. That Salisbury is a live wire is indicated by the fact that he sold [illegible] Hudson supersixes in the [illegible] days that he was with Mr. Arnold.

WEEGHMAN IS IN HOT WATER.

[illegible] Denial of the Chance Stories with Vehemence.

[illegible] may Come Here as Manager.

Mysterious Stranger Visits Tom Darmody.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

A volley of heated, sizzling, red-hot denials were the only new symptoms developed in the Chance-Cub case yesterday. And these denials [illegible] an entirely new symptom, [illegible] largely a recrudescence of a [illegible] from which Weeghman and [illegible] have been suffering for several weeks. Since the "$25,000-a-year" story was published there has [illegible] veritable epidemic of denials [illegible].

Weeghman, according to a Chicago dispatch last night, denied that he asked Chance to "name his own terms" to manage the club, a [illegible] which might be construed as [illegible] to manage them at his "own terms." "We have made no offers to Chance," he continues. All of [illegible] phraseology, when carefully [illegible], is true.

It never has been claimed that Chance was made an offer, or that he was told to "name his own terms," but the fact remains that Chance did receive a wire Tuesday asking him to state on what terms he would manage the Chicago club [illegible], and that Powers wired [illegible] terms to Chicago Friday.

FOR TINKER.

Weeghman may still be strong for Tinker, as he claims, and again he [illegible] endeavoring simply to make [illegible] painless as possible for Joe. [illegible], the other directors are for Chance, and possibly if one [illegible] read Weeghman's innermost thoughts, he might be found to be [illegible] same frame of mind.

Weeghman has been making denials ever since the story that Chance [illegible] handle the Cubs appeared in [illegible] and as a result probably finds [illegible] in an embarrassing situation [illegible] own home town. For some [illegible] Chance has been practically [illegible] to handle the Cubs, with the [illegible] that Joe Tinker would [illegible] the Angels. Whether Joe [illegible] consent to do this remains for developments to show.

[illegible] Wolter, the man whom [illegible] said he would recommend to [illegible] him, yesterday passed [illegible] Los Angeles on his way to [illegible], where the P. L. is at the [illegible] time. He wants to ascertain [illegible]. If Chance takes over [illegible] he may be loath to turn [illegible] back to the Los Angeles club, [illegible] regards him as a most valuable player. His recommendation [illegible] Wolter for the job was predicated [illegible] the bare possibility that [illegible] might fail to stick with the [illegible] club.

[illegible] must be something wrong [illegible] present baseball system [illegible] comes to the development [illegible] managerial material.

[illegible] were most of the successful managers of today graduates [illegible] the old rough-and-ready [illegible] but the majors are trying [illegible] back into the game some of [illegible] who had returned to their [illegible] acres to round out their [illegible] peace and comfort.

[illegible] Jones was dragged out of [illegible] timber, and in Pittsburgh [illegible] been yelling aloud for [illegible] Clarke. Fred has paid no attention to these voices crying aloud [illegible] wilderness, as yet, but wait [illegible] of years and see if he [illegible] come crawling out of his [illegible] to speak.

[illegible] Chance's vision of resting [illegible] glow of past achievements [illegible] shattered when Johnny Powers [illegible] him away from the plow to [illegible] the Angels. The P. L. [illegible] so much of his old stuff that [illegible] immediately began considering his recall to the majors and [illegible] indirect offers which resulted [illegible] now famous "$25,000" [illegible].

OLD-TIMERS.

[illegible] the game must turn to men [illegible] achieved to the fullest [illegible] gone by, and desire sin[illegible] continue the simple life; is [illegible] commentary on the present generation of players, and [illegible] of qualities which seem [illegible] for real leadership. At the [illegible] this situation propounds [illegible] "From what source is [illegible] to draw its successful man[illegible] the future?" The old-[illegible] bound to weaken or be[illegible] decrepit with spavins on their [illegible] and perspective.

been discussed annually for years. A majority of the owners seem to adhere to the opinion that the schedule should conform to the weather, which, while it permits only six months of baseball in the East, is sufficient for seven here.

Darmody says that he has nothing to announce in regard to the purchase of the Vernon club, and it is more likely that his decision will be determined by action taken by the league at its annual meeting in certain matters pertaining to the future of the organization. There are a number of private matters to be threshed out at this meeting which will have a vital influence on the future of baseball on the Coast, and which may affect the very life of the game.

Darmody was yesterday visited by a party, whose name is withheld for the present by request, who stated that he had ample backing to buy the Vernon club. He stated that he is an acquaintance of William Wrigley, Jr., one of the owners of the Chicago Cubs, but denied that the latter had been consulted. He said the capital which he had interested was local. He and Darmody will hold another conference today. Arthur Fiske, another prospective purchaser, has investigated the proposition thoroughly. Before announcing any decision in the matter he will await the league's action at Salt Lake.

CHICAGO UP IN AIR OVER CHANCE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 2.—Admirers of Frank Chance, a former Cub manager, apparently would like to see him return to Chicago to replace Joe Tinker. Reports with little substance to them are again circulated that he has been negotiating with President Weeghman and has submitted his terms for a period of two years. What the terms amount to has not been disclosed from the end from which the story emanates.

President Weeghman is not at liberty to reveal his part of the negotiations or else there is nothing to it for he denies that he has been in communication with Chance and that he has made any effort to procure him. He contends that the story has been started by some of Chance's friends on the Coast.

The story is given a little tinge of truth by the statement issued by Johnny Powers, president of the Los Angeles club. He was in Chicago last week and held several conferences with Weeghman. Whether it was concerning Chance or ball players is not known. Powers says in his interview that he is to lose Chance, who is going to Chicago to manage the Cubs. He adds that the terms have been submitted and will be accepted by Weeghman.

Chance strengthens the rumor a bit more by asserting on the Coast that he has received communications from the Chicago club asking him to submit his terms. He was a bit reticent but said the salary he expected would exceed that given him by the club before.

TENNIS TOURNEY AT RIVERSIDE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RIVERSIDE, Dec. 2.—The Orange Belt Tennis Association opened the tennis tournament season here today on the courts of the Casa Blanca Club, teams competing from Corona, Hemet, the Rubidoux and Casa Blanca clubs of Riverside.

Corona won the men's doubles and singles and Casa Blanca the ladies' and mixed doubles, but some splendid tennis was played by all competing teams. W. M. Dean and Dee McConnell of Corona proved the strongest team in the men's doubles, winning the finals from E. W. Trevelyan and Norman Irving, Casa Blanca, 4-6, 6-1, 7-5, 6-3.

In the preliminaries, they eliminated Dr. Rolph and William Easten, Rubidoux Club, 7-5, 6-2, and Trevelyan and Irvingwon from E. B. Adams and F. C. Russell, Rubidoux, 6-2, 6-2, and Schmit and Butlin, Hemet, 6-0, 6-1.

H. R. Lamson, Corona, won the men's singles from Richard Dole, Casa Blanca, 7-5, 6-4, 8-6, after defeating Sheldon Westfall, Rubidoux, 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. Westfall eliminated A. H. Halstead, Casa Blanca, 2-6, 6-1, 6-4, and Dole won from C. Craig, Rubidoux, 7-5, 6-1, and from Raymond Allen, Rubidoux, 8-6, 7-5.

The Misses Dolly Bettner and B. Oldendorf, Casa Blanca, won the ladies' doubles from Misses Doris Grout and Margaret Younglove, Rubidoux, 6-3, 6-3, having first eliminated the Misses Whitmore and Craig, Corona, 7-5, 9-7. Misses Grout and Younglove defeated Mrs. Childs and Mrs. Halstead, 6-3, 6-1.

The mixed doubles were won by Mrs. Harry Pattee and Neil Cameron, Casa Blanca, from Miss Helen Packard and O. B. Ormiston, Rubidoux, 6-4, 10-8.

PENN STEPS ON CORNELL AGAIN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—The University of Pennsylvania defeated Cornell in an intercollegiate league soccer game here today by the score of 3 to 1.

Haverford College soccer team defeated Yale 3 to 1 in a league game at Haverford today.

TOM ANDREWS IS HOT AFTER JESS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO BUREAU OF THE TIMES, Dec. 2.—Ring history as regards the heavyweight situation probably will be made tomorrow, provided Tom Jones, director in chief of Jess Willard's future, makes good the promise he made to Tom Andrews, that he would meet the Milwaukee impresario in Chicago Sunday. Bidding for the champion's service is said to have reached the $50,000 mark and the end is not yet in sight.

Willard himself refuses to express an opinion as to what the outcome will be. He met Tex Rickard, the leading promoter of the country, this week on instructions from Jones, who was ill in Hot Springs, but the champ, acting under orders, refused to do business under any conditions or even to give Rickard first call on his services. Jess isn't particular whom he meets next, if he can get his price, for unless something akin to the Johnson-Jeffries situation bobs up in the next year, the next battle Willard takes part in, will be his last.

Vying with Rickard for the champ's services is Tom Andrews, who, instead of consulting Willard, went direct to headquarters and got in touch with Jones. He was told that the highest bidder would be the lucky one; that Jones had no favorite, it being a question of money only.

Getting Jones's consent to the match and offering the best inducements, however, is only half of the battle. The most important job will be to get Jess's consent to an early match. He thinks his long jolt with the circus entitles him to a rest so that he can get acquainted with his family and the upshot of the whole affair may be that Willard will pack his trunk and his family onto a train bound Coastward and quit the ring forever.

WILSON NAMES ALL-SOUTHERN.

Coach Russell Wilson of Whittier College has come out with his all-southern college eleven. He gives representative honors to six men from his own team, two from Occidental and one each from Pomona, Redlands and the University of Southern California.

Behold the findings: Fawcett (W.,) left end; Deems (O.,) left tackle; Waite (P.,) left guard; Chambers (W.,) center; Halsey (W.,) right guard; Siemon (W.,) right tackle; Gillette (R.,) right end; Malette (U.S.C.,) quarter; Murray (W.,) left half; Brooks (O.,) right half; Finch (W.,) full.

CHAMPS SMILE AT DOWNPOUR.

Johnston and Griffin are Caught Napping.

Browne and Wayne Slip Over Six-two Set.

Exciting Match Called off at Shower.

BY WARDE FOWLER.

The only thing that Johnston and Griffin enjoyed in their tennis match yesterday was the rain. Both of the national champions had gone through the game without a smile, and people were beginning to fear that they had forgotten how, when the rain turned the trick. This intense soberness was caused by Nat Browne and Claude Wayne, who were running circles around the champs when the affair ended.

Browne and Wayne were the features of the Los Angeles Country Club tournament yesterday. These two experts started out early in the afternoon and defeated C. Barker and K. Newell, 6-2, 7-5. Without waiting to pluck up fresh courage they entered the arena against Johnston and Griffin, won the initial set 6-2, and were on the under side of a 5-4 score when it started to rain.

It is safe to say that none of the teams were playing up to par. Cold weather and low hanging clouds took all the zip out of the contestants and deadly accuracy and tremendous speed were somewhat blunted.

Wayne and Browne only managed to get warmed up after their match with Barker and Newell and they exhibited the real class of the day in their last battle.

The first game in this semifinal match went to the champions with apparent ease. "Good-by, Wayne and Browne" was the general sentiment of the spectators. Johnston's drive appeared to be working perfectly and when it is stepping along right there isn't much chance.

In the next game it became evident that the national champs weren't going to have such a cinch after all. Wayne and Browne managed to get their chops working and the former was serving near-aces on every stroke. The lesser luminaries took the next several games with ease and dispatch and ended the argument 6-2 in their favor. It looked like a bad day for the champions.

The next set was more of a fight. The score zig-zagged up and down until it was nipped in the bud by the downpour. The match will probably be played over Monday.

During this match everyone in the grand stand became very much excited over the antics of two colored gentlemen who were evidently getting ready for a tea battle or something. All kinds of interesting instruments were dug up, such as cups, saucers, hot water, tea, etc. As it was quite chilly these preparations brought smiles of joy to everyone. When the rain commenced, however, the crowd arose in great excitement and deserted the bleachers without so much as a look at the tea, etc. Thus the rain not only stopped the tennis match but it also put the kibosh on a perfectly good-looking tea party.

Kenny Newell and Clarence Barker created quite a good deal of excitement by threatening to exterminate Browne and Wayne. For a long time it looked as if "Youth" was going to bury "Old Age" but the opposite happened in the long run.

Newell was serving like a wild man. On several occasions he slipped clean aces over on his opponents. Throughout the first set his serve was unusually hard to handle and he consistently won his games. Toward the last Newell blew up slightly and allowed a few doubles to go over the plate.

On the whole, Newell and Barker look like real comers in the doubles game. The team is well balanced, Barker being steady and sure, and Newell having all the brilliancy needed. They put up a terrific fight against their experienced opponents.

The only ladies' doubles match of the day was between Mrs. Widdowson and Miss Young and Miss Browne and Miss Comstock. Some excellent tennis was exhibited although Mrs. Widdowson and Miss Young won easily. The final score was 6-0, 6-1.

Play will be continued on Monday when the semifinals will be completed and possibly the finals run off. The ladies' doubles semifinals and finals will be played Monday and Tuesday.

PREP SCHOOLS PAIR FOR FOOTBALL FINALS

Football fans are beginning to wonder what's coming off in this high-school football championship situation. Five schools are admitted to be in the running: Manual Arts, Pasadena, San Diego, Chaffey and Citrus Union. Citrus, as far as dope is concerned, has the least chance of them all and yet Citrus is almost sure to get in the finals.

Here's the situation. Pasadena and Manual Arts meet at Manual Arts Friday. The winner of this argument will tackle the Chaffey-San Diego victor.

On the other hand, Citrus meets Fullerton Saturday and is almost sure to win. The next opponent will be Calexico, who ought to be sure meat for the winner. Hence Citrus is practically assured a place in the finals against the Pasadena-Manual-Chaffey-San Diego champs. Here is the schedule of play for this week-end: Pasadena vs. Manual Arts at Manual Arts, Friday; Chaffey vs. San Diego in Los Angeles, Saturday; Citrus Union vs. Fullerton at Fullerton, Saturday.

HENDRIE NOW WITH RACINE RUBBER CO.

"It was not so very long ago that Arizona was considered a small field for automobile and accessory distribution, but it's quite different these days," says F. H. Osler of the Osler Racine Rubber Company, distributors of the well-known Racine country road tires.

"We are shipping large quantities of these tires to different points in Arizona and we now have a man whose sole business it is to look after Arizona sales and shipments, and who spends a considerable part of his time in that State, going the rounds of the trade.

"This representative, W. F. Hendrie, is well known to the tire business locally, as the founder of the tire manufacturing company which still bears his name, and later as the manager of one of the large rubber companies' local office here, which position he left to take up the Arizona work for the Osler Racine company."

HUGHIE HUGHES KILLED IN RACE.

STANDING BY PRESS BOX AS MACHINE GOES WILD.

Had Retired from Race After Near-accident and was Merely a Spectator When Galvin's Runaway Car Causes His Death. Most Peculiar Accident.

The body of Hughie Hughes, famous racing driver who was killed in a terrible accident at Uniontown, Pa., yesterday, is on its way to Los Angeles for burial. Mrs. Hughes was prostrated at the news of her husband's death and expressed the desire to have the burial services performed in Los Angeles.

Instructions were immediately wired the racing officials of the eastern speedway, by Frank Lowry, a close personal friend of Hughes, and who will have charge of the funeral.

Hundreds of friends of the famous driver have sent words and messages of sympathy to the widow and all are anxious that the body should be interred in Los Angeles. The definite date of the funeral has not been decided.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

UNIONTOWN (Pa.) Dec. 2.—Gaston Weigel and Hughie Hughes were killed, Frank Galvin probably fatally injured, and a number of other persons less seriously hurt near the end of the Universal Trophy automobile race at the Uniontown speedway late this afternoon. Herbert Smith, a Pittsburgh newspaper man; Montgomery McCormick, a constable on duty at the track, and Donald Beam, a spectator, were among the others who were injured.

Hughes ran his car into the guard rail near the center of the speedway during the sixty-second lap of the race because of engine trouble, and had walked to the press stand when Galvin came tearing down the track. When almost opposite the stand Galvin seemed to lose control of his car, and it shot with lightning speed toward the stand which Hughes had reached scarcely a moment before. Hughes saw his danger, but had no chance to escape, for he, with Galvin and Weigel, Galvin's mechanician, was instantly buried in the wreck.

Persons on the stand were knocked down by the impact, Smith being caught in the splintering timbers. When the men were picked up it was found that Hughes and Weigel had been instantly killed and Galvin so seriously injured that it was feared he could not survive.

Others who were injured included Richard Adams and Edward F. Kovel of New York; Richard Spavin, Pittsburgh; Elmer Putman, Uniontown; L. H. Conger, Akron, O.; J. J. Daugherty, Pittsburgh; E. L. Myers, Pittsburgh. All of these were spectators.

Louis Chevrolet, in a Frontenac, won the 112-mile race.

NEW ZEALAND IS STUDYING ROADS.

Local and national authorities in New Zealand are studying the subject of good roads as they are in the United States with a view to the construction of concrete roads.

They estimate a mile of 12-foot concrete road could be built for $2000 more than a mile of stone and that the saving in upkeep would be $1000 a mile in the first five years, while at the end of ten years there would be a saving of $7000 or $8000.

A good grade of cement is made in New Zealand, and as there are no severe frosts in the country, it is planned to make the road four inches thick, as in California.

RIVERSIDE CLUB ROADSTERS HERE.

A carload of Riverside Club roadsters, exact duplicates of the models to be shown at the New York show, have arrived at the Reilly Motor Car Company's salesrooms on South Flower street. These are the first cars of this type delivered to any Moon dealer. The demand for these cars has exceeded the output and it was only because of the strenuous efforts put forth by Mr. Reilly that he was able to secure the recent shipment.

PARKING SPACE NEEDED.

In Milwaukee little actual progress has been made in the direction of solving the serious problem of parking motor cars in the downtown streets. The Common Council has been considering for many months a plan to turn Fourth Ward Park, one square block at Third, Fourth, Sycamore and Depot streets, fronting on the Union depot, into an exclusive motor car parking square, but this would accommodate only a few hundred cars, when the need is for thousands.

GRID REVIEW OF SOUTHWEST.

TITLES IN DISPUTE IN ALL SECTIONS.

Lily-white Record of Nebraska is Sullied After Six Years of Unbroken Victories—Many Interconference Games Played Last Season—Few Accidents.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 2.—Football in the Southwest in the series of games which come to a close last Thursday evolved no undisputed champions in either the Missouri Valley or Southwestern conferences. Nebraska's proud record of consecutive victories for half a dozen years was broken this year first by Kansas, then by Notre Dame, and Oklahoma's supremacy south of the Missouri River was challenged successfully by five teams.

Kansas had hoped to challenge Nebraska's claim of the title because of the Jayhawkers' victory in Lincoln, but following their crushing defeat at the hands of Missouri all vestige of a Kansas claim to superiority was put to rout.

In the Southwestern conference, Texas and Baylor each claim the Texas title, while the Oklahoma laurels went without question to Henry Kendall College of Tulsa. But it would be difficult to pick the southwestern champions.

It remained for a nonconference team, however, to come through the season without a defeat in a schedule of ten games and to claim the general southwestern championship after having challenged several strong teams without being able to arrange a post-season game. This team represented the Henry Kendall College, which scored 567 points while allowing its opponents to make only thirty.

Missouri Valley teams won slightly more than half of their inter-conference clashes. Missouri defeated Oklahoma and Texas. Kansas won from Oklahoma, but lost to Illinois, the Kansas Aggies also downed the luckless Oklahomas. Nebraska defeated the Oregon Aggies and Iowa, but lost to Notre Dame and Washington lost to Michigan.

It was notable that more interconference games were played than usual. Texas renewed its annual contest with Missouri after a lapse of years. Kansas played Illinois for the first time since 1892. Nebraska's journey half way across the continent to meet the Oregon Aggies, matched the Coast style of play with the valley variety for the first time, to the advantage of the latter. Arizona came East to meet defeat at the hands of Rice in Houston, Tex.

Few accidents occurred during the season, the only one of a serious nature in a valley conference squad being a broken leg sustained by a Kansas player. One fatality occurred in Missouri, Hiram Cole, 19 years old, player on the Central College team of Fayette, Mo., dying from injuries received in a game with a preparatory school.

"Greatest Achievements of Motor Car History"

Thus are characterized the performances of the

HUDSON SUPER-SIX

When the SUPER-SIX was introduced last January we told you of the wonderful discoveries of the HUDSON engineers. Those discoveries resulted in the Patented HUDSON SUPER-SIX Motor.

To conclusively prove the great advancement accomplished by HUDSON a series of official tests were made. These tests gave to the HUDSON SUPER-SIX EVERY WORTH-WHILE RECORD.

SUPREME ACHIEVEMENTS ATTAINED ONLY BY THE HUDSON SUPER-SI

Made under A. A. A. supervision by a certified STOCK CAR or STOCK CHASSIS, and excelling all former stock cars in these tests.

ACCELERATION RECORDS

From standing start to 50 miles an hour in 16.2 seconds.
From standing start to 60 miles an hour in 23.0 second.
From 5 miles an hour to 30 miles an hour in 10.0 seconds.
From 5 miles an hour to 50 miles an hour in 19.4 seconds.

ENDURANCE RECORDS

Mile Speed—One mile at the rate of 102.53 miles per hour.
One Hour—70.74 miles in 1 hour, with 5 passengers, top and windshield up.
One Hour—75.69 miles in 1 hour, with 2 passengers, top down.
50 Mile—50 miles in 39 minutes 30.8 seconds in a 7-passenger car with driver and passengers.
100 Mile—100 miles in 80 minutes 21.4 seconds in a 7-passenger car with driver and passengers. An average of 74.67 miles per hour.
12 Hour—924 miles from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m., driving throughout the night, at a average of 77 miles per hour, ALL NIGHT LONG.
24 Hour—1819 miles in 24 hours—equal to the distance from Los Angeles to Birmingham, Ala.—at a speed of 75.8 miles per hour. Beating the best previous American record of 1196 miles by 52%. THE LONGEST SUSTAINED MILEAGE EVER MADE BY MAN OR VEHICLE. A SUPREME ACHIEVEMENT, PROVING MOTOR STAMINA ALMOST BEYOND BELIEF!

And the non-stock records, made with a HUDSON SPECIAL SUPER-SIX converted from a stock car merely by shortening the wheel base, putting on larger tanks and racing body.

MOUNTAIN CLIMB—

Competing with twenty contestants, the SUPER-SIX made the fastest time—18 minutes 24 seconds—up the world's highest highway to the summit of Pike's Peak, 14,437 feet above sea level.

NON-STOP—

The non-stop record of 403 miles, made in the Grand Prix race at Santa Monica, at an average speed of 78.13 miles per hour, not only beating all previous non-stop road race records by over 100 miles, but also smashing all previous speed records in a Grand Prix race, and its own previous non-stop record of 294 miles made in the Vanderbilt, two days before.

TRANSCONTINENTAL RECORDS—Most Covete

Single Transcontinental—Across America, San Francisco to New York in 5 days, 3 hours, 31 min., in a 7-passenger HUDSON-SUPER-SIX, the fastest time ever made across the continent by an automobile.

Double Transcontinental—6952 miles—twice across America—over mountains, deserts, bridgeless streams, mud, heat, cold, snow. Every known road condition conquered by a 7-passenger HUDSON SUPER-SIX in 10 days, 21 hours, lowering the best previous record each way. The only double transcontinental attempt ever made against time. America's greatest motor car achievement. Your HUDSON SUPER-SIX can do likewise.

SUBSTANTIATED AT SANTA MONICA

Of the 18 starters in the Vanderbilt but six finished; of the six, THREE WERE HUDSON SUPER-SIXES. Of the there were several teams of three or more cars. The HUDSONS were the only cars of any make of which more was running at the finish. EVERY HUDSON THAT STARTED ALSO FINISHED.

In the Grand Prix both HUDSONS not only finished, but finished in the money. The only cars making faster time 16-valve special racing cars built exclusively for speed.

These links form an invincible chain of HUDSON SUPER-SIX records never approached by any competing car. They clusively prove the HUDSON SUPER-SIX the master of any car in America, nor have beauty of line and finish, holstering and comfortable riding qualities been sacrificed for motor performance. Instead they have been worked equal care. A ride in a HUDSON SUPER-SIX will quickly convince you.

MR. TWEE DEEDLE.

1—"See that lumbering creature frisking over the fields!" exclaimed Dickie as he jumped up from the ground.

"It looks like a Baby Grand Piano!" Mr. Twee Deedle replied. "Well, I declare!"

2—As the two watched the Baby Grand Piano wabble out of sight they saw a large Horn running in the same direction as the Piano. "Perhaps they are playing a game of some sort," Dickie said.

3—Just then Dickie and Mr. Twee Deedle heard a soft step behind them and, turning around, they saw a Bass Viol. "Good morning!" said the Bass Viol, in a deep, soft toned voice. "Why don't you boys come along with me?"

"We would like to very much," said Mr. Twee Deedle.

4—"Then climb on my back!" cried the Bass Viol, "and I will carry you in a hurry!" So Mr. Twee Deedle and Dickie climbed on the Bass Viol's back and he flew with them over the field at a very fast pace. The wind hummed through his strings, he went so fast, and close behind him came a Cornet and some other Horns.

5—Finally the Bass Viol put them down in a clearing in a deep forest where many more instruments were gathered. The Baby Grand Piano seemed to be the leader, for after playing a few rippling notes he opened his lid and all the instruments began playing the most beautiful melody Dickie had ever heard. Dickie and Mr. Twee Deedle sat entranced until the playing grew fainter and fainter and finally died away. Then they saw that all the instruments had disappeared.

6—Mr. Twee Deedle and Dickie walked through the forest until they came upon two little gnomes, of whom they inquired the meaning of the concert they had enjoyed. "Those are the wood instruments," said one of the little men. "Listen a moment and you will hear the music in the wind." And as they listened, Dickie and Mr. Twee Deedle heard very faintly (for the wind was scarcely blowing at all) the music played by the instruments in the forest. "I have always wondered where the music in the wind came from," said Dickie, "but now I know!"

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

THE HARMONY OF HOME.

"I [illegible] the many men read the Helping Hand. I wish some of them could be made to realize that a sympathetic interest in the work and hopes, ambitions and fears of their women folk would go far toward making women satisfied in doing their duty. In the house men and women both often drop all semblance of courtesy or consideration, the lack of which makes home to be spelled with the wrong four letters."

The above is quoted from a long and interesting letter I received not long ago. Most of it has appeared in another portion of the Corner, but the sentences I have put here seemed to me worthy of more attention than I could give them when placed with the regular correspondence.

I know that many men read the Helping Hand. Some of them are among my most valued helpers and I am sure that those with whom I have exchanged letters are not the ones who need to have called to their notice their lack of courtesy and consideration in the home. And yet I have known men—and women, too—who enable one to understand what was meant by the comment of the man who, when some one said in his hearing, "There is no place like home," remarked fervently, "Thank God!" The home that is "spelled with the wrong four letters" is found more frequently than we like to believe.

But is it altogether to be blamed to the men? I don't think so. I feel that women have it in their power to set the tone of the home, and that no matter how much sympathetic interest their men folk may display it counts for little if the women folk do not make a point of conscience of giving an example of thoughtfulness and of courtesy.

Of course we all know men who seem impossible to please and whose chief business in life—when they are not away at work—appears to be fault finding. It is they who declare that women have an easy time of it, who belittle all the toils and cares and anxieties of housekeeping and of motherhood, who growl when something goes wrong, and never find anything to praise.

I recollect an incident that was told me years ago by a friend of such a man as I have described. She was unfortunate enough to be spending the day at his house, and at each meal the man criticised everything that came on the table. When at supper he objurgated the biscuits because they were so hot, his son, who had been sitting glowering at the flaws picked in his mother's work, broke into speech with a voice trembling with wrath.

"Mother, I am astonished at you," he said, with youthful satire. "You ought to have baked the biscuits in the refrigerator."

Many of the adverse comments provoke one to similar retorts. Not all women are as gentle as another one I know, who was telling me of a family party who had descended upon her small apartment, slept in the living room, made a hotel of the entire domicile, and never spoken a word of appreciation of anything.

"The last night they were here I made some gingerbread," the harassed housekeeper told me, "and I had come to the point of nerve tire that when some one said, 'The gingerbread is very good,' I put my face down in my hands and said, 'Thank God!' It seemed something to return gratitude for that they should be satisfied with anything."

Is this the exception to the general rule in families? I wish I could think so.

I was relating to a young relative of my own a like experience I had had in one of the families where it is the boast that they all speak out just what they think, and I wound up by saying: "All the while I kept repeating to myself that I was grateful to think there is nothing like that in our family."

His answer stunned me.

"I wish there were."

Then he went on to explain:

"If we had been allowed to bicker and fight at home I wouldn't be so uncomfortable when I go to houses where that sort of thing exists. There is one lot of nice people with whom I play cards sometimes, and they get into such rows over the game and say so many nasty things to one another that I just sit and wait until they have finished, and look at the other side of the room and try not to listen to what they are talking about, and wish with all my heart that I had been used to that kind of behavior, so that I wouldn't mind it."

That is one way of looking at it, but I confess it doesn't appeal to me. I am sorry to say that I have known households where there was constant "scrapping," which made the outsider feel most embarrassed and ill at ease, but I have also been fortunate enough to be acquainted with others where the law of kindly speech, as well as of action, was practiced.

Why should this not be the case everywhere? For after all harsh speech, bitter comment, cruel criticism is largely a matter of habit. You will find often that the very people who utter the biting phrases, who are most ready to find fault, are at heart kindly and generous and would do anything in the world for one another, making sacrifices uncomplainingly—every sacrifice except that of the wounds they inflict by their tongues.

One such case comes to my mind of a widowed mother with two daughters and a son. The eldest daughter is a woman of strong character and warm heart, who has for years denied herself the pleasures which are her due for the sake of her family. She supports her mother in comfort; she is always ready to help her sister in difficulties; she has carried for months at a time the burden of her brother's home when his incompetence and weakness have involved him in difficulties. Those who knew only this side of her or of her loyalty and helpfulness to her friends would not hesitate to write her down as a paragon.

But if I were a member of her family I would rather stand on the street corner and beg or "take in back stairs to scrub," to quote the phrase of a girl friend, than to live in the house with this generous and self-immolating daughter and sister. Her tongue is dipped in gall. She snaps at her mother; the quarrels she has with her sister and brother make the proverbial cat and dog appear amiable members of society; she orders her friends about and criticizes them so sharply that it must take all their remembrance of her noble qualities to keep them tolerant of her at all. In her business career she is domineering and savage, and the wonder always holds me when I have been thrown with her that she has been able to retain the position of trust she has occupied for years. All the efficiency and devotion to work in the world could not compensate me personally for the disagreeable traits that he who runs may read.

As a matter of course, her mother is the one who is principally to blame. When the girl was young she was permitted to speak as she chose to the family and the habit has grown upon her with advancing years until now she probably could not reform herself even if she would. More than that, she does not perceive her own shortcomings, but thinks others are unreasonable and trying, and that she is entirely within her rights when she speaks out plainly to those about her.

The pity of it! She is preparing a lonely and loveless old age for herself. I contrast her with a spinster whom I knew at one time who was most considerate and pleasant to those with whom she was thrown. I had passed some weeks in the house with her and one day I spoke to her of how agreeable she was to live with.

"I have to be!" she returned. "I am alone in the world and the last years of my life will probably have to be spent in boarding houses or in the homes of others. Isn't it the only wise thing for me to do to get in the habit of adapting myself to those by whom I am surrounded? If I wish to be welcome anywhere I must learn to be sympathetic and easy to get along with. It's a measure of self-preservation!"

It would be an excellent thing if more of those who are set in families would lay this lesson to heart.

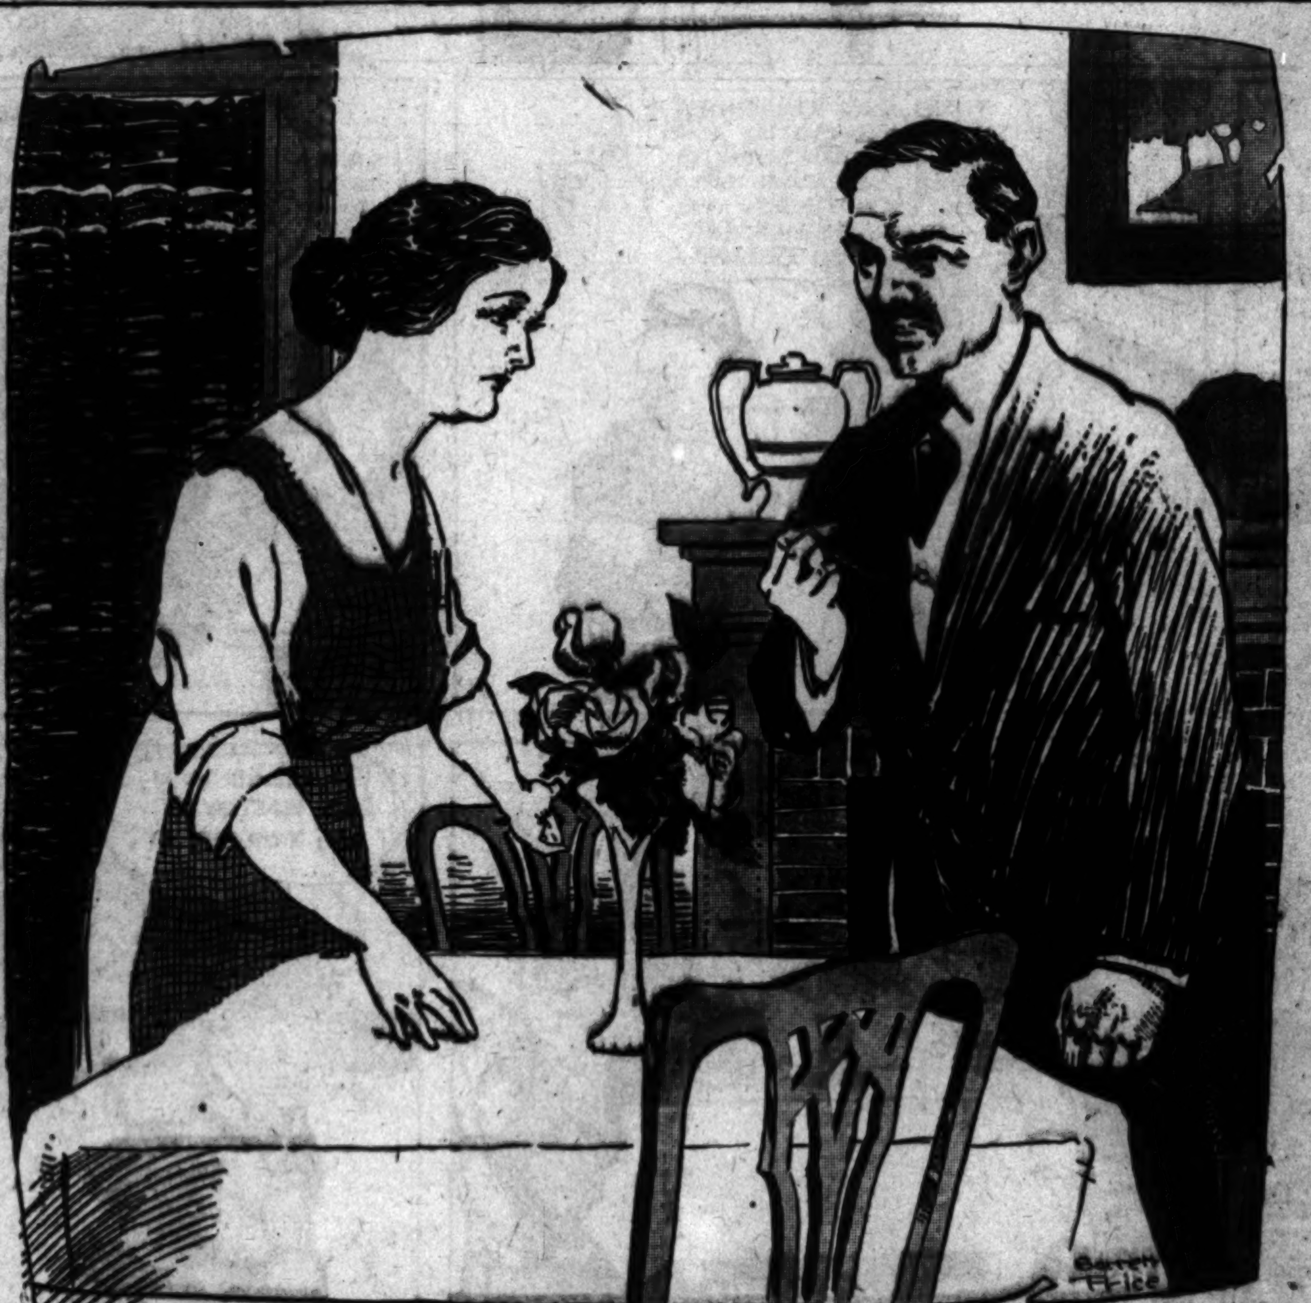
As I have said, the keynote of the home is usually struck by the wife and mother. The soft answer that turneth away wrath must be on her lips when others offer provocation to sharpness, and she must set the example of [illegible]ness and forbearance. The [illegible] must be one of the kind I [illegible] think an exception to rule if he does not appreciate her attitude and [illegible] to conform to it, while her children, if properly trained, follow her in the path she has marked out for them.

Yet even when there is kindliness and courtesy in the home there is occasionally a lack of that sympathetic [illegible] to which my correspondent refers. [illegible] is hard at work all day and [illegible] in the absorption of business [illegible] inclined to forget that his wife's [illegible] are as fatiguing and depressing as the toil from which he comes [illegible] home. Does it occur to him that she may not be able to go to his office and lighten his burdens, [illegible] doing her share by making his home attractive and comfortable and [illegible] measure of fair return he ought to [illegible] some sympathy in her [illegible], at least ask her what she has been doing and share in her small [illegible] triumphs?

I call them small because that is the way they may appear to him. They are often anything but diminutive to her. Every woman knows that there are occasional catastrophes so trying as to scorch the last drop of milk in the house or to have the jelly refuse to "jell" or to have the line of clothes blow down so that they have to be washed over again. [illegible] portant, perhaps, but it is hard to [illegible] one's sense of proportion and [illegible] with an aching back and head and hands and feet. If John could [illegible] in her woe over such contingencies [illegible] share her exultation when the [illegible] or the cleaning or the company [illegible] rations turn out well he would [illegible] great deal towards making the [illegible] what it ought to be and in helping her to do the same.

"Will the love that you are [illegible]
Make a fire in the kitchen,
Or the little god of love turn the [illegible]

Yes, I believe it will, and he will both take the form of courtesy and consideration. Hard words may [illegible] bones, but they do fracture hearts, crush spirits and discourage effort [illegible] the kindly words have just the [illegible] effect. Doesn't the Corner agree with me? Tell me how you manage in your own homes and with what success.



Sometimes in the absorption of business he is inclined to forget that his wife's tasks are as fatiguing and depressing as the toil from which he comes in the evening.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

Machine for Making Beads.

"WHEN you obtain the address of the correspondent offering the machine for rolling wall paper beads, will you send it to me? I am very anxious to obtain it for a dear old lady over 80 years old who tries to help her old husband by doing anything within her strength. I have just seen her and given her the pattern of these beads, but with this machine she could make more. Will you keep her in mind? She is so sweet and happy and never complains of her lot. R. J. McC."

I regret to say that the machine referred to has already been given away. Is it possible that there is another one like it in the possession of some Cornerite who would care to bestow it on this old lady?

To Amuse Invalid Boy.

"I have a little boy, an invalid, who takes great pleasure in collecting stamps, and if any of the Cornerites have some United States or foreign stamps that are not wanted my boy would much appreciate them. I am not able to buy him anything to [illegible], and the stamps are all he has to while away many a lonely hour. M. L."

This is the sort of appeal that touches us all closely, and I hope it may reach the heart of some one with stamps to give away. We have many stamp fanciers on our list, I know.

Removing Paint from Glass.

"I see that some one would like to know how to take paint from window glass. Please tell her to use the old blade of a safety razor and go over all the spots with it. They will be removed without injuring the glass. In ironing smocking place the article on several thicknesses of a bath towel. I am sorry I cannot help more, but I have a sick baby who takes my time. "M. B."

These suggestions will be welcomed because of their practical use and we appreciate the kindliness that even in the midst of the care of a sick baby could snatch a few moments to write down the hints and send them off to help others.

Tatting in Exchange.

"I would like to correspond with any one who will do tatting in exchange for sheet music, slips of plants, quilt pieces, or silk scraps. I also have post cards and magazines for any who will pay postage on them. C. A. L."

We have a number of Cornerites who do tatting and also those who would like to exchange music, plants, and pieces. I shall be happy to put them into communication with C. A. L.

Received Some Magazines.

"Some time ago I wrote to the Corner asking for magazines and for a home for a Great Dane and mastiff dog. I received five requests for the dog and appreciated them so much and it was with deep regret that I sent each one a card stating that the poor dog had gone to his happy hunting grounds. Some one had poisoned him. I have two letters yet to answer regarding magazines. I think the Corner is doing a splendid work. C. H. M."

I regret the sad fate that befell the dog and the disappointment of the would-be possessor, but I am glad to know of the prompt replies sent by the dog's owner.

Canning and Preserving.

"As there are still a few fruits to seal up for winter use, I thought I would suggest to the makers of marmalade and fruit butter that they try stirring the contents of the kettle with a pancake turner. I find that it keeps the kettle bottom clean much better than a spoon and the annoyance from sticking or scorching is greatly lessened. Of course care must be taken not to leave the turner in the vessel because of the chemical action of acid on metal.

"When canning or preserving fruits in large pieces it is well worth while to slip a tablespoon handle, freshly immersed in boiling water, down the sides of the fruit filled jar, in about three places, to assist in expelling the air, thus making sure of preservation, provided the jars and covers have been properly sterilized.

"The canning season is an admirable opportunity for the mother to help the child and the school teacher. Children love to watch the filling of jars of fruit. Our little girl notes the size of the small jars and of the larger ones. She learns the names, pint and quart. Then to her delight, with great care, she uses the small jar for filling the large one with water and finds that two pints make a quart and that one quart holds just two pints. In a way it is pleasing to her and the knowledge will stick! To me it is sad that so many precious children grow up without applying school principles to practical every day living, because the world is too busy to tell them how to do so.

"The recipe for golden salad dressing was tried and found delicious, and the whipped cream which I added made it more attractive.

"To remove the peeling from a tomato hold it on a fork over the fire until a little blister appears. It takes just a second and the skin can be removed without work and the fruit will be as smooth as when plucked.

"If a child gets gum in his hair, it is no longer necessary to cut off the strands. Take a cheap toothbrush and a little saucer of gasoline, brush the locks carefully away from the fire, and all will come out.

"Here is my recipe for peach ice cream: Scald one pint of thick, sweet cream, cool, add half a teacup of sugar, freeze to the mushy stage, uncover, and add one pint of canned peaches with their juice, first mashing them smooth with a potato masher. Recover and freeze stiff. This is velvety and delicious and will serve six people generously. H. H. W."

A suggestive and helpful letter! I hope we may hear again "early and often" from this Cornerite. Her letter, written clearly and in ink, and expressed lucidly, is a genuine pleasure to read after a large batch of notes written in rubbed pencil characters on both sides of the paper.

Pickle Recipe.

"I saw in the Corner that S. B. W. wants a pickle recipe using one gallon of vinegar. Here is the one I used last summer, and the cucumbers stayed solid: Put together one gallon of vinegar, one cup of salt, one cup of sugar, and half a cup of mustard mixed smooth in water. Stir all well and put any number of cucumbers in at any time. This will make a three gallon jar of pickle. Can any one tell me the name of something to use for nits in the head? You put it on the head, wrap this in a towel for a few minutes, then shake the hair well and the nits will all come off. I saw it once, but have forgotten what it was. Has any one a copy of 'Gen. Persifer F. Smith's Grand March'? It is an old piece that my grandmother played about forty-five or fifty years ago. It is pretty. I have part of a page of it, but would like to get it all. "E. C."

I am glad to print this recipe for pickle. I wish I could give the name of the remedy desired, but I have never heard of it. A little later I will print in the Corner a letter on this subject which may prove of service. I will file the address of E. C., and trust she may get the piece of music she desires.

Here is a recipe for S. B. W.: Pour boiling water over pickles and let them stand until cold. Drain and wipe dry and cover with the following mixture: One chunk of horseradish, broken up, half cup of salt, half cup of brown sugar, one gallon of cold vinegar, half cup of ground mustard. In two or three days put in a handful of sugar, and so on each day until three pounds have been used. Less sugar can be employed."

This letter is unsigned, and, as will be seen, the directions differ from those given in the preceding communication. Still another recipe has been received.

"I am sending in a recipe for cold process pickles, taken from a magazine of a couple of years back. I think this may be the one asked for recently: One cup of mustard, one cup of sugar, one cup of salt, one gallon of cider vinegar. Select cucumbers or gherkins not over a finger in length. Wash and dry them carefully; place in a stone or glass jar and cover with the liquid. Lay a small plate or board upon the pickles and weight down with a clean stone. If you raise your own cucumbers, pick them every day, wash and dry, and add to those in the jar. I have never tried this recipe, but my sister weights down similar pickles with a round board with a hole about the size of a 25 cent piece bored through the center of the board. She drops the pickles through this hole, which saves lifting the board every day. I thought perhaps the suggestion might be useful. O. A. N."

It is a practical suggestion, which will be useful to any housekeeper who makes pickles from her own garden. We are glad to have the hint.

Silk Scraps and a Camera.

"I am a little girl 12 years old and would like to have a camera and some silk scraps. Will some one in the Corner be so good as to grant my request? If so I shall be much obliged, but I cannot pay the postage on them. "D. G."

I think there is little question that the little girl will get the silk scraps she asks for, but I am not so sure about the camera. Cameras are much in demand, but it may be that some one possesses one she will be glad to bestow on this 12 year old.

* *

Has Use for a Gun.

"I am out in the desert trying to recover my health. I have much use for a shotgun or an old rifle to get game, as the doctor advises me to do. If any one has a gun that is not needed I would appreciate it much, as I am unable to buy one, but will gladly pay postage on it. B. A. C."

I hope some one may be able to send the gun requested. It is bad enough to be exiled in search of health and any aid we can give the invalid is a benefit to us as well as to him.

Little Girl Wants Violin.

"Some months ago I asked through the Corner for a child's violin. I had a letter from some one who offered me one and I wrote that if she would have the violin weighed I would be glad and told her that, whether it has a case or not, it would have to be sent in a box. I never heard from her again and my little girl is still asking for a violin. I have a large family Bible which would be nice for a preacher in a small place if he has no Bible for his pulpit. I could not pay express charges, but if any one would send a call for it I would be glad to give the book. I have some embroidery patterns clipped from the paper and if any one would tell me what kind she wanted I would be glad to exchange the patterns for narrow crochet edging or tatting for children's garments. It would have to be a small pattern. J. M."

I do not understand the failure of the friend who offered the violin to reply to your letter and I trust this appeal may meet with more satisfactory results. I am sure the gift of this Bible will be eagerly welcomed and I hope you may arrange for the exchange of the patterns and tatting.

FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

BY ADELAIDE BYRD

MAKE "THE MAN" a LAUNDRY BAG

NED BY ELIZABETH MILLER

F THERE is any one I hate to buy a gift for, it's a man." How many times have you heard emark and how many more will you hear it within the coming weeks. But every time the t is uttered in your hearing n rest back contentedly, knowing you have solved the man-gift problem y making your various male relaand friends a laundry bag. Of the receipt of a plain, ordinary bag would be a disappointment y one, but a bag ornamented with ropriate design neatly worked by hands is another story. You can for weeks, and I don't think you d a simpler and more effective for a laundry bag than the one on this page today. One thing , the recipient will not mistake of the receptacle.

more care taken in the selection material for the bag, the more e will be the bag. Among the materials is linen, in white, e, green or old rose. Flowered s can be used, but the design not look so well on these as it on a plain background.

is at liberty to make the bag any but the regulation size is 18x28. piece of material is used. It folded at the bottom, thus avoidnecessity for making a seam. side neat seams should be made. may be French or, if preferred, may be bound with tape. Turn tops and allow for a casing thru a tape or ribbon is to be run as string.

er way to make the bag is to strips of material, the under than the top one. The extra is to be turned up and buttoned ped into position, and when it time to empty the bag the flap pped and the soiled clothes fall basket. There is thus no necefor removing the bag from its . In order to facilitate the work ing the clothes into the bag the ng can be slit from the heading for several inches. It will then be ssary to adjust the drawstring me a soiled article is put into the .

t to mention that one could e Turkish towels with great refor the fashioning of the bag. The could be embroidered on this as well as on any of the other materials mentioned.

You will observe that the French knot is the stitch favored for the development of the word "Laundry." There could be no simpler stitch chosen. For the uninitiated it may be well to give directions for making the French knot. Bring the needle up thru the dot to be covered. Hold the needle over the dot, with the point toward the left, twist the thread once around the point—twice if you desire a large knot. Hold the silk with the left hand and pass the needle and thread back thru the material. To make a neat knot twist the silk close to the material.

The little flowers finishing the graceful scroll of the letter D and the letter L can be worked solid or, if desired, the petals and leaves might each be worked in the lazy-daisy stitch, the centers of the flowers being worked solid and the stems outlined.

The color chosen for the embroidery will depend upon the color of the bag. I advise you, however, to use a contrasting color. The design will show to better advantage.

Altho the bag is suggested for a man, it is also appropriate for a woman. The difference between the bags for the two sexes might be in the colors, the delicate shades being reserved for the woman.

GET TO WORK

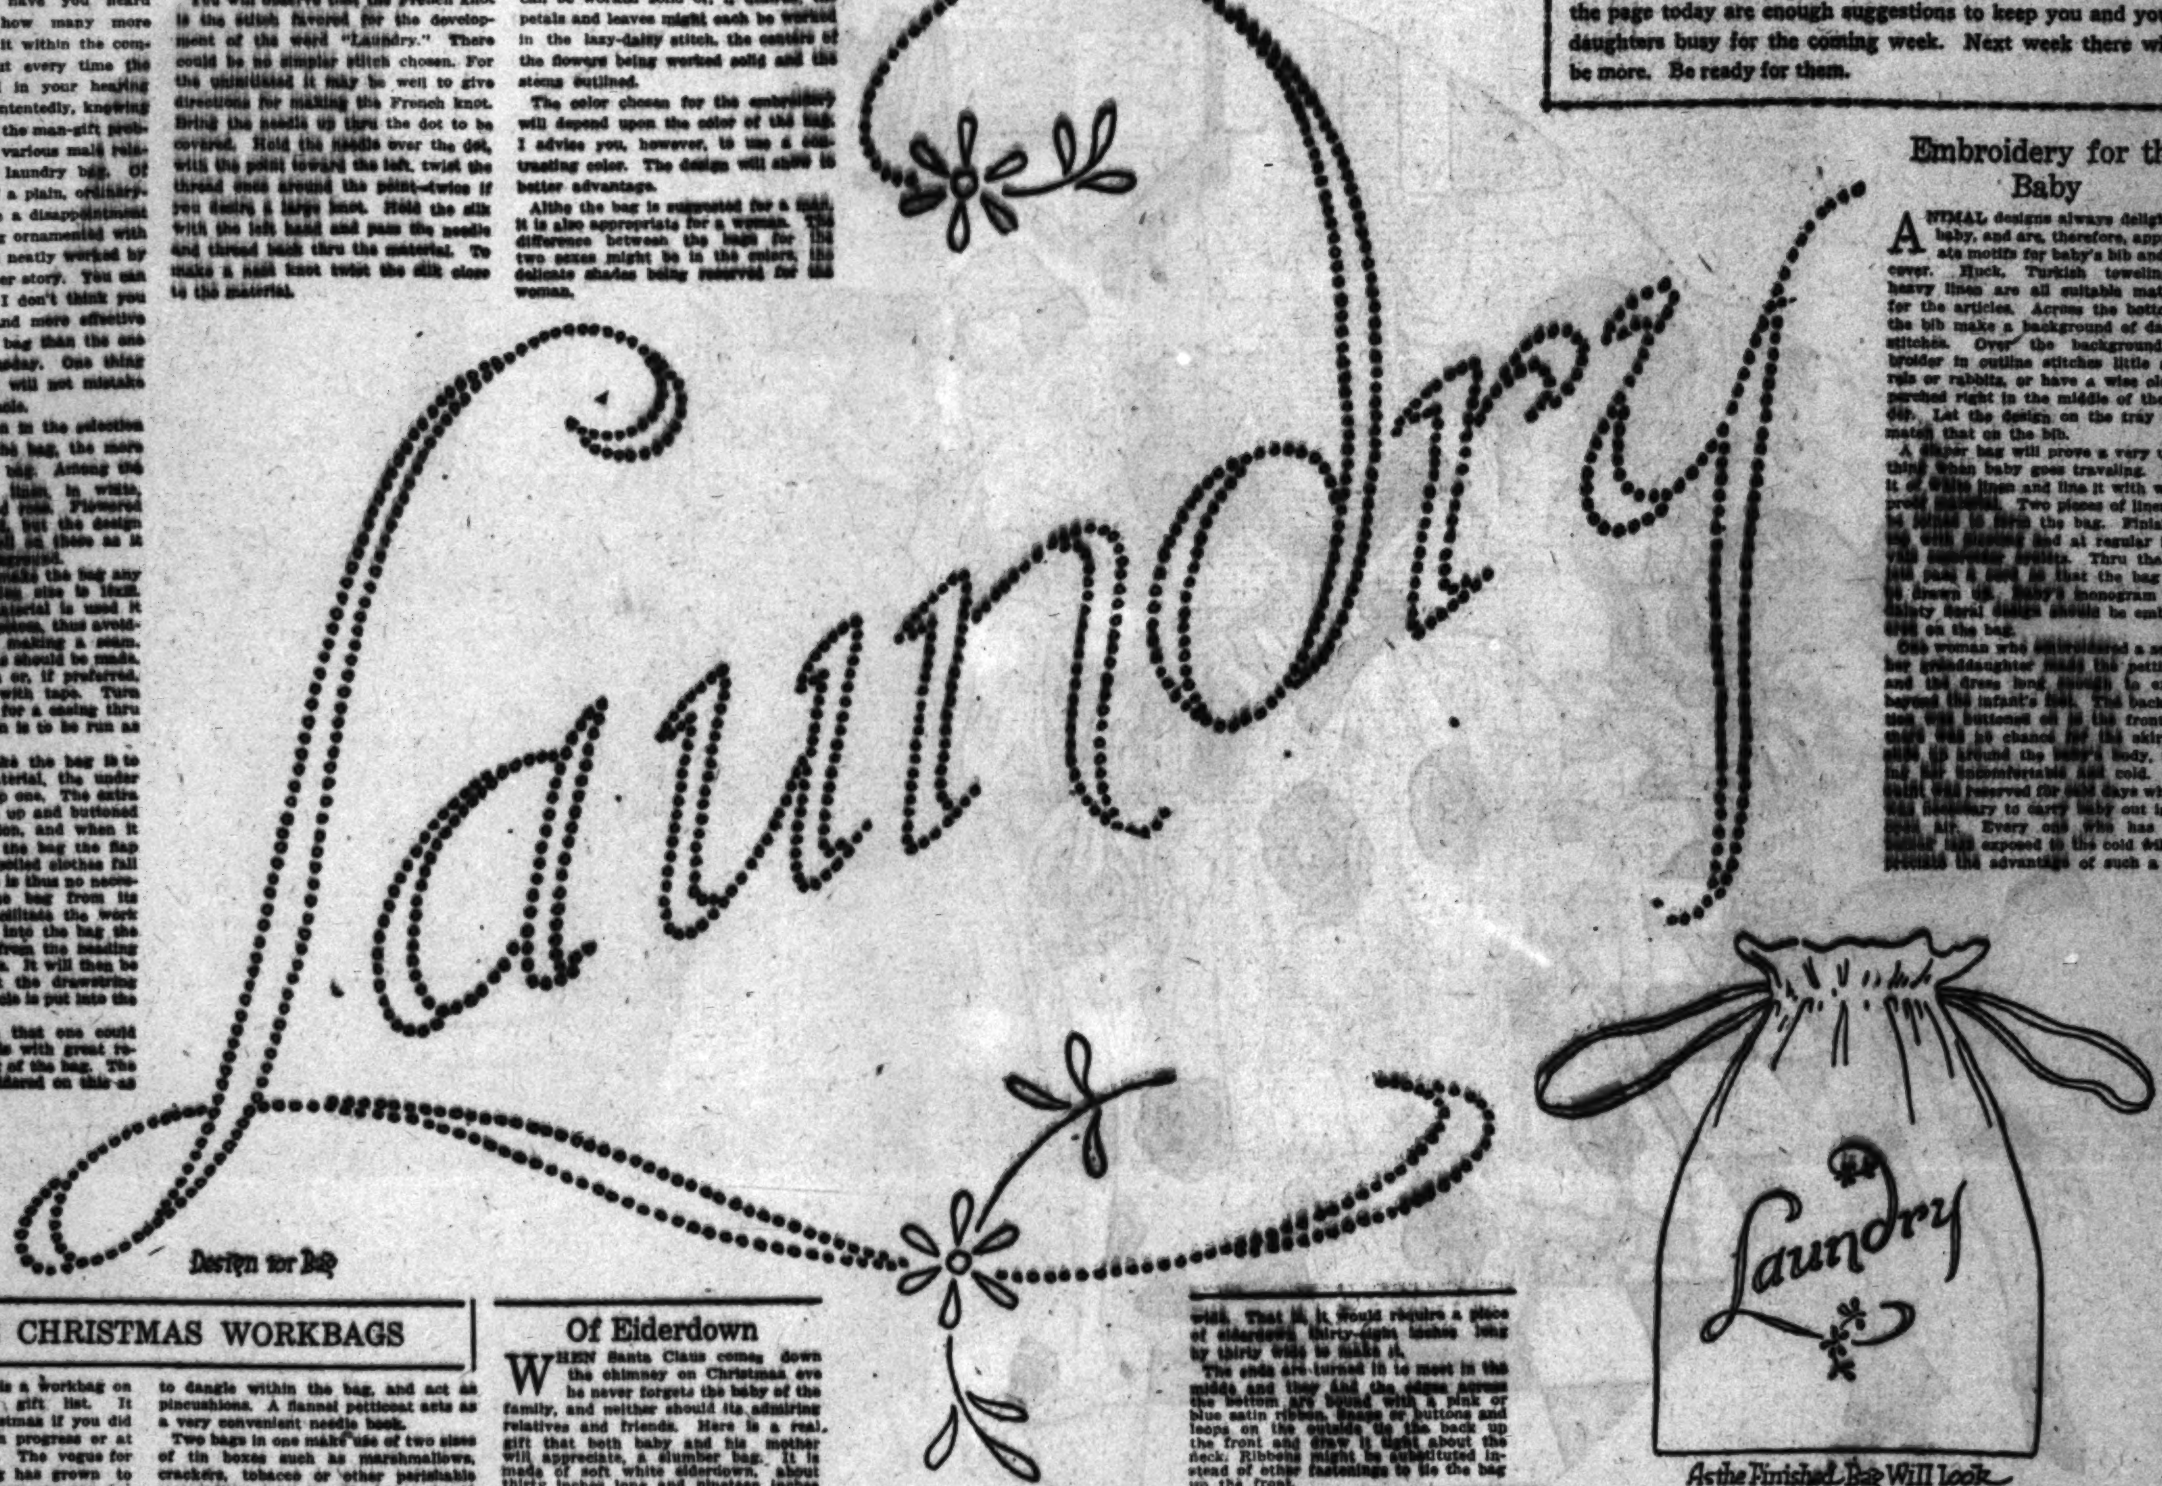
IT WON'T be long now before Christmas is here, so take the tip and get to work if you intend making personal gifts, which, after all, are always of greater value than the ready-made ones, especially if the homemade articles are useful. On the page today are enough suggestions to keep you and your daughters busy for the coming week. Next week there will be more. Be ready for them.

Embroidery for the Baby

ANIMAL designs always delight the baby, and are, therefore, appropriate motifs for baby's bib and tray cover. Huck, Turkish toweling or heavy linen are all suitable materials for the articles. Across the bottom of the bib make a background of darning stitches. Over the background embroider in outline stitches little squirrels or rabbits, or have a wise old owl perched right in the middle of the border. Let the design on the tray cover match that on the bib.

A diaper bag will prove a very useful thing when baby goes traveling. Make it of white linen and line it with waterproof material. Two pieces of linen can be joined to form the bag. Finish the top with scalloping and at regular intervals embroider eyelets. Thru the eyelets pass a cord so that the bag may be drawn up. Baby's monogram or a dainty floral design should be embroidered on the bag.

One woman who embroidered a set for her granddaughter made the petticoats and the dress long enough to extend beyond the infant's feet. The back section was buttoned on to the front and there was no chance for the skirts to slide up around the baby's body, making her uncomfortable and cold. This outfit was reserved for cold days when it was necessary to carry baby out in the open air. Every one who has seen babies' legs exposed to the cold will appreciate the advantage of such a set.



Design for Bag

As the Finished Bag Will Look

THREE CHRISTMAS WORKBAGS

COURSE there is a workbag on r Christmas gift list. It n't be Christmas if you did e a workbag in progress or at contemplation. The vogue for and crocheting has grown to extent that every one can use y workbags as come her way, t be afraid to add several new your list of makable gifts.

is a small bag which is as pleasis simple to make. The requireare a piece of ribbon to go around of the bag and a ball of cro or silk to add a bottom and mesh to the ribbon. The is gathered into a made tassel cotton and the top is gathered cords made from the cotton and in tassels or crocheted balls. The of this bag is that it gives the of a crocheted bag without so much time to make, as the away with a lot of the crok. Of course, the wider the the less crochet.

is another workbag which is this season, and that is the g doll. She has a bisque head , but her voluminous skirts are on a capacious workbag of ties up with ribbon around lady's waist. She is attached one side of the bag, and her legs, if she has any, are allowed to dangle within the bag, and act as pincushions. A flannel petticoat acts as a very convenient needle book.

Two bags in one make use of two sizes of tin boxes such as marshmallows, crackers, tobacco or other perishable commodities come in. The boxes should be shallow, the larger one at least eight inches in diameter and the smaller one three or four. Air the boxes well and give them a coat of white enamel, allowing them to air again until the smell of paint has disappeared. Then from three-eighths of a yard of yard-wide cretonne cut a disk to fit the bottom of the larger box and to it sew with a French seam a strip of nine inches in which you have turned a hem and casting at the top. Join the ends of this strip in a French seam also. Slip the tin box (without a cover) into this bag and run colored tapes or ribbons thru the casings. Repeat the process with the smaller box, and you will have two practical bags, the smaller one to be contained in the larger one, to hold small work like tatting or just thimble, needles, thread, etc. The tin boxes can be pierced around the edge occasionally with an awl so that they can be tacked into the bags, but this is not absolutely necessary. When the cretonne is soiled it can be removed in a jiffy, laundered, and the box bottoms replaced to make two firm comfortable bags.

The Little Gift

you beginning to feel desperate t that long Christmas list of ? package of mending tissue and inclose it in an envelope gayly decorated with stenciled designs suggesting mending day. It will make a thoughtful gift for man or maid.

Imagine the joy of some little one when he or she opens a box tied with gay ribbons to find a ball of wool with directions to unwind it and put together what would be found therein. You can put one of these gifts together by cutting from a magazine some bright picture interesting to a youngster, pasting it first on linen and then on a heavy cardboard, and cutting it up into a jig-saw puzzle. Wind the pieces in the wool and put the ball in an attractive box.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the design before you to any material.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen thru the goods. If one-half of the design only is given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric.

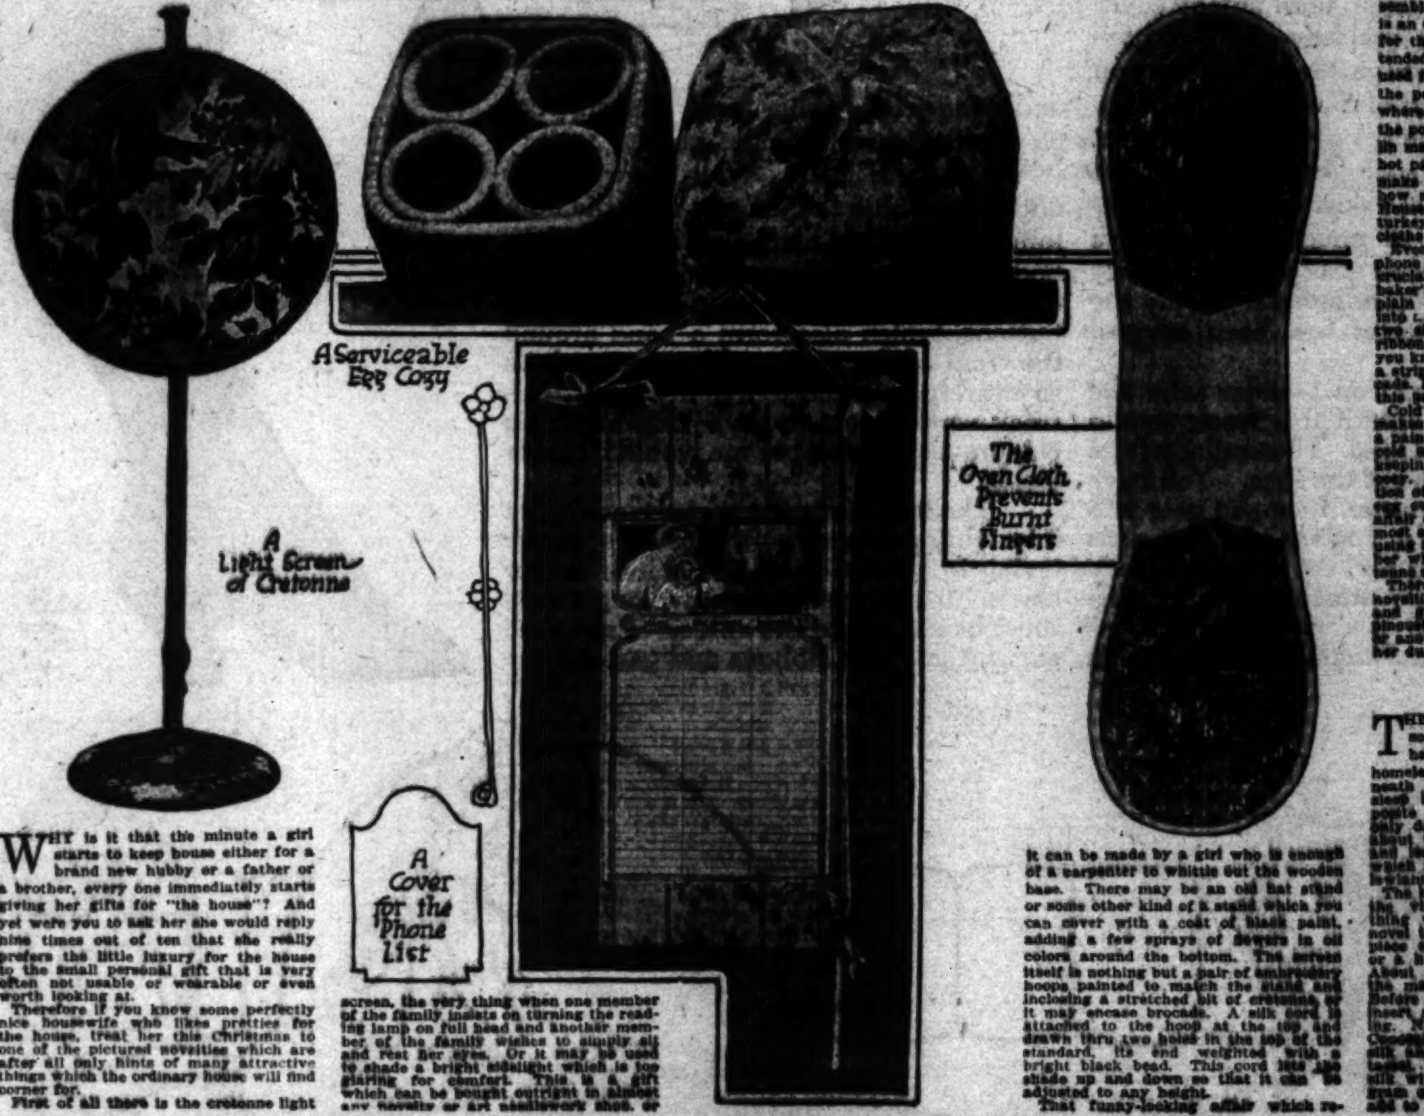
If you have carbon paper you should place the sheet between the fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked.

Of Eiderdown

WHEN Santa Claus comes down the chimney on Christmas eve he never forgets the baby of the family, and neither should its admiring relatives and friends. Here is a real gift that both baby and his mother will appreciate, a slumber bag. It is made of soft white eiderdown, about thirty inches long and nineteen inches wide. That is, it would require a piece of eiderdown thirty-eight inches long by thirty wide to make it.

The ends are turned in to meet in the middle and they and the edges across the bottom are bound with a pink or blue satin ribbon. Snaps or buttons and loops on the outside tie the back up the front and draw it tight about the neck. Ribbons might be substituted instead of other fastenings to tie the bag up the front.

MRS. HOUSEWIFE WILL LIKE THESE GIFTS



A Light Screen of Cretonne

A Serviceable Egg Cozy

A Cover for the Phone List

The Oven Cloth Prevents Burnt Fingers

WHY is it that the minute a girl starts to keep house either for a brand new hubby or a father or a brother, every one immediately starts giving her gifts for "the house"? And yet were you to ask her she would reply nine times out of ten that she really prefers the little luxury for the house to the small personal gift that is very often not usable or wearable or even worth looking at.

Therefore if you know some perfectly nice housewife who likes pretties for the house, treat her this Christmas to one of the pictured novelties which are after all only hints of many attractive things which the ordinary house will find corner for.

First of all there is the cretonne light screen, the very thing when one member of the family insists on turning the reading lamp on full head and another member of the family wishes to simply sit and rest her eyes. Or it may be used to shade a bright sidelight which is too glaring for comfort. This is a gift which can be bought outright in almost any novelty or art needlework shop, or it can be made by a girl who is enough of a carpenter to whittle out the wooden base. There may be an old hat stand or some other kind of a stand which you can cover with a coat of black paint, adding a few sprays of flowers in oil colors around the bottom. The screen itself is nothing but a pair of embroidery hoops painted to match the stand and inclosing a stretched bit of cretonne, or it may encase brocade. A silk cord is attached to the hoop at the top and drawn thru two holes in the top of the standard, its end weighted with a bright black bead. This cord lets the shade up and down so that it can be adjusted to any height.

That funny-looking affair which resembles a pair of uninflated water wings is an oven cloth. No more burnt fingers for the friend for whom this gift is intended. Heavy unbleached muslin is used for it with bright cretonne to make the pockets in each end. At the ends where the hands are to be slipped into the pockets a thick padding of the muslin makes the cover a protection against hot pans. A thin sheet of asbestos will make this more practical yet. Think in how much better frame of mind Mrs. Housewife will attack the Christmas turkey if she has one of these gift oven cloths over her hands.

Every family has a few "regular" phone numbers which escape the mind at crucial moments. Put the butcher's and baker's and doctor's phone numbers on a plain telephone pad and slip this pad into a strip of ribbon sewed up to make two shallow pockets at each end. If ribbon is too dainty for the corner where you know the house telephone to be, use a strip of cretonne, printed linen or brocade. Don't forget to hang a pencil with this pad.

Cold eggs! Ugh! the very thought makes one shudder. And yet how often a painstaking hostess is forced to serve cold eggs because she has no way of keeping them warm. Give her an egg cozy. The one pictured has a foundation of a straw basket with four straw egg cups. The cover is a well-padded affair of cretonne. One could utilize almost any sort of covered box or basket, using small china egg cups in any number which would fit the box. The cretonne cover would remain the same.

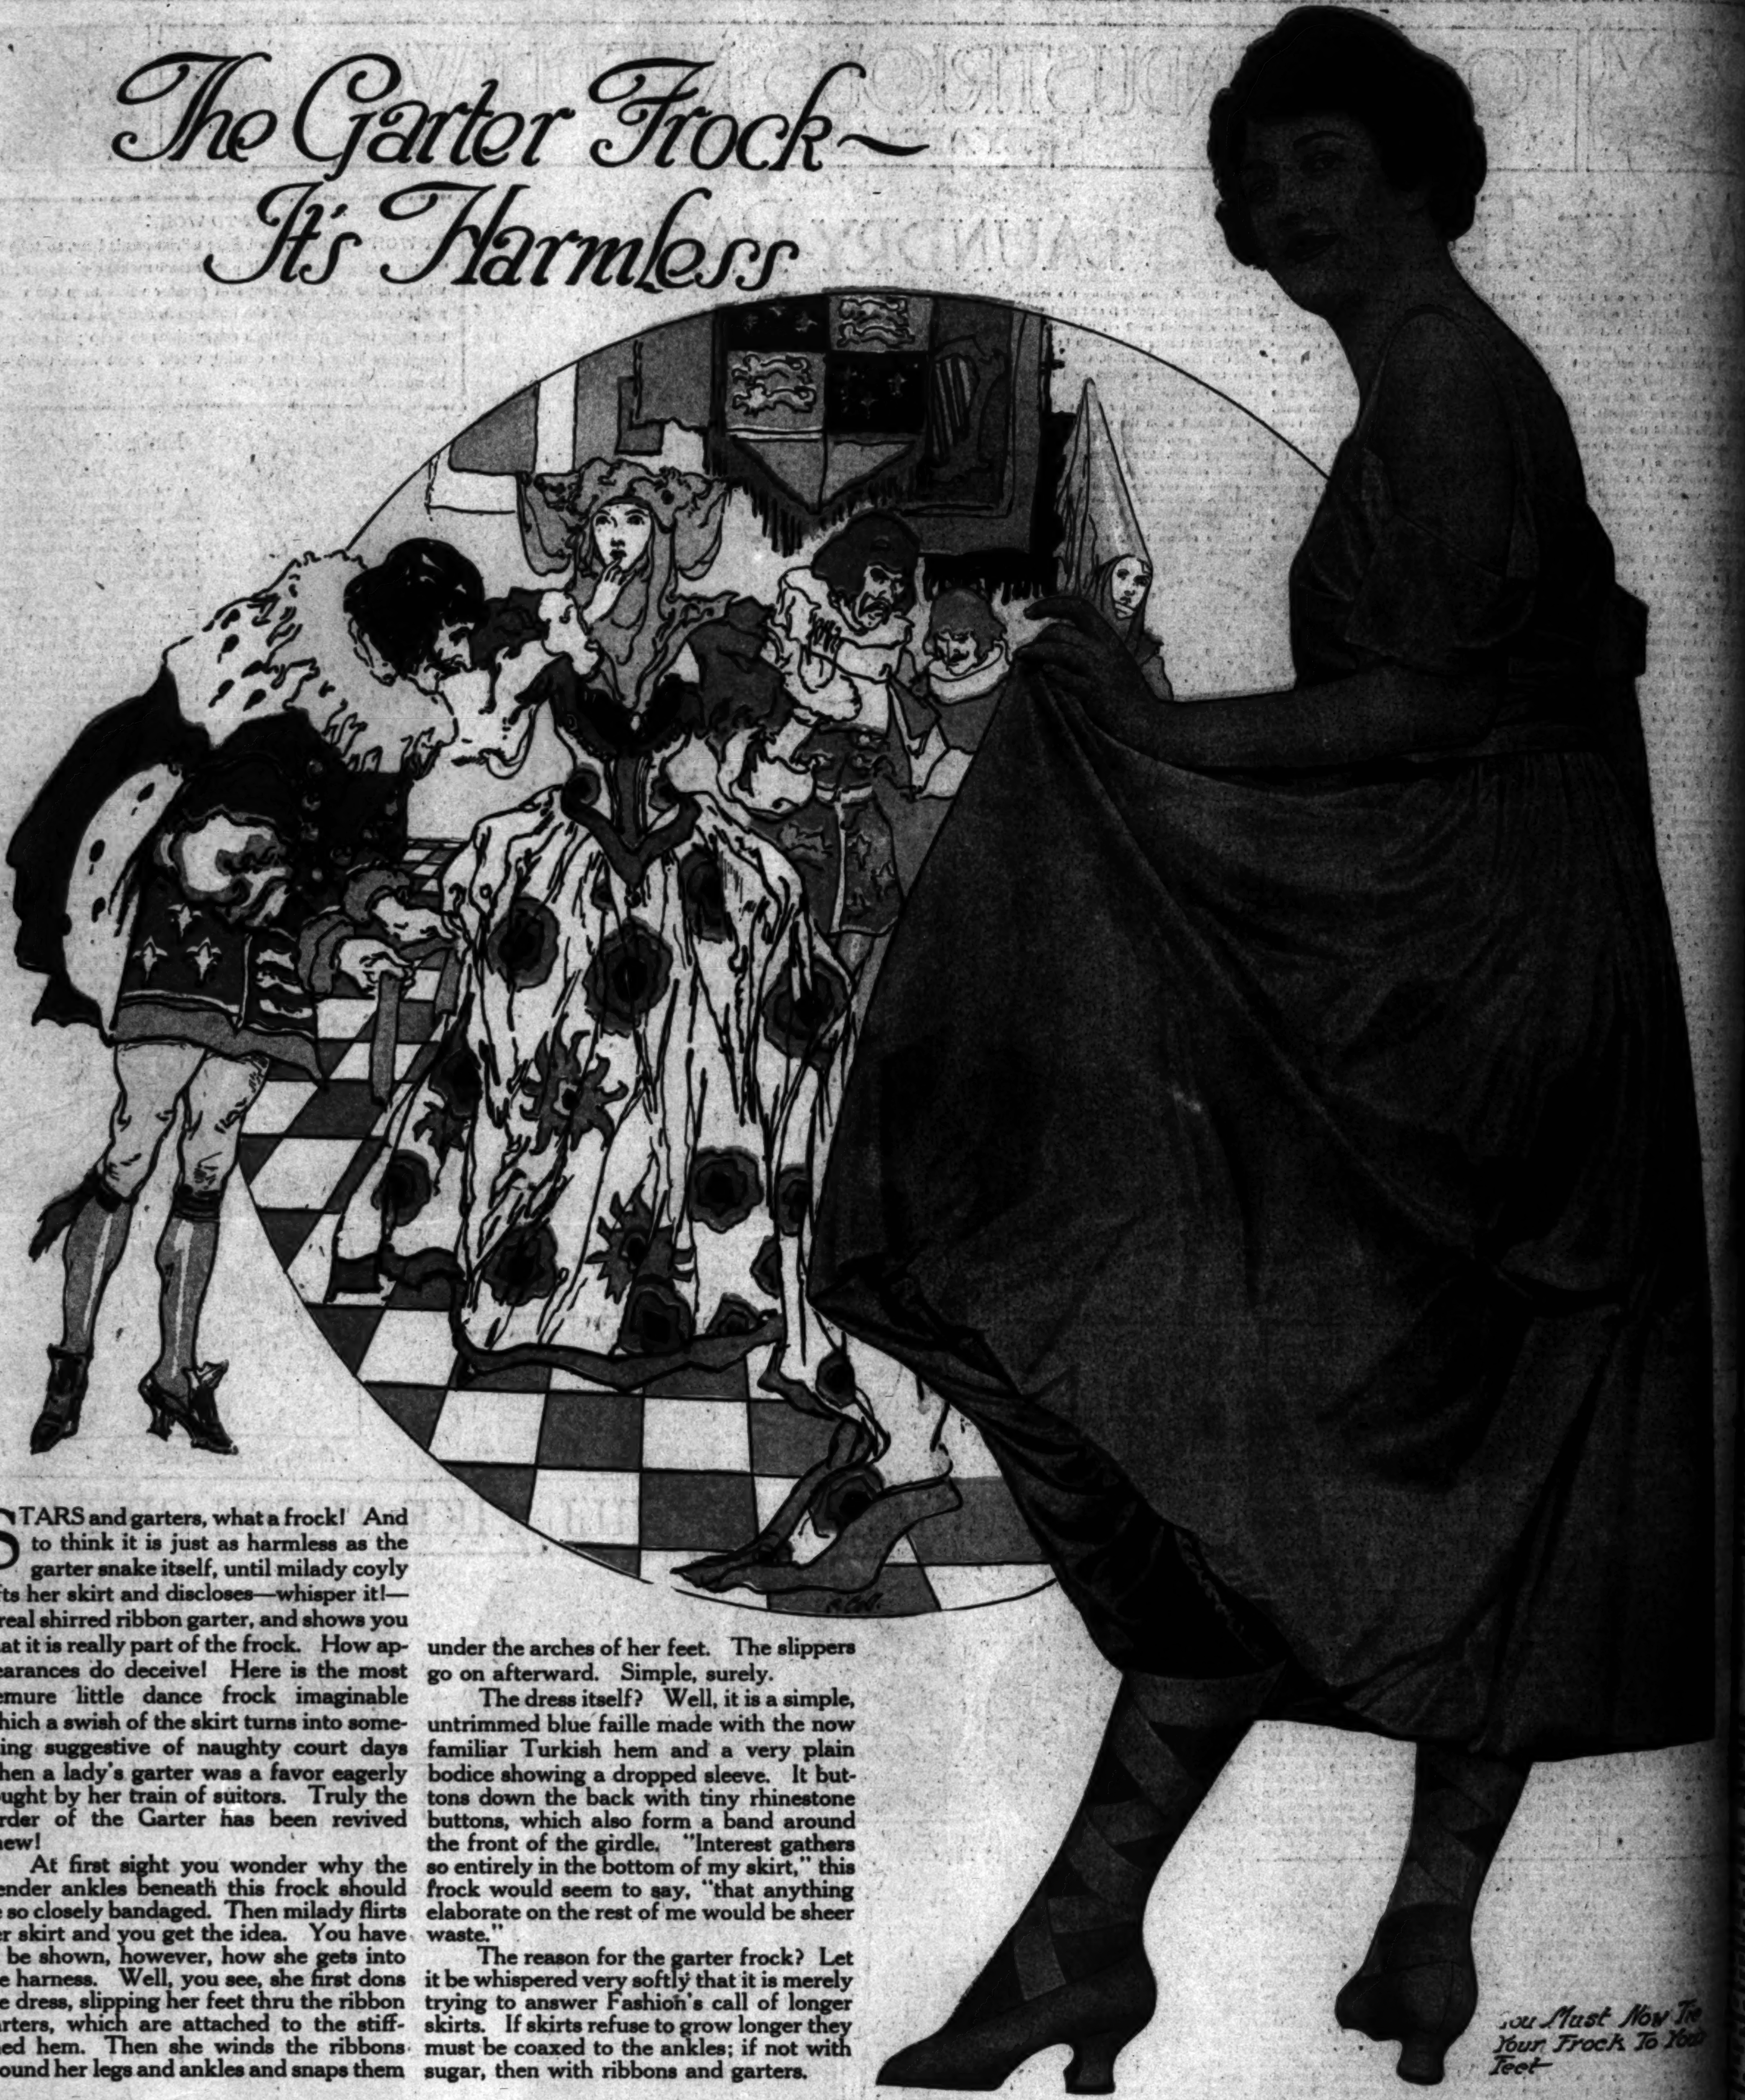
There, with four such very useful novelties before you, surely you won't go and give your housekeeping friend a pincushion of which she has a dozen, or another china vase which will add to her dusting task every week.

A Bag Pillow

THE moving pictures have shown some pathetic scenes where the heroine, an orphan child, poor and homeless, gathers a bundle of hay beneath her head and lies down for a sleep in the fresh air. Just the opposite picture might be shown of an only daughter surrounded by luxury about to curl up on her chaise longue and lean her head against a silk bag which is one of the latest things in pillowland.

The bag pillow is a novelty which has the virtue of being practical—something which cannot be said of every novel thing. To make such a pillow, a piece of silk about two yards square or a huge circle of silk can be used. About two inches in from the edge of the material run a gathering thread. Before drawing the material together insert a filler which will fit the covering. Now pull on the gathering thread. Conceal the opening with two tabs of silk and weight each tab with a silk tassel. Velvet could be used in place of silk with very good results. A monogram embroidered on the pillow would add to its value.

The Garter Frock— It's Harmless



You Must Now Tie Your Frock To Your Feet

STARS and garters, what a frock! And to think it is just as harmless as the garter snake itself, until milady coyly lifts her skirt and discloses—whisper it!—a real shirred ribbon garter, and shows you that it is really part of the frock. How appearances do deceive! Here is the most demure little dance frock imaginable which a swish of the skirt turns into something suggestive of naughty court days when a lady's garter was a favor eagerly sought by her train of suitors. Truly the Order of the Garter has been revived anew!

At first sight you wonder why the slender ankles beneath this frock should be so closely bandaged. Then milady flirts her skirt and you get the idea. You have to be shown, however, how she gets into the harness. Well, you see, she first dons the dress, slipping her feet thru the ribbon garters, which are attached to the stiffened hem. Then she winds the ribbons around her legs and ankles and snaps them under the arches of her feet. The slippers go on afterward. Simple, surely.

The dress itself? Well, it is a simple, untrimmed blue faille made with the now familiar Turkish hem and a very plain bodice showing a dropped sleeve. It buttons down the back with tiny rhinestone buttons, which also form a band around the front of the girdle. "Interest gathers so entirely in the bottom of my skirt," this frock would seem to say, "that anything elaborate on the rest of me would be sheer waste."

The reason for the garter frock? Let it be whispered very softly that it is merely trying to answer Fashion's call of longer skirts. If skirts refuse to grow longer they must be coaxed to the ankles; if not with sugar, then with ribbons and garters.
